Town Hall Project Fails To Get Town Meeting Approval

By GEORGE DERRINGER

Plans for a centennial project to renovate the interior and exterior of the Winchester Town Hall fell two votes short of Town Meeting approval Monday night.

The proposal won the support of 65.7 percent of voters, but was two votes shy of the two-thirds majority needed for a project to be funded through a bond issue. Estimated cost of the complete project is $4.72 million.

Town Meeting members spent more than two hours on the proposal, easily defeating an amendment to limit the project to exterior renovations. Ironically, the amendment was defeated 99-48, more than a two-thirds margin.

The final vote was 96-50 in favor of the complete project, two votes short of two-thirds. There is a total of 192 Town Meeting members but 46 either did not vote or were not present Monday, the first night of the spring Town Meeting.

Proponents of the project argued repeatedly that the entire project, interior and exterior, should be completed together. They said their plan was both "more practical and more cost efficient."

Nobody spoke against repairs to the exterior, particularly the bell tower, but several speakers criticized the combined interior-exterior project.

They said interior plans were not specific enough, the committee which devised the project was not given specific authority at a previous Town Meeting, and bids should be in hand before Town Meeting is asked to approve a project.

"The Town Hall Advisory Committee will meet again at 4:30 p.m. Thursday to discuss the result," Town Manager Chad Maurer said Tuesday. The committee has met about 40 times in the past eight months.

Maurer said he would recommend that the committee ask for reconsideration and present several options.

"I'd recommend that the committee try again to explain the full project. That's what committee members know and understand, the intricacies of melding the interior and exterior projects," he said.

Maurer noted that a majority of Town Meeting members voted in favor of the full project and added,

"Everybody in that room wanted to do something with the Town Hall. And the majority agreed that the comprehensive approach is most cost-effective and most practical."

Unless the Town Hall article is reconsidered, however, no funds will be available for any part of the project.

Maurer disagreed with the comments of some speakers about the participation of town employees in the renovation plan.

"One strength of the committee was its insistence on meeting with department heads and making the ar-

Who's Who On Committee

Members of the Town Hall Advisory Committee, appointed last summer by selectmen first to study the needed exterior repairs and later asked to make recommendations about the interior, bring varied backgrounds to their task.

Daniel T. Chane, chairman of the committee, has an extensive background in both visual arts and architecture. He worked three years at the Boston Architectural Center and also at Harvard University, designing architectural models for industry.

Marcia Saltmarsh, an insurance broker, is involved with many civic organizations including the Seniors Association and the Enka Society. She has been the committee's contact with civic groups that might use an improved Town Hall Auditorium, Chane said.

Harry Chelalo is no stranger to town government. He has been a selectman, a finance committee member and a Town Meeting member for many years. A plumber by trade, Chelalo is familiar with all technical aspects of the Town Hall plumbing, heating and electrical systems.

Charles Briwa, an ex-officio member of the committee because he is not a Winchester resident, is the director of engineering services at Winchester Hospital. He has brought knowledge of engineering, design and bidding to the committee.

George Whitten is a well-known contractor. Susan Keats is active in historical organizations and represents "the historical community," as she often phrases her role.

Judie Muggia and Mark Lombardi are members of the Board of Selectmen.

All members of the committee are volunteers who have met at 4:30 p.m. each Thursday in the Town Hall since September. All of their meetings, as required by state law, are open to the public.

Town Manager Chad Maurer, who is ultimately responsible to oversee the project according to the Winchester Town Charter, also has extensive background in construction projects.

Before coming to Winchester, he was town manager five years in Mansfield, where he oversaw construction of a $30 million wastewater treatment project and its adjacent landfill, and a $6 million water system improvement project, including construction of new mains and water wells.

He was also Mansfield's planning director for 15 years before becoming town manager.

chitect meet with department heads," he said.

Maurer began Monday night's discussion, outlining the project's history and declaring that an "analysis of exterior work dictates interior renovation." As an example, he said fire escapes can only be removed from the outside if interior renovations provide two exits from every room in the Town Hall.

"The building is a treasure," architect Bill Rowe declared. "But it has suffered a series of unfortunate, though necessary at the time, modifications over the years."

John Looney offered the first objection. He pointed out that the 1985 May Town Meeting voted to raise $10,000 "to be expended under direction of the Public Works Director for the purpose of engaging engineering services to prepare plans and specifications in order to secure bids for repairs to the exterior of the Town Hall."

Looney said the advisory committee "has exceeded the scope charted for it in Town Meeting last year" by including interior renovations and spending money for interior plans.

Maurer said nearly $32,000 had been spent on plans, including $22,000 for interior work. The Town Manager is the direct supervisor of the DPW director, he said.

The advisory committee, which was appointed by selectmen, began looking at the interior after selectmen charged it to do so. Selectmen made their decision after receiving an earlier report by DiNisco Associates, he said.

Funds for interior renovation engineering came from the municipal buildings account, Maurer said.

Eric Bradley, chairman of the finance committee, said his group agreed that interior and exterior renovations should be done together to save money. He urged a favorable vote, noting current low interest rates, potential for rental income from the renovated building, and potential costs that could result from the structure current code violations regarding fire and other hazards, should someone be injured.

Daniel Kenney, chairman of the planning board, spoke against interior renovation plans. He said actual bids should be brought to a later Town Meeting.

Kenney proposed an amendment to issue bonds for $1.6 million, intending to renovate the exterior (despite a higher cost) and provide funds for engineering of interior renovations later.

Kenney criticized the current plans first for being "only sketchy" and later said he was "concerned the

Residents, Haulers Irrate: Call For Equality In Collection

By MAUREEN QUINLAN

Angry residents and residential trash haulers took center stage Monday night at a public hearing.

The hearing sparked heated talk among residents who don't want to be penalized with a transfer station user fee because they don't haul their own trash.

At the outset, Board of Selectmen Chairman Wade Welch emphasized, "We're going to discuss and listen tonight, it is not my intention to vote."

At a recent selectmen's meeting, Director of the Department of Public Works Dominic Serratore proposed to raise the tipping fee for commercial haulers (residential rubbish haulers) from $1 or less per ton to $33 per ton.

By raising the residential hauler fee, residents who have their garbage picked up would likely have to pay more.

Residential haulers and residents argued that the cost for dumping should be the same for a resident who dumps his own garbage or contracts a private hauler.

"Why should one-quarter of the town subsidize for the other three-quarters," asked a Surrey rd. resident.

"I would like to propose we keep the thing equitable, I'd like to pay my fair share," he said.

One of the reasons for the price hike, Serratore said, is the increased out-of-town dumping problem.

Residential hauler John Edward Airey questioned whether 22 percent of the refuse is attributable to out-of-town trash.

Airey, against the pay increase, suggested a more effective system be set up at the transfer station to control trucks and cars that come in.

A former chairman of the selectmen, Michael Saraco, voiced his concerns.

"If you initiate this fee it's the consumer that's going to pay," he said.

Saraco said all residents should be charged the same, inclusive in the tax rate.

"Everyone generates garbage from the newborn baby with the disposable diaper to the elderly person who uses a Kleenex," he said.

"I'm begging this board to leave this where it is. It needs more study."

"Leave the transfer station and rubbish on the tax base. It's a service. (Please see TRASH, page 18)

Housing Plans To Be Topic Of Town Forum Wednesday

By GEORGE DERRINGER

Low- and moderate-income housing proposals of the Winchester Housing Authority, an issue of controversy for some time, will get a thorough airing at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, May 7.

The Housing Authority will sponsor the multi-board forum with members of the planning board and the board of selectmen also present at the hearing, scheduled at the Housing Authority office at 16 Westley st.

Members of all three boards are under pressure from the state to provide seven units of Section 705 housing for families within Winchester. The town agreed in 1982 to provide such housing but state reimbursement for each unit would be only $78,000, generally less than the land itself.

In an attempt to comply with the state mandate, Housing Authority members propose using several "scattered sites" already owned by governmental units for the housing.

But, as several Authority members express the situation, "everyone says they favor housing but not in their neighborhood."

To provide an understanding of the state's point of view, Rep. Sherman Saltmarsh and Sen. Richard Kraus will also attend the May 7 forum.

Several articles on the warrant for the Town Meeting now underway deal with Housing Authority proposals. Monday night, Town Meeting members agreed not to consider any of those articles until after the May 7 forum.

Two articles dealing with a portion of the abandoned Woburn Loop railroad bed appear headed for defeat at the Town Meeting since they received unfavorable recommendations from both selectmen and finance committee members.

Using the sites off Cross st. for housing "could negatively impact potential revenues from the sale of the Woburn Loop," the finance committee said.

Two other articles deal with part of the Ambrose School property at High and Cambridge streets. The school committee voted against declaring the parcel "surplus" last week and the site will likely be removed from consideration.

Remaining is a proposal for one single-family home in a portion of what is now Mullen Park at Ridge st. and Lockland rd., a proposal for one two-family "duplex" on land owned by the Housing Authority near the Mary Murphy Apartments on Palmer st., and a site between Hemingway and Canal streets, where a two-family "duplex" is also proposed.

Two other sites also under consideration are owned by the state and would require state action. They are the former Girl Scout camp on South Border rd. in the Middlesex Fells Reservation and a site on Fenwick rd. just in from the intersection with Bacon st. Each of these sites could accommodate a single two-family residence.

During his report to the opening of the annual Town Meeting Monday night, Wade Welch, chairman of the selectmen, said his board is "continuing to negotiate with developers to find housing opportunities."

Welch also said he would recommend that the town "take another look at the option of acquiring existing housing stock" for the Section 705 program.

He said action on Articles 24 and 30, dealing with using a part of the Woburn Loop for housing, should be "indefinitely postponed," which is town meeting jargon for killing the proposal.

Rail Deadlock Continues

Despite efforts by some legislators who want President Reagan to step in, the commuter rail strike that has reduced service on the Winchester line for nearly two months is continuing.

A strike by maintenance of way workers against Maine Central Railroad operations in Maine spread south to Massachusetts in mid-March, first shutting down commuter rail service and then allowing only rush-hour operations.

Maine Central, like the Boston & Maine Railroad which operates commuter rail service north of Boston, is owned by Guilford Transportation Industries.

Last week, 11 other unions joined the strike and prevented trains from operating at all Friday. A U.S. District Court restraining order forced non-striking unions back to work and rush-hour service has resumed.

Congressman Nick Mavroules (D-Peabody), who represents several North Shore towns affected by the commuter rail strike, has joined with Maine Republican Congressman Jock McKernan to ask the president for action.

The president could force an emergency 30-day cooling off period and convene an emergency mediation board to settle the strike. So far, the Reagan Administration has taken no action, although a presidential assistant assured Mavroules the Department of Transportation "is aware of this situation."

State Rep. Sherman "Whip" Saltmarsh (R-Winchester) has urged that commuter rail operations, now operated by the Boston & Maine under a contract with the MBTA, be taken over and operated directly by the MBTA.

Saltmarsh said MBTA operation of the service would be more efficient and probably cheaper in the long run.

Perritano suspects the three Edwards dr. breaks are related.

Items taken included a $50 radio, a $400 pair of pearl earrings, $300 worth of gold chains and $300 worth of gold charms.

According to the report, the intruder forced in a screen and window in the rear of the home between 7 and 9 p.m.

Intruders broke into a Nathaniel rd. home between 10 p.m. April 26 and 8:30 a.m. April 27, according to a neighbor.

A neighbor told officer James J. Cogan an intruder gained entry by prying open a storm window.

Cogan found several bottles of liquor on the floor and a bottle left in the backyard with a window screen, but it appeared nothing was stolen.

Later that day police were informed of another housebreak on Lockeland rd.

The homeowner told police an intruder stole a small amount of women's costume jewelry from the master bedroom.

Police were unable to determine how the intruder broke in.

The incident occurred between 4:30 p.m. April 25 and 5:30 p.m. April 27.

Wednesday, April 23, police reported another housebreak on Ridge st.

A Ridge st. resident told police the lock was broken off the front door.

Three bedrooms were ransacked and a pillowcase full of jewelry was stolen from the master bedroom.

The homeowner told police the intruder broke in between 11 a.m. and 1:20 p.m. April 23.

Greg Doherty Chosen For Summer Exchange In Japan

Greg Doherty, a junior at Winchester High and the son of Bernard J. and Barbara R. Doherty of Winchester, has been chosen to participate in the Experiment in International Living's Summer Abroad program to Japan this summer.

Summer Abroad opportunities are offered to 23 countries—as diverse as France, Kenya and Japan—with programs fitting a variety of interests. Some programs highlight learning a foreign language; others feature travel or special interest activities such as historical or archaeological studies.

Each participant travels with a small group of students led by a trained leader. Each will attend an orientation session which acquaints members and leader, examines the cultural values of Japan and prepares them for a "homestay" through group discussions, role playing and films. Participants will travel together as a group and live with a "homestay" family in Japan.

"I love new experiences and the idea of going abroad to learn fascinates me," Doherty says. "To be able to experience a culture first-hand is so different than what I'm used to. I hope to take advantage of it by meeting new friends and obtaining lasting memories that I would be proud to share with everyone here in America."

The Experiment in International

Living, founded in 1932, is a nonprofit international education organization.

The Summer Abroad program is designed for highly-motivated young people between the ages of 14 and 22. The Experiment seeks students who are mature, responsible, intelligent and open-minded, people who are adventurous and willing to take some risks in the course of their education. As the primary focus of their Summer Abroad is a "Homestay," they also seek individuals who are looking for more than just a tourist experience overseas.

Recent studies show that students who have had an experience abroad have increased self-confidence, gained a deeper awareness of their own strengths and weaknesses, and heightened their knowledge of how to communicate with other human beings.

According to Doherty, "After the program, I plan to continue studies of foreign cultures, and share my Summer Abroad experience with others."

For more information about the Summer Abroad program or hosting an international student, call 800-451-4465.

Wellesley Club To Host Juniors

The Winchester Wellesley Club invites all interested high school juniors to visit the Wellesley College campus Thursday, May 8.

The day's activities will include lunch with college students, visits to dormitories, a full tour of the campus, and an opportunity for informal questions at the admissions office.

Cars will depart from Winchester High School at 11:15 a.m. following the early release day dismissal and will return about 4 p.m.

Students are asked to sign up in advance at the high school guidance office or call Mrs. Joseph Twitchell, 21 Swan rd. She is the admissions representative of the Winchester Wellesley Club.

Wellesley College is a four year liberal arts college for women, enrolling approximately 2,200 students.

WHS Pops Concert Will Feature 50 Years Of Music

Saturday at 8 p.m. the gymnasium at McCall Junior High School will be transformed into a concert hall as the Winchester High School Concert Band and Stage Band present a Pops concert to help send the band to the Gator Bowl Festival in Jacksonville this December.

Musical director of the band Priscilla Miller has put together a program of music that spans more than half a century. "There is something in this program everyone will enjoy," said Miller. "Even the students have had their input into selecting what we will perform."

There will be show tunes selections from "Annie" and "Carnival." Big band numbers are included as well, with "Harlem Nocturne," "Days of Wine and Roses" and others. Some light concert band pieces, including "Exaltation" and "Invicta," appear on the program, as well as some upbeat music from the 80s by Stevie Wonder and Spyro Gyra.

"I wanted the Band to play one polka. Then I discovered that some band members didn't know what a polka was. So it was down to basics for a while," noted Miller.

Miller said the concert will be very different from performances at the music department's semi-annual concert series. "The students are very excited about this event. They want the town to see a different aspect of the band from the traditional football game shows and parades. We will have a totally different atmosphere," Miller promised.

Miller is not only enthusiastic about the concert but also clearly has something planned as a special surprise. "Let's just say I have some ideas left over I couldn't use at the Thanksgiving Day football game half-time show," she remarked. Miller has a reputation for producing extravaganzas at the traditional football game.

Adapting the format of the BSO, tables will be arranged throughout the hall. Gerry Driscoll and her committee will decorate in pastel shades of spring. Fresh flowers and palm trees, supplied by Mahoney's Rocky Ledge Farms, will complete the festive air.

"Of course the 'Gator' will be featured as well," promised Driscoll.

The price of admission includes refreshments. Eileen Foley said Purity Supreme has agreed to supply refreshments.

Tickets are available at Henderson Stationers, Winchester Jewelers, and at the door.

Judy Wiley, in charge of ticket sales, said she has had several requests for tickets from townspeople who are not band parents. "They know it is important to support our young people in activities like this," said Wiley.

The band is soliciting sponsors for the Pops concert. Sandy Rodgers, overall fundraising chairman, said businesses and individuals who got their contributions in by last Monday will be acknowledged in the program.

"However, we are still looking for additional sponsors for the trip, and we will have other events in the future to acknowledge them," said Rodgers.

The four-day trip to the Festival will include field competition with bands from all across the United States, parade competition, and a massed-band extravaganza at the Gator Bowl football game itself.

"This is not just a holiday trip for the students," says Ms. Miller. "This will be a lot of hard work—practices, competitions, marching—as well as getting to know students from other high schools and seeing what all can be done by the other high school bands." In addition, the band will spend a day at Disney World, performing and marching in the Fantasy Parade.

The Marching Band for the Gator Bowl Festival includes musicians, the Flag Corps, the Rifle Squad, the Cheerleaders, and the Tumblerettes. If everyone goes there will be over 200 students and chaperones involved.

The band has represented Winchester at the Cherry Blossom Festival in Washington, and the Peach Bowl Festival in Atlanta. In each case the band came home with awards and words of praise from chaperones and festival organizers. "No one could ask for better ambassadors for the town of Winchester than these students," remarked John Hackett, advisor for the Flag Corps.

Girls Scouts Plant Arbor Day Tree

In observance of Arbor Day, the Brownies from Troop 1440, Muraco Elementary School, Winchester, participated in a tree planting program.

The program was developed by Massachusetts State Forester Laura Dooley and designed so that two of the requirements for a Dabbler Badge in the World of Outdoors were met.

Dooley spent two afternoons with the girls, telling them about her job as a forester and teaching them about trees. Topics such as food chains, the hydrological cycle, the balance of nature and the importance of trees in the environment were discussed in detail.

She demonstrated how to use several pieces of equipment that are used in her work, and allowed each girl to experiment with them. The girls were shown how to determine a tree's age by the use of an increment borer.

A cross-section of an American Chestnut tree was examined and the tree's annual rings were counted by each girl.

The highlight of the program was for the girls to plant a tree. Under the direction of Wildwood Cemetery Superintendent Harold Moran, the girls planted a flower cherry tree.

Along with the tree the girls "planted" a time capsule with information about themselves and a history of why the tree was planted inside the capsule. Dooley explained proper planting techniques used during the ceremony.

The Arbor Day program concluded with a tree identification game based on using senses other than sight to identify trees.

GOP Plans, Elects Town Committee

A post-convention meeting of the Winchester Republican Town Committee was held recently to hear convention reports and elect new officers.

Chairman H. Rushton Harwood Jr. introduced Daniel Needham Jr., Republican National Committeeman, who discussed the effort to introduce at the convention a late candidate for Governor, Rep. Royall Switzer of Wellesley. He said Switzer is one of the most astute members of the House who "knows parliamentary procedure, understands budgetary matters and has been known to be a tireless worker and fine debater."

Needham said Republicans have an unusually strong slate this year. There will be two contests in the primaries, that of auditor with Minority Leader of the House William Robinson running against Andrew Natsios, and Gregory Hyatt running against Switzer.

Sherman "Whip" Saltmarsh Jr., representative for Winchester and Stoneham, said the House presently has 126 Democrats and 34 Republicans. With three House Republican members running as candidates plus one other who is not seeking reelection, this would leave only 30 Republicans next year in the House unless new members are elected in November.

Saltmarsh has an outstanding roll call record since 1974 with a 99 percent showing record to his credit. During the past decade, more than $25 million have come to his district.

Chairman Harwood thanked outgoing officers and committee members for their work during the past years and he was thanked for his leadership since 1980. The outgoing officers were: Ruth Grainger, vice chairman; Richard A. Duffy, recording secretary; Barbara Pacetti, corresponding secretary, and John Lowe, treasurer. The nominating committee consisted of: Cynthia Barone, chairman; James Beck, Marcia Saltmarsh; Bud Pacetti; and Peggy McCreery; Auditor William Wilde; and publicity leader Cynthia Barone.

New officers are John L. Cannon, chairman; Marcia Saltmarsh, vice chairman; Lucy Cavanaugh, recording secretary; Barbara Pacetti, corresponding secretary, and John Lowe, treasurer.

Committee members chose George Little Jr., Carol Johnson, Ruth Grainger, Charles Preus and Rush Harwood as members of the new nominating committee.

The Committee also sent President Reagan a telegram of support in response to the recent crises in Libya.

Blood Drive Attracts 20 First-time Donors

Thirty-nine donors registered to give blood at the recent Winchester High School bloodmobile.

Congratulations were given to the 20 first-timers: Kyle Bairnsfather, Joseph Barabro, Lisa Britt, Deborah Brown, John Bruno, Louis Frate, Brian Gannon, Chris Gaudet, Nicholas Haber, Lisa Hasson, Donald Hughes, William Hunter, Heather Innes, Brian McCarthy, Douglas Norberg, Jeanne O'Brien, Daphne Pezaris, Michael Picardi, Martha Redding and David Reinhold.

Thanks also went to repeat donors Derek Binding, Patrick Callahan, Carolyn Curry, Maura Dobbins, Adrienne Ehler, Melissa Grigorieff, John Herlihy, Fritz Howard, Alexandra Levin, Lynn Matusueda, William McCarter, Michael McKnight, Sandra Moore, Nord Nagle, Scott Olivieri, David O'Reilly, Ronald Purdy, Lucy Shawcross and Christopher Welch.

Florence Gosselin and Rose

Palonen, Volunteer Registered Nurses, helped take medical histories. American Red Cross volunteers Ann Baehr, June Cannon, Dianna Donnellan and Leona Poole assisted in the canteen area.

"Jerome Berdulis and students from his classes are to be commended for their efforts in recruitment of donors and manning the bloodmobile," Red Cross officials said.

The Northeast Regional Blood Services thanked students for their support of the blood program and hoped they will continue to donate at community bloodmobiles during the summer. The next blood drive for which they are eligible will be Saturday, June 7, at the Sons of Italy.

Second Grade Learns All About Japan

Throughout all the second grades in Winchester the curriculum focus this spring is on the lives of Japanese children.

Second graders are learning how Japanese and American children might be similar or different in their daily activities.

Sue Bokil, a second grade teacher from Muraco School and the coordinator of the town-wide Colonial Day unit, spent three weeks in Japan last summer with teachers from all over the United States under a fellowship from Japan Institute for Social and Economic Affairs.

She lived in Japanese homes, visited schools and museums, and brought home treasures of memories. What Bokil learned, she has shared with other second grade teachers and all of Winchester's second graders.

Winchester's children are learning about Japanese children by comparing and contrasting family relationships, clothes, food, sports and living, working and playing environments.

The Community Schools Association Enrichment Committee will sponsor an "Introduction to Japan" program at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, May 7, in the Winchester High School Social Studies area. Bokil will talk about her trip and the Japanese unit.

REAL ESTATE AND YOU

By Dick Murphy
The Bixby & Porter Co., Realtors

WHO DOES THE REALTOR REPRESENT?

In most residential real estate transactions, the Realtor represents the seller. Does this mean that you should not work with an agent when you look for your next home? Not at all!

Realtors help people sell their homes and help other people find new homes. In this matchmaking process, Realtors have a fiduciary obligation to their sellers, but are also obligated by their code of ethics to treat buyers fairly. They must give you accurate information about the properties they show you, and they're held accountable to buyers by their own Board of Realtors as well as State licensing agencies and the courts.

Perhaps the strongest accountability is in the marketplace. In this business, reputation is crucial, and referrals from past customers are essential for a Realtor to remain in the business! This provides the strongest incentive for Realtors to get you and your family moved into a home that you love at a price you can afford and under conditions that will make you and the seller feel terrific about the transaction.

If there's a move in your future, call the professionals at Bixby & Porter Co., Realtors. Our number is 729-7000, or just drop by our offices at 33 Thompson St., Winchester. We're happy to serve all your real estate needs.

The Jenks Senior Center will observe the day by sponsoring a parade from Manchester Field at noon. From Mystic Valley pky., the parade will turn left on Main st., right on Mt. Vernon st., and to Jenks Center.

Walter L. Dignam will be Seniors Day Chairman. Marchers will include state and town officials, Council on Aging, civic organizations, church groups, Lynch School students and seniors.

The parade will mark the second time within ten years for Winchester seniors to march to Judkins Pond. In 1976, a parade publicized the need for a building to provide social services to seniors. That march was instrumental in raising from private sources the necessary funds to construct the Jenks Center.

Conductor Moritz, a faculty member at the New England Conservatory, will rehearse the group tonight, May 1 and next Thursday, May 8, from 8 to 9:30 p.m. at the center. A final rehearsal will be held at 11 a.m. on May 10 at the center.

HEALTH

New Hospital Machine To Detect Osteoporosis

Early detection of osteoporosis and other bone-loss related diseases is now available at the Winchester Hospital department of nuclear medicine through use of a new bone mineral densitometer.

The densitometer recognizes the "silent disease" of bone loss through a dual-photon absorptiometry method recommended by the American College of Physicians for its low radiation dose, low cost and high sensitivity.

While 25 to 30 percent of skeletal calcium must be lost before osteoporosis can be detected by ordinary x-ray, the densitometer helps speed the diagnosis of metabolic bone disease.

Early diagnosis is important because bone loss can occur for years without being noticed until a spontaneous fracture or other bone injury suddenly happens. Osteoporosis, which causes softening of the bone over a period of years or an increase in the porosity of the bone, is irreversible.

The disease is a result of aging and affects both sexes but is more prevalent in women. Other diseases that can be monitored or diagnosed with the densitometer are bone loss related to drug use and fracture risk sites.

By focusing on the early diagnosis of osteoporosis, physicians can take steps to retard the growth of the disease through dietary measures, such as eating foods rich in calcium, a sensible exercise program and individual lifestyle changes.

Individuals concerned about preventing the disease are encouraged to check with their personal physician about the use of the densitometer at Winchester Hospital as a tool in the fight against bone loss.

Lifeline Program Needs Volunteers

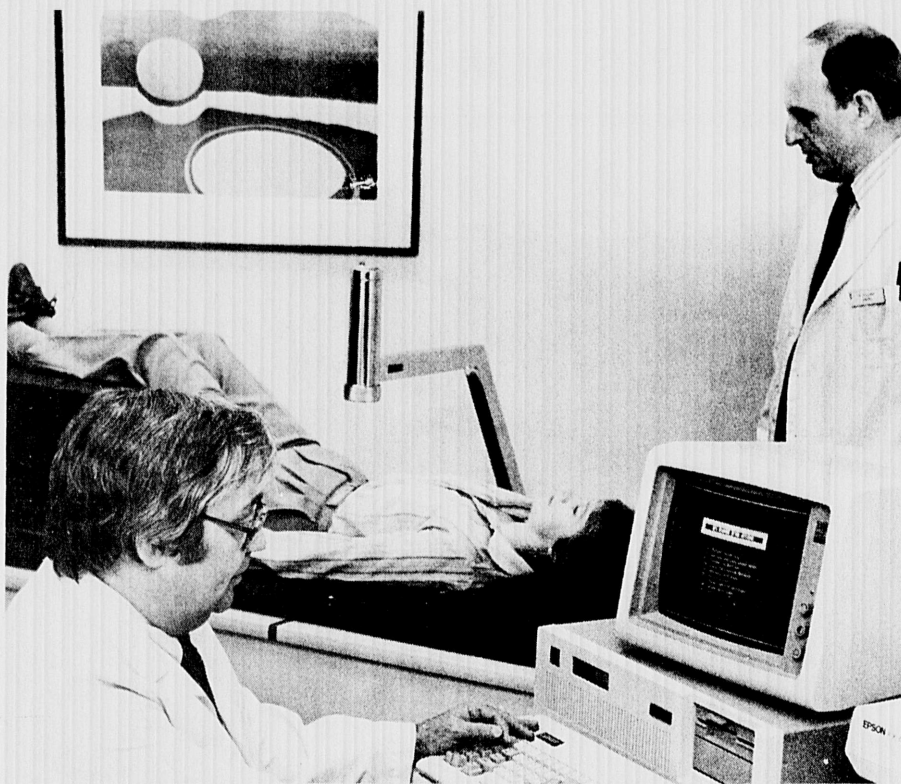

The Winchester Hospital Lifeline program needs volunteers to assist subscribers with the installation and maintenance of the personal emergency service.

Volunteers with the program are responsible for teaching subscribers how to use the Lifeline communicator when the device is first installed. Follow-up monthly calls and home visits are also made by volunteers to check that the Lifeline is operational.

"The Lifeline volunteer is a special kind of person," according to program coordinator Dorothy Roemer. Besides wanting to help elderly and disabled persons at home, the volunteers must have good communication skills and manual dexterity to be able to explain and install the device, she said.

Anyone interested in learning more about the Lifeline program and becoming a Winchester Hospital volunteer of the service should contact the Social Services Department of the hospital at 729-9000, ext. 3104.

The addition of a bone densitometer unit to the nuclear medicine department of Winchester Hospital will help in the early diagnosis of osteoporosis and other bone-loss diseases. Above, a patient relaxes during the screening while Chief Pathologist Dr. John G. Guillemont, right, and Administrative Director for Laboratory Services James H. Kieran await the results.

First Aid For Care Providers

A First Aid for Child Care Providers program has been added to the curriculum of the Community Health Education Department of Choate-Symmes. This new program was developed to meet the needs of child care providers, including day care mothers, nursery school teachers, parents, Brownie leaders and playground supervisors.

First Aid for Child Care Providers meets the American Red Cross three-year certification requirements for Standard Multimedia First Aid. This program meets the Commonwealth's mandate for first aid training for child care providers.

The course is scheduled at the Choate Hospital in Woburn Thursdays, May 8, 15, 22 and 29 from 7 to 9:30 p.m.

Pre-registration is required. For more information and a registration form, call 933-6700, ext. 377.

Hospital Plans Nurses Day

In recognition of National Nurses Day, Winchester Hospital will hold a special "for nurses only" coffee hour from 7 to 9 a.m. May 6, in the hospital library.

Nursing supervisors, head nurses and other management personnel will be on hand to answer questions. An array of home baked goods will also be available.

Interested nurses can listen to "The Nursing Power In The Legislative Process," a discussion on the legal rights and responsibilities of nurses, by Sandra Trainor, R.N., from 2:15 to 3:15 p.m. in the cafeteria. The course offers 0.1 CEU credits.

Other hospital nursing activities featured that day will include visits to the nursing units by Winchester Hospital vice president of nursing services Barbara Piki.

Hospital Offers

Diabetic Screening

The Winchester Hospital Department of Community Education will offer free Diabetic Screening from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. May 8 at the Jenks Senior Center on Skillings rd. in Winchester.

An appointment will be needed for the screening and interested persons should call the center for a scheduled time.

As a follow-up to the screening, or for individuals already diagnosed as diabetic, a program on the nutritional management of the disease will be held May 22 from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m. Preregistration is also required but the program is not limited to seniors.

Anyone wanting more information on either the diabetic workshop or diabetic screening programs can contact the Winchester Hospital community education department, 729-9000, ext. 3006.

The many faces and moods of Bonnie Haggerty, a Winchester woman just signed as a professional model.

Persistence Spells Success

By MAUREEN QUINLAN

Even before 24-year-old Bonnie Haggerty spent $100 for a chic Newbury St. haircut and had her make-up done professionally, she was well on her way to becoming a Boston model.

A life-long Winchester resident, Bonnie has always been told by friends and relatives she was the model type — thin and beautiful.

But Bonnie says modestly, "You don't have to be beautiful to be a model. A good general (facial) outline is all you need."

Bonnie describes a "good general outline" as high cheekbones, nice eyes and a clear complexion. She says the make-up and the right haircut help create the look.

It wasn't until a couple of months ago that Bonnie decided it was time to pursue her dream — to be a fashion model.

With a push from her friends, Bonnie signed up for a weekend with Image Resources at the Sheraton Hotel in Boston. Image Resources is a company that offers a short training program for girls interested in becoming models.

In one short weekend, Bonnie learned how to walk, smile and use the camera to her advantage.

Bonnie recalls the weekend. "I was scared," she said. A few top modeling agencies attended the events that weekend. When Bonnie walked into one room, Candy Ford, owner of the Ford Shoppe Agency of Boston, told her right off. "Get your teeth fixed, your hair cut and lose 10 pounds."

Bonnie said Ford accepted her into the agency on the condition that she adhere to their requests.

"The first thing they suggested was a hair salon on Newbury St. where Candy Ford, owner of the Ford Model Shoppe, has her hair cut," she says. So Bonnie made an appointment.

Three hours and $100 later, Bonnie was beginning to fit the mold Candy Ford was looking for.

"He (the hair stylist) must have spent three hours with me, but still, I've never had to pay that much money," she said.

Bonnie is comfortable in front of the camera although she tells her visitor, "I'm actually very camera shy."

Bonnie gives advice to young girls interested in pursuing what she calls a difficult, self-disciplined career.

"Learn to look at yourself in the mirror and get to know yourself in front of the mirror — then when you begin shooting, it will all be natural because you'll be comfortable with yourself," she says.

A graduate of Northeast Vocational School, Bonnie pursued accounting during her four years there. After graduation, Bonnie said although she was interested in math she couldn't make a career out of it.

"I don't like to sit behind a desk," she said.

For the past two years she has been working as a medical assistant for Dr. Stuart G. Pesin of Shore Rd. But since she signed with the modeling company, Bonnie said she had to give her notice.

"You have to be on call all hours of the day to get work and to get recognized," Bonnie said.

Bonnie has managed to keep her part-time job at the Winchester Nursing Home. She takes patients' blood every morning from 7 to 9.

What intrigues Bonnie about the world of modeling? A lot of things, but she looks forward to traveling in her job in the future.

Bonnie is walking into modeling with open eyes, she says. "I know it takes a lot of persistence to be successful in modeling," says Bonnie matter-of-factly and she is ready to give it her all.

Senior Helen Murphy and student Billy Crockett enjoy a brown bag lunch at Lynch School.

Young And Old 'Brown Bag' It

By MAUREEN QUINLAN

In an effort to bridge the gap, a group of Lynch School youngsters and Jenks Center seniors recently "brown bagged it" in the school's gymnasium.

After two months of pen pal letter writing, students and seniors met each other for the first time for a "no frills" brown bag lunch.

In early February Lynch School teachers Victoria Cavicchi and Michael Marino worked together to make the day a success. They matched each student to a senior from the Jenks Center and the pen pal escapade was underway.

Cavicchi said, "There aren't too many occasions in society when seniors can share their thoughts with children and vice versa."

At the lunch, students and seniors exchanged stories and ideas about their lives. After lunch, students took their pen pals on a full-fledged tour of the school.

When the seniors and young people returned to the gym, they broke down into small discussion groups. Students were asked to talk about how they perceived the lives of old people and seniors were asked to express their thoughts about the younger generation.

Prior to the luncheon both youngsters and seniors were asked to fill out questionnaires describing their feelings about each others' generation.

Sample answers varied. For example, a 10-year-old girl said two things that worry her about growing old are not being healthy and having no friends. On the other hand, when she was asked two things she would like about being old, she said she would like having more time to herself and having grandchildren.

Some youngsters said they saw old people as cranky while others said older people like to talk to kids and they understand kids. Of course, the thought of not having to go to school intrigued the kids the most.

Seniors were asked similar questions about the younger generation.

One senior said she was concerned about growing up in today's society, noting the increased number of broken homes and lack of parental guidance.

But on the other hand she praised the broad opportunities for education.

One senior said she liked the fact that kids could be so tolerant of "people who are different."

By the end of the day, children and seniors were smiling ear to ear. The general consensus was that the day helped all to understand each other and work to bridge the gap between them.

Martin Takes A Relaxed Approach

By MAUREEN QUINLAN

Roy Martin is taking a relaxed but positive approach to running his first business.

Martin and his wife Rita are the new owners of Roberts Candies on Main St. and they have already made some notable changes in the store since they opened April 1. Bubble gum cards and penny candy are no longer a part of the inventory.

Roy says he is interested in catering to a specific group in Winchester — adults. He says they haven't changed the layout of the store, but he and his wife have been rearranging and regrouping assortments of chocolates on the various display tables.

"I don't want to compete with the penny candy stores (News Shop and Woolworth's)," he insists.

The last owner appealed to two markets, adults and children. He sold everything from bubble gum baseball cards to the finest chocolates. Martin plans change that.

Martin hopes by segmenting his market, business will prosper. Although he is serious about maintaining a good business, his attitude and approach are carefree.

"We'll play around with it (the new business) for a few years and see what develops," he says casually.

The new owner looks forward to spending his "retirement" in downtown Winchester. "We wanted to do something for ourselves in town. We want to perform a service," he says.

Running a candy store is new to Martin, he says. He has spent most of his life as a public accountant. In the 1970's, while Boston Mayor Kevin White was in office, Martin worked for him in the Office of Justice Administration.

The purpose of this group, Martin says, was to allocate funds to cities and towns across the Commonwealth to provide extracurricular activities for children. He says it was basically an effort to make the streets safer.

His eyes light up as he talks about his career change. "It's a vast change in my life."

The accounting end of the business is second nature for Martin, but he says he needs to brush up on the finer points of marketing and advertising.

The Martins have been living in Winchester for 12 years in "The Locke House" on Cambridge St. Martin says it's one of the oldest homes in Winchester and has a reputation for being haunted. He chuckles. "I don't think it's haunted but my wife does sometimes."

Before moving to Winchester, the Martins lived in Harvard Square, Cambridge.

"It became too hectic about 15 years ago. My wife and I wanted to live a more serene life. That's why we chose Winchester," he says.

As an auditor, Roy traveled from business to business. He recalls how he loved to eat a Hershey chocolate bar everyday. But now that he's surrounded by delectable chocolates, the craving has subsided, he says.

"I have a drawer full of Hershey bars under the counter and I haven't had one since we opened April 1. I thought I'd dive right in. Now candy is just inventory to me," he chuckles.

But still, he insists, a chocolate candy bar everyday is a sure way to a successful diet.

COMMENT

Winchester
Kernels

Spring's arrival and a little landscaping by the crew from Mahoney's has made the rotary in Winchester Center look great.

Steam from hot mulch added to the gloom of the rain last week but Monday's sun made the rotary just another of the places in Winchester that gets better-looking all the time. The parks department is responsible for the rotary beautification, according to folks in the town manager's office.

Good job! Another feather in Winchester's cap.

You may also have noticed men with metal tape measures Monday, apparently surveying the curbs.

That's exactly what they were doing — measuring the curb space to see how many more cars might be parked if the spaces were made a little smaller.

Most cars of the 1980s can get by with a smaller parking space than your 1958 Buick or even your 1979 Ford LTD.

"Dear resident" is the friendly, if somewhat impersonal, greeting received by one recent caller to The Star office from the friendly sump pump inspectors dispatched by the Winchester DPW.

The letter, left at the residence whose owner was not at home, says the DPW wants to help the owner solve his wet basement problem.

Actually, the caller and Star reader said, the inspectors want to see if there's a sump pump illegally hooked to the sewer line.

"Misleading," the caller charged. He can take heart in knowing that the sewer ordinance does indeed make such inspections legal but no enforcement action will take place until the selectmen vote to do so.

Until that point, the DPW arguably just wants to help homeowners solve problems in their basements. Later, however, the town could use data gathered in its "problem identification" program in another way.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Slow Down To Save Animals!

TO THE EDITOR:

Today, when my mother and I came home, we saw something very sad.

We saw a squirrel with its tail flattened, probably by a truck coming down from Stoneham or Reading.

We live on Forest st. and cars and trucks come very fast.

The reason I wrote to you is that I'm sure many people in Winchester care about animals. We should lower speed limits and start an animal hospital for wild animals.

Please put this in The Star and talk to the police department about changing the speed limits. It could save a lot of animals' lives. Thank you.

Tom Ben Gosnell, age 11
Winchester

P.S. I love animals.

Thanks For Restaurants

TO THE EDITOR:

On behalf of the Winchester Youth Center, I express thanks to The Dover Grille, Maximilian's and Lucia's restaurants for their donations of gift certificates. The gift certificates were awarded to the winners of the "Dating Game" event Saturday, April 19, for all high school students.

Your generosity and support of the youth in this community is greatly appreciated and warmly accepted. Thank you again.

Sincerely,

Youth Center Supervisor

By TERRY MAROTTA

There seems to exist, in this world, a real bias against people who rent.

Renters are often considered transients, passers-through — nomads even.

Rent a vacation house for a week and the owners are into you for half the amount again in case you break their picnic table or sit the bottom out of one of their chairs.

Rent an apartment and they're into you for half your annual earnings; they want the first month's rent and the last month's rent and a couple of extra month's rent thrown in for good measure.

It's the same when you stay in a motel. You're a renter there too, of course. That's why they chain the hangers to the closet poles and screw the pictures to the walls.

I stayed in a motel once where the beds were actually bolted to the floor. As if you'd try stuffing a bed into your suitcase and sneaking out with it!

Well it's a pretty silly distinction to make, if you ask me, this one between the owners of the world and the renters.

It's just not fair to assume that the former cares more for his home than the latter does.

Some of the most fastidious people I've met have been renters.

The kind who not only lick the kitchen floor clean once a day but sweep the sidewalks too.

The kind who not only mow the lawn after every shower but line up the local birds each week and give 'em all haircuts.

We were renters for years before we entered into that nefarious pact known as the mortgage agreement.

Our first place was a fourth-floor walk-up on the grungy side of Boston. Trash dreamed and billowed along the gutters out front; a substance closely resembling blood climbed in impressionistic vines and tendrils on the damp walls of its hallways.

But inside, the place was a bower. It was our first home. We painted everything white and tucked wedding china into cabinets that were old before Jane Addams knew the word tenement.

We hung art prints on the walls. We piled oranges in thick pottery bowls and set them on the one windowsill that actually caught a little sun sometimes.

Sure, we rented that place. But we loved it too. It could tell, I think. Now we're owners, supposedly.

The current place we own still creeps and hums, though, with the secrets of its former inhabitants.

Snapshots and bits of cat-hair still waft down from the eaves now and then to remind us of the families who lived here before us — when we two existed on a highly theoretical plane in our grandparents' chromosomes.

We love this place as well. And not more because we own it.

Do you rent your telephone or do you own it outright? Does it matter a whit so long as it does what phones are meant to do when you pick them up and tickle their bellies?

What about your children? Do you own them, or are you just renting them for a while? Seems likelier that they're renting you.

Three people I know rented a room inside me for nine months each. They're renting still, looked at in a certain way, paying in coins of love and the sweet unmindful joy of childhood for the care and feeding we bestow on them.

Does a turtle own his shell or is he renting it?

Do we own this house that we patch and tend so much or are we renters too, in a way?

It's not ours for keeps, after all, but only ours for a while. What we've always hoped is that one day we will be its.

Folks own little in this life, it seems. We're renters, all of us, even the most titled and crowned. Our houses, our children, the old earth itself — they're all rented to us, you might say. They're on loan. And we're at most stewards charged with their care.

Transients, nomads, and passers-through.

BEACON HILL ROLL CALL

The House And Senate, "Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local representatives' votes on 12 additional roll calls from consideration of the fiscal 1987 budget. There were no roll calls in the House or Senate last week.

Oil Costs (H 5600)- House 111-29, rejected an amendment reducing several heating oil accounts by 37 percent.

Amendment supporters said lower fuel prices dictate this reduction which will save money.

Opponents said the accounts have already been appropriately reduced.

A "Yea" vote is for the amendment. A "Nay" vote is against it.

Representative Sherman Saltmarsh voted yes.

Business (H 5600)- House 105-38, rejected an amendment raising the current one percent investment tax credit for businesses to three percent until December 1989.

Amendment supporters said the recent hike to three percent expired last December and argued a new hike will keep businesses in Massachusetts, encourage employment and eventually boost other state revenues.

Opponents said the hike is being considered in a separate bill and claimed the state budget was not the proper vehicle for the hike.

A "Yea" vote is for the amendment. A "Nay" vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

Stabilization Fund (H 5600)- House 79-59, rejected a lengthy amendment making several changes in the stabilization fund provisions of the budget.

Supporters said the amendment would index the state's vanishing exemption to the rate of inflation to make the exemption more meaningful and help the taxpayer. They noted the amendment also makes other key changes including creation of a local aid stabilization fund to protect cities and towns and insure they receive sufficient local aid.

Opponents said the amendment goes too far and argued the Ways and Means version is adequate.

A "Yea" vote is for the amendment. A "Nay" vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

Mental Health (H 5600)- House

84-62, rejected an amendment requiring individual service plans (ISP) to be prepared for persons in mental health facilities and providing that when the person is no longer in need of hospitalization, he or she be discharged and be given treatment and support in an appropriate community setting as described in the ISP.

Amendment supporters said this will help the mentally ill by prohibiting their discharge onto the streets without a proper plan and without appropriate community facilities to take care of them.

Opponents said the amendment could cost $300 million and is not feasible at this time. They noted many other provisions to help the mentally ill are included in the budget.

A "Yea" vote is for the amendment. A "Nay" vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted no.

Rent (H 5600)- House 80-72, rejected a $17.6 million amendment raising the proposed $25 per month rent allowance for Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) recipients living in private housing to $50 per month.

Amendment supporters said this will help thousands of families who live below the poverty line and cannot find public housing.

Opponents said the $25 supplement is helpful and sufficient, noted the budget already offers extensive help to AFDC recipients and claimed another $17 million is excessive.

A "Yea" vote is for the amendment. A "Nay" vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

Legal Assistance (H 5600)- House

91-60, approved an amendment providing $250,000 in funding for the Massachusetts Legal Assistance Corporation. On April 8, the House 73-72, had removed a similar $250,000 provision.

Amendment supporters said the funding will provide legal representation to Massachusetts residents seeking refugee status or political asylum in the U.S.

Opponents said the federal government already offers this service and argued the state should not spend tax money on this.

A "Yea" vote is for the $250,000. A "Nay" vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted no.

Registry (H 5600)- House 126-11, approved an amendment increasing funding for the Registry of Motor Vehicles by $400,000.

Amendment supporters said the hike was necessary and justified to improve the operation of the Registry.

Opponents said the Registry's funding has already been substantially increased in this year's budget.

A "Yea" vote is for the amendment. A "Nay" vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

Elderly (H 5600)- House 136-8, approved an amendment striking a previous House-approved amendment giving a $3000 tax credit to individuals who care for an infirmed person 70 or older in their homes and replacing it with a new amendment giving a $3200 exemption to those who care for any elderly person, other than a spouse, 75 or older in their home.

Amendment supporters, claiming the $3000 credit was too expensive and would cost the state $180 million, said a $3200 exemption was a fair compromise.

Opponents said the credit would give real relief and allow a wage earner to stay home and care for a loved one. They argued an exemption would provide little relief or incentive.

A "Yea" vote is for the amendment. A "Nay" vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

Water Authority (H 5600)- House

128-12, rejected a $15.9 million amendment providing that the state reimburse each community within the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority 50 percent of the increase in each community's annual water and sewer assessment charges.

Amendment supporters said communities have been hit with an average increase of 54 percent and said partial reimbursement is reasonable.

Opponents said the amendment is an unfair attempt to increase local aid for several individual communities.

A "Yea" vote is for the amendment. A "Nay" vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

Mental Health (H 5600)- House 79-63, rejected an amendment increasing funding for mental health services for children from $36 million to $38.8 million.

Amendment supporters, pointing to the growing numbers of runaways and suicides, said the $2.8 million increase will help young people across the state.

Opponents said the budget already includes substantial increases in mental health and other initiatives for children.

A "Yea" vote is for the amendment. A "Nay" vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

Suspend Rules (H 5600)- House

124-19, suspended rules to allow the session to continue beyond 10 p.m.

Supporters said approval of the budget would be completed shortly and urged the House to stay in session and complete its work.

Opponents said late night sessions are irresponsible and claimed work could be completed the following day.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

Return Surplus (H 5600)- House

110-34, rejected an amendment requiring that any surplus at the end of a fiscal year be divided equally among persons filing a state income tax return the following year.

Amendment supporters, citing a $500 million surplus, said it is only fair that excess money be returned to taxpayers who gave it in the first place.

Opponents said the amendment is too restrictive and argued the legislature should decide annually what to do with any surplus.

A "Yea" vote is for the amendment. A "Nay" vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

Ryan, a 27-year foreign service officer and former U.S. Ambassador to Honduras, is an expert on Latin American affairs.

He expressed his frustration with simplistic media presentations of Latin American conflicts. Short television spots make it impossible to cover a century of development, he said. To understand Latin American situations the public must consider the historical, geographic, economic, political and cultural complexities of these various nations. Ryan stressed the importance of diplomacy in shaping world affairs.

BSO Endows

Three Chairs

The Boston Symphony Orchestra (BSO) has received three gifts amounting to $3 million in endowment funds. As a result of a challenge from BSO trustee J.P. Barger of Winchester, three orchestra chairs have been fully funded and endowed in perpetuity at the $1 million level, totaling a $3 million gift to the orchestra.

Barger and his wife Mary have endowed the trombone position held by Ronald Barron; BSO trustee David Arnold has endowed Fredy Ostrovsky's violin position; and BSO overseer Ray Stata and his wife Maria have endowed the double bass position held by Lawrence Wolfe.

Income generated from the principal of a chair endowed in perpetuity ($1 million) will be sufficient to pay the player's salary over many years. Some chairs are endowed on a more short-term basis; currently, a 20-year term-endowment is $250,000.

These gifts were initiated by a challenge proposed by Barger who previously funded a term endowment on the trombone position, and suggested that he would endow it in perpetuity at the $1 million level. As a result of this challenge, Stata, who had also funded a term-endowment chair, agreed to sponsor his in perpetuity. Arnold, who had made no previous chair endowment, decided he would endow a chair in perpetuity as well.

These endowments represent the third, fourth, and fifth BSO chairs fully funded in perpetuity. Leo Beranek, the Chairman of the BSO's Board of Trustees, has endowed one, and the anonymous donor of the Anne Stoneman viola chair the other.

It just keeps getting better.

Margaret Spindel gave birth to her Eli at home in Newton, thanks to the help of a midwife.

Home-Born Babies: Moms And Midwives Agree It's Terrific

By ERIC BLOM

With Cookie Monster and 7-month-old Anjin Stuart looking on, Suzanne Stuart explains her decision to have two babies at home.

Stuart did not choose home birth lightly, she says. After years of reading and study, she concluded having a child in the bedroom is better than giving birth in a hospital room.

"I was shocked to find out that hospitals perhaps did not do what was best for you," Stuart says.

Like many women who decide to deliver at home, Stuart says she made the decision for two reasons: wanting to have a child at home and not wanting to give birth in the hospital.

Nationally, about 1 percent of all women deliver children at home; however, a concentration of midwives inside the Route 128 belt makes home delivery more common here.

Women who deliver at home speak of stirrups, drugs, forceps and a feeling of helplessness when they talk about hospital birth.

They see it as an impersonal experience, where they are not given any control over their own bodies.

Laurie Howell had three children in the hospital. Now she says she would never do it again. She has delivered two children at home and is expecting her sixth child in August.

Howell says that when she was delivering her third child, doctors induced labor before it was needed, causing injuries. Nurses immediately took her daughter to be washed, even though Howell wanted to spend time with her child.

"I carried this baby for nine months, and all I wanted to do was hold her and love her, and they took her away from me," Howell says.

"I get tense just at the thought of the hospital," says Suzanne Miller, who recently delivered her second child at home. "I'm not sure I want to give up control to a doctor who may not have my best interests at heart."

Nationally, about 1 percent of all women deliver children at home; however, a concentration of midwives inside the Route 128 belt makes home delivery more common here.

"The hospital is very technology-oriented rather than people-oriented," says Kathie Bodie, who delivered both her children at home. "Having a baby is treated like having a disease."

Like many women who have chosen home birth, Bodie had to fight for the right. Her father and sister are doctors, and both opposed the plan. As the months passed, family members avoided each other to keep from arguing.

"My whole family was very much against the first birth," Stuart says. "It was different the next time, but the first time it created a big, big split in the family."

Despite pre-birth battles, mothers who deliver children at home say it is an experience, on an emotional and practical level, they would not trade.

On the practical side, mothers point to the amount of prenatal care midwives offer. Instead of the 15 or 20 minutes a doctor spends with each patient, midwives spend an hour or more during visits.

Nutrition is stressed more by midwives than by physicians, and women say worries about home birth make them more strict about health care.

High-risk women and those living more than 15 minutes away from emergency medical treatment are told to seek a doctor for the birth.

Once labor begins, the woman is in control from the first moment to the last.

Trying to relax in the early stages of labor, Stuart and her husband went to see "Star Trek II."

"My husband wanted to leave in the middle of it because I was groaning," Stuart recalls. "He said I was ruining it. I said 'That isn't the point.'"

In the hospital, some doctors hook women to intravenous bottles and tell them to lie down for birth. At home, women float in bath tubs, walk unrestricted around the house, eat whatever they want and give birth in whatever position is comfortable: lying down, squatting, kneeling or standing up.

The living room, bedroom or bathroom can all take the place of a hospital birthing room.

A lot of women do labor on the toilet," Stuart says. "It has a hole in it and feels really good."

"I had Devon right here in the living room," says Miller, pointing to an imaginary spot on the carpet. "We thought of making a white chalk outline where the body dropped."

A relationship between the midwife and her client, which begins to develop during prenatal visits, reaches its peak during delivery. It is far different than a woman's experience with a male doctor at the hospital, say women who have delivered at home.

Midwives massage, hold hands and talk, helping to take the woman's mind off the pain and make the birth a smooth one.

"You share a lot," Miller says. "You do a lot of talking. You spend a lot of hours with each other."

"I think there is a lot more warmth, woman to woman, than with a doctor," Howell says.

A closeness develops with others who attend the birth as well.

"When my babies were born at home, they were brought into a world of their brother and sisters, grandmother and father," Howell says.

Unlike her hospital experiences, Howell slept "stomach to stomach" with her child the night she was born at home.

"It was a real community type thing because of the planning that is involved," Stuart says of closeness she developed with neighbors. "There were kids, who had come in to see the baby, jumping all over the bed that first night."

Kathie Bodie also remembers sharing the birth experience — and the peaceful time afterward — with her husband and their friends.

"It was in the summer and everyone went down on the porch and had crossants," Bodie recalls. "After a while, they came up to join me with some coffee. Light was streaming in through the window, and I was lying with my baby."

"In my heart I knew it would be a very gentle way to bring someone in to the world."

Kathleen Bodie says her home birth led to a peaceful time with her husband and friends afterward.

Midwives, Doctors Split On Certification Issue

By ERIC BLOM

Lay midwives want certification, a status some doctors say will legitimize the "dangerous practice" of home birth.

The midwives say certification will recognize their skills and offer access to needed support services.

Beacon Hill legislators are currently studying a proposal to establish a board of registration for midwives. A bill to do so was favorably reported out of committee and is under consideration by the Ways and Means Committee.

Currently, anyone can help deliver a child at home and be paid for the service. Certified nurse midwives, who can by law deliver children only in hospitals, present the only exception.

"You and I can call ourselves midwives and deliver a baby," says Elizabeth Donnelly, a legislative aide to state Sen. Edward L. Burke. He has supported bills designed to license midwives for the past three years.

Last year, a licensing bill was nearly passed by the Senate, but under fierce opposition from the Massachusetts Medical Society, it died.

Doctors say they do not want the state to condone home births. At the same time, trying to outlaw lay midwives or home birth itself would be impossible, they say.

"Legitimizing it by setting up a board of registration is unacceptable," says Dr. Albert Marcus, president of the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, Massachusetts section.

"There's no way you can foresee ahead of time which deliveries are high risk and which are low risk," Marcus says. "High-risk births can't adequately be taken care of at home."

Midwives say hospital practices such as prescribing drugs often cause more harm than good. Few emergencies, they add, reach the crisis stage before a woman can be taken to the hospital.

"There are doctors who think childbirth at home is tantamount to child abuse," says Margaret Spindel, president of the Massachusetts Midwives Alliance.

"One doctor said to me that anyone can be a midwife so long as she wears boots and has dirty hair," Spindel says.

Prospective midwives attend 50 births as an apprentice and deliver 25 other children in a supervised situation before being considered full-fledged midwives by the alliance.

Prospective midwives also must pass three exams.

There is no formal, book learning required. Techniques of drawing blood, recognizing complications and stopping hemorrhages are learned on the job, Spindel says.

The alliance currently has 24 members, and about a dozen other midwives, who are not members of the alliance, also practice in the state.

No Massachusetts midwife has been sued for malpractice, but possible suits scare some midwives. Midwives Alliance members have not been able to find liability insurance.

If midwife certification becomes a reality, the state will require them to carry liability insurance, Donnelly says.

Spindel attributes the lack of lawsuits to the midwives' relatively low financial status and the bond midwives develop with clients.

She says every experienced midwife she knows has faced the tragedy of infant death, but no parent has held the midwife responsible.

The issue of liability insurance, she adds, is secondary to licensing in importance for midwives.

Students Enjoy Beat The Clock

Saturday, April 19, the Winchester Youth Center sponsored the first "Dating Game/Beat the Clock" night for high-school students at McCall Jr. High School.

Although there was not an extremely large turnout, students who participated had a great deal of fun and many laughs. Winning a free dinner for two at Maximilian's Restaurant were Cary Williams and Chris Gaudette.

Dover Grille's donation was given to Jimmy Hennley and Sandra Riley, and Julie Guarnotta and Mike White will be going to Lucia's Restaurant for a free dinner for two.

Members of the audience volunteered as "Beat the Clock" contestants, participated in some outrageous events. Prizes were awarded to all.

Winchester Players Make Moliere Fun, Not Overdone

By DAVE CAMERON
Special To The Star

"The Doctor in Spite of Himself," currently presented by the Winchester Players at the Unitarian Church, is a colorful, unassuming frolicking farce, taking the audience along the traditional hilarious twists and turns of mistaken identity.

Ingredients always added for spice, such as slapstick and pratfall, were provided maximum fun without being overdone.

Flirtatious encounters between characters were carefully restrained not to offend anyone, and the social satire of Moliere's piece was not too acidic. No one left the theatre with a bad taste in his or her mouth.

On the contrary, the audience seemed to have as much fun as the cast. There was a definite chemistry, similar to that found in a room when everyone is in on a joke together.

There is a fine cast all around, but personal privilege permits a favorite Lorraine McCarthy, as the saucy wife of the woodcutter, Sganarelle, was especially sensitive to the pulse of the play. She swayed her hips and batted her eyes to the rhythm of the laughs, delivering each line with the exact amount of sass required.

Jeffrey Gay, the woodsman recruited as a famous doctor, thanks to his wife's mischievous ruse, also carried himself through many tight spots with a snappy response and a knowing gleam in his eye.

James Lynch, as the wealthy man Geronte, whose daughter Sganarelle is recruited to heal, was an absolute delight with his particular brand of charming consternation. He added to every scene he was in.

Craig Nickerson and Eric Row, Geronte's servants, proved a good team, and their blend of top and cockney produced an excellent alloy.

Karen Barton was in fine form as the flirtatious Jacqueline, who when stealing chaste but illicit kisses, displayed the appropriate measure of extra marital aplomb.

Heidi Hoffman was charming and elegant as Valere's ailing daughter Lucinde, and although her lines were few, they were delivered with more than a fair amount of power.

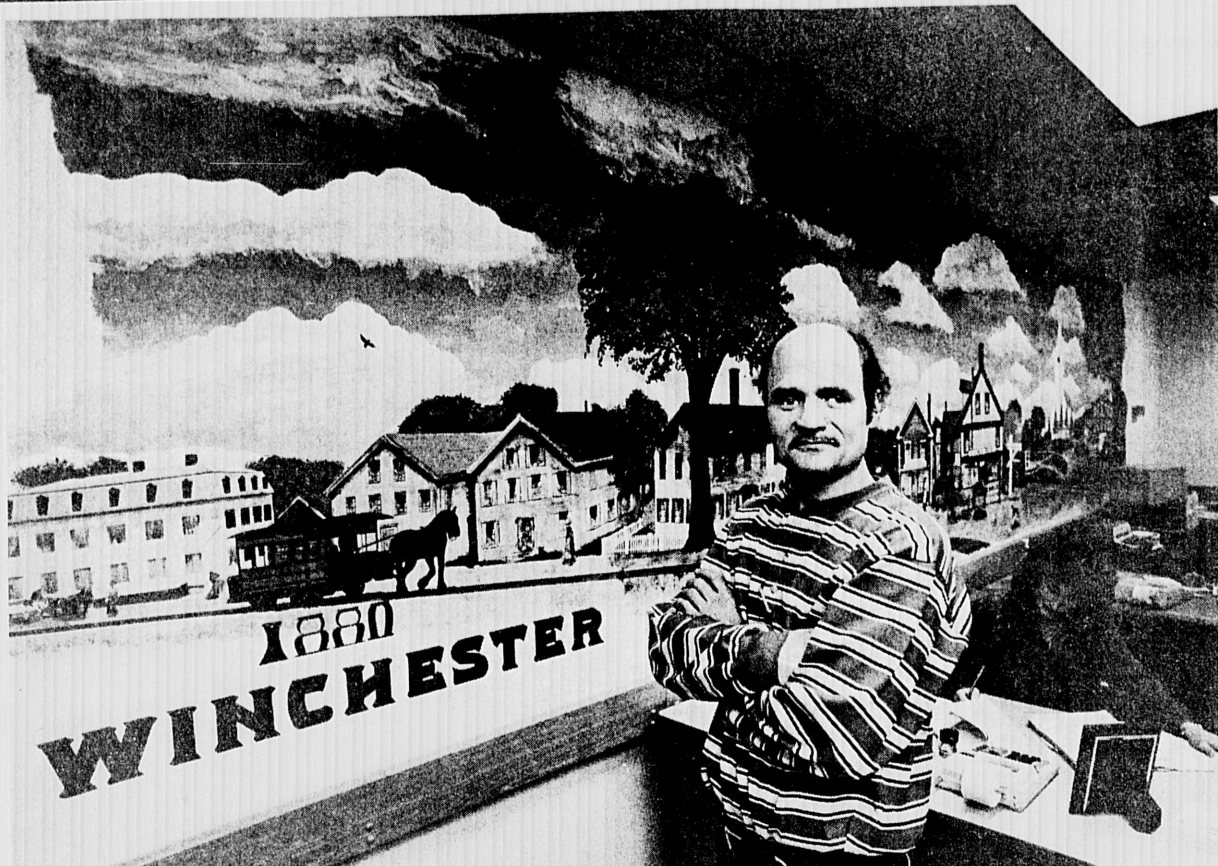

Robert Hallisey was attractive and eager and earnest in the role of Lucinde's spurned suitor Leandre, so that no one doubted the sincerity of his affections.

Tony Sacco endeared us by wandering onto the stage as a simple yet lovable countryman, and Clare Jacobs made what I overheard to be her theatrical debut as his daughter.

Don Chapman evoked empathy as a hapless neighbor who has the misfortune to stumble into an argument between Sganarelle and Marfise, only to get caught in the crossfire of slapsticks, and Anne Rafferty made a pretty maid to Lucinde of only the dear had had more lines.

I do have one suggestion. Although director David Goldstein deserves credit for choreographing this play into the proper blend of organized chaos, a farce such as this needs to stay at a steady clip, and the pace did drag somewhat the evening that I was there.

This is a minor technical detail that is easily remedied. All in all, this was a fine show, a fine canvas painting with broad strokes of color and laughter.

Mural Shows 1880 Winchester

Robert Winter and Keith Puffer thought a mural of Winchester in 1880 would be nice to see and decided to pool their resources.

Winter, 41, had the artistic talent. Puffer, of the Puffer Insurance Agency on Main St., had the space.

"It took me three or four months to research it and maybe 150 hours to paint it," Winter said.

The 41-year-old artist said he is happy with the product "and they are too."

An unusual feature of the mural is the people. "They're all made of decoupage from old photos," Winter explained.

Winter said he is "really a sculptor" but finds he has done as much painting as sculpting in the past 20 years.

"I've been in Winchester for four years. Like the area and the business climate," Winter said.

Music Society Sets May Meeting

The Winchester Music Society will hold its spring meeting at 8 p.m. Friday, May 9, at the home of Michel and Anne Franciose-Perrault, 25 Prince Ave.

Local musicians will perform music for voice, piano, harpsichord, flute and oboe.

Music for four-hand piano will be performed by Anne Franciose-Perrault, Kenneth Seitz and Susan Shao.

Music for soprano with piano accompaniment will be performed by Constance Rosenberger and Lawrence Berry.

Carole Davidson will perform early American music on the harpsichord and will be joined by a guest to perform early American songs for soprano and harpsichord.

Music for transverse flute and keyboard will be performed by Allen Hill and Susan Shao.

Carl and Patsy Schlaikjer will join Kenneth Seitz to perform music for flute, oboe and piano.

The Society is composed of adult Winchester residents interested in enhancing the quality of music in Winchester by performing and enjoying music in an informal context. The group meets several times a year in members' homes.

Old friends and interested newcomers are encouraged to attend. For more information, call Martin Hitchcock, 29 Wildwood St.

Three area artists will be honored as "artists of the month" during May at the Clever Hand II on Route 2A in Acton.

The Clever Hand II is a cooperative of 45 artists and craftsmen, all of whom actively produce works and were selected by jury for membership. The cooperative is open every day, including Thursday and Friday evenings.

Deborah Cary of Winchester has been weaving for more than ten years, focusing her work on well-faced rugs for the floor or wall. She also weaves fabrics for pillows and creates off-loom wall hangings. She prefers to work with wool, usually dyeing it herself in order to obtain a rich blending of colors. She is a member of the Weavers' Guild of Boston and the Winchester Art Association as well as the Clever Hand II.

Fritz Galley of Arlington weaves rag rugs, pushing ancient techniques in new directions. Her most recent rug designs involve dyeing patterns into cotton cloth before she strips it in to rags and weaves it. This technique gives a unique softness to the design as it reappears in the woven form. She has been weaving for 20 years.

Acton potter Lee Ornabee has been producing functional and decorative stoneware pottery for ten years. She has received awards from the Action Arts League.

Lacrosse Team Wins Pair Of Close Games

The Sachems pulled out two close ones in lacrosse last week, beating Brookline High 3-7 Monday and Governor Dummer 5-4 Thursday.

In what seemed like two entirely different games Monday, the Sachems overcame a 2-6 early third period deficit to snatch victory from a surprised but helpless Brookline team.

After trailing early in the third period, Winchester went on a five-minute scoring binge that tied the score 6-6 and staggered Brookline.

Middle Bob Arcari scored twice during the drive. Middle Mike Murray and attacker James Campo each scored once.

The Sachems' comeback rode in part, however, on the excellent performance of goalie Brian Gammon.

On Thursday the game ball went to middle Mike Murray, who scored the winning goal off a Campo assist with two minutes left.

Packer Courts Passes Ready

The Winchester Recreation Department has announced that season tennis passes and single use passes for use of the 15 clay courts at the William S. Packer facility will go on sale at the Town Clerk's office next week.

Passes will be available to Winchester residents only. Proof of residency is required. Season passes ($10/adult, $5 youth) and/or a day use pass (booklet of 5 for $5) will be required for the supervisor. Proof of residency will again be required.

Winchester also operates tennis courts at the high school, McDonald Field and Leonard Field. Use of these courts is free. Contact the Recreation Department at 721-7125 for further information.

WHS Sailors At Annapolis

The Winchester High School sailing team tied for second place April 20 at the New England School Sailing Association's trial races for one of six slots open to New England high schools to the Mallory National Championship Regatta at the United States Naval Academy in Annapolis, Md., May 3-4.

The qualifying regatta took place at Tabor Academy on Buzzards Bay in Marion. Sailing in 420's, the A division was skippered by Jim Bowers and the B division by Mike Bowers. Crewing were Jane Williamson, Heather Price and Dan O'Grady.

Tara Juwa Wins Medals

Tara Juwa of Winchester won medals in the 100-yard butterfly and 100-yard breast stroke and turned in an excellent overall performance at the recent New England B Swimming Championships at Dartmouth College.

A member of the Belmont Aquatic Team (BAT), Juwa qualified for seven individual events and two relays in the 9-10-year-old group.

She placed sixth in the 100-yard butterfly, ninth in the 100-yard breast stroke, fifth in the 50-yard breast stroke, and 13th in the 50-yard butterfly.

In the relays, Juwa swam third leg on BAT's winning 200-yard freestyle relay.

Budrewicz Fans 16 Batters

The Winchester High baseball team fell 1-0 to Melrose last Thursday, but flew on the wings of an astounding 16-strikeout performance by pitcher Tim Budrewicz to beat Burlington 9-2 Monday.

The senior Sachem pitcher, who came within two outs of a no-hitter, threw everything in the book at the helpless Red Devils.

In the meantime, the Sachems were racking up 12 hits off Red Devil pitchers Paul Keohane and Lance Worob enroute to five fast runs in the first inning. Although the Sachems slowed down offensively after Worob replaced Keohane on the mound, the Red Devils never got by Budrewicz to mount a serious challenge.

Monday's victory was particularly pleasing after the Sachems' loss in a close but frustrating game 1-0 last Thursday.

Budrewicz pitched well that game, striking out four and allowing Melrose only two hits. Yet Winchester also managed only two hits all afternoon in this defensive struggle.

Melrose first baseman Tom Hurley ended the struggle with a right-field drive that brought Dan Griffin home in the seventh inning.

Hurley's game-winning was only the Raider's second hit off Winchester's Tim Budrewicz.

Winchester's first hit came from Gareth Kenton, who doubled in the second inning, and from Mike White, who singled in the sixth.

The Sachems are now 2-2 in the Middlesex league and 3-2 overall.

Carroll, Sheppard In Swimming News

Michael Carroll, 11, son of John and Mary Carroll and a member of the CSSM swim team, continued to make New England swimming news.

He began by dropping nine seconds off his 500 free, finishing in seventh place. That was his lowest finish of the weekend at the Junior Olympic Swimming Championships at Brown University in Providence.

All events required swimming in the morning and coming back that same evening to swim them again for placement. This is the format found at collegiate and Olympic swimming.

His other places included fourth in the 50 breast, 200 IM, 100 free, 50 free, and fifth in the 100 IM and 100 breast.

Ben Sheppard, 10, new to the CSSM team, also did extremely well. He also swam nine events and placed in all. His highest placements were in the 100 IM, 50 fly and 100 free with a third in each.

He finished at least seventh in each event.

Boys' Tennis Team Rolls, Now At 3-0

The Winchester High boys' tennis team dismantled Wakefield High 5-0 last Thursday, then rolled over Watertown High 5-0 Monday, improving its record to 3-0 and justifying, perhaps, some impatience for a showdown May 7 with Lexington High.

In first singles, Shawn Herlihy beat Doug Silveira 6-0, 6-0. Joe Palumbo followed with a handy 6-0, 6-1 victory over Bill Dumont, and Gavin Barton rounded out singles action beating Dave Ahlquist 6-1, 6-0.

Winchester's first doubles combo of Chris Aronson and Elliot Foley handled Keith Shney and Dave Doherty 6-3, 6-0, while Chris Verhaegen and Scott Herlihy finished the job 6-3, 6-2.

Monday, Herlihy won 6-0, 6-1 at first singles, Palumbo won 6-0, 6-2 at second singles, and Barton won impressively 6-0, 6-0 at the third spot.

Both doubles duos won 6-0, 6-0.

Padovani To Lead Bay State Soccer

The Bay State Games, Massachusetts Olympic Sports Festival, has appointed Nicholas Padovani of Winchester as the 1986 coach of the Northeast Boys Scholastic Soccer team.

Padovani coached the team in 1985 and will complete his final year as a Bay State Games coach in '86, in observance of a two-year Bay State Games coaching tenure rule.

In 1985, Padovani's Boys Scholastic team took home the silver medal after a dramatic double overtime loss to the Coastal team in a 2-1 decision.

"My goal this year is to bring home the gold!" said Padovani, whose team tryout is scheduled May 4 at 6 p.m. at Salem State College. Any athlete from age 12 through junior year in high school is eligible to try out for the Bay's Scholastic team, but all athletes must be pre-registered prior to the tryout date.

Official Bay State Games entry booklets may be obtained from any high school athletic director or from any Bank of Boston location across the state.

The Northeast Boy's Scholastic soccer team will be one of 24 soccer teams appearing in the Bay State Games finals July 10-13 in Boston. The finals will showcase Massachusetts' best soccer talent while also featuring the state's very best athletes in 19 other sports.

Match All Winchester

The Winchester girls' tennis team revealed a slight chink in its seemingly invincible armor in last Thursday's 4-1 victory over the Warriorettes of Wakefield.

The chink appeared in the first doubles team of senior Lulu Kermont and sophomore Kelly O'Callaghan, who lost 7-6, 6-3 to Wakefield's Sue Higgins and Marybeth Sydlowski. It was the Warriorettes' first match win against Winchester in six years.

Still, the rest of the match was all Winchester. At first singles, Karen McCall breezed past Patty McCarthy 6-0, 6-1, as sister Linda McCall defeated Kim Baril 6-0, 6-0 at second singles. Freshman Laura Tozza easily handled Wakefield's Kathleen Dwyer 6-0, 6-0 at the third spot.

At second doubles, senior Kathy Gray and junior Kristin Rothmann held on to a 6-4 win in the first set before dominating Wakefield's Audrey O'Keefe and Martha Sydlowski 6-0 in the second set.

Monday, Winchester used a mixed junior varsity and varsity lineup to blank Watertown High 5-0.

Linda McCall moved up to first singles and beat Kelly Khoozian 6-1, 6-0. Then freshman standout Laura Tozza moved into second singles with a convincing 6-1, 6-0 win over Lori Breda.

At third singles, second doubles player Kathy Gray beat Mary Beth Palumbo 6-1, 6-1.

Winchester's doubles teams, both of which consisted of junior varsity players, won easy 6-0, 6-0 matches. Katy Fuery and Kara Marshall beat Elise Loukas and Donna Bagdasarian in first doubles and Jen Clotti and Katie Carroll downed Rachel Kapilian and Dianne Berg at second doubles.

Girls Place In Relays

The Winchester High girls track team placed in relays in Saturday's Class B State Track Relays.

The 800-yard relay of Janet Weylman, Meg Kelley, Joan Riley and Jane O'Neill placed sixth.

The 200-yard relay of Denise Chabot, Michelle Sweeney, Laura Doherty and Julie Guarnotta placed fifth.

Library Joins In Japanese Exhibit

"Modern Japan—The Same or Different?" is the title of an exhibit in the Winchester Public Library's Junior Library.

Arranged by Muraco School second grade teacher Susan Bokil, the exhibit features everyday items from Japan.

Included are tableware, school lunch boxes, a typical "fast food" meal, a toy car, school notebooks, toilet paper and tissues. Ms. Bokil accumulated the items in Japan last summer when she visited as a Japanese Institute for SocioEconomic Affairs (JISEA) fellow. She participated in a three-week educational tour, designed to familiarize participants with modern Japanese culture so they could "spread the word" in the United States.

Ms. Bokil designed a unit introducing Winchester children to Japan by comparing a child's life here and there. The unit, which began in March and will continue through June, is being taught town-wide for the first time this year.

The exhibit at the library allows other children to compare familiar items with their Japanese counterparts and explore similarities and differences between the two. This kind of library/school cooperation is also fostered by the classroom collections of books the Junior Library supplies to elementary school classrooms, and through meeting between the Children's Services Librarian and the school librarians.

Teachers who would like to display materials in the junior library should make arrangements by contacting Heidi Zeibig, children's services librarian, at 721-7140.

Town Hall Renovation Plan Defeated By Two-Vote Margin

town is looking itself into conceptual plans that would allow only minor changes.

He said the planning board is concerned about its own space in the interior renovation plans. The engineering department, where the planning board meets, will be larger in the renovated structure, however.

Asked how his amendment would "get a better Town Hall at a lower price," Kenney said he hoped with more time to "get a Town Hall that works better."

Kenney added, "As we work with departments with more exact cost estimates, we know what can be traded off."

The committee was also criticized for not involving the Permanent Building Committee more closely, although the group did agree with the designer's selection.

Dr. Roger Korman asked if the exterior could be renovated without invoking state laws that require the building to be made accessible to handicapped persons and have its code violations corrected.

Maurer said it could, but counsel against the approach.

Mary Proski said the advisory committee "violated the will of the people. If we go ahead with this project, we allow them to continue to violate the will of the people."

One speaker said he did not like having "to get all the information about this project tonight and then decide tonight," but others pointed out extensive publicity and a public hearing had been given to the project.

Town Counsel Doug Randall was called upon to discuss several ideas which turned out to be either unfavorable to the town's bonding position or, in one case, unworkable.

Kenney said the planning board had "not been invited" to meet with the Town Hall Advisory Committee but Judge Muggia, a member of the committee and also a selectman, disagreed.

She said the committee had met with all department heads at the Town Hall and invited all citizens as well to meet with the committee.

"It's also important to remember that the only constant at the Town Hall is the public in general. The project is not for particular people or officials," she said.

Susan Keats, who represents the "historical community" on the advisory committee, said she is "delighted we're not talking about tearing the building down." She asked support for the project.

Near the end of discussion, Looney took the floor.

"If this motion passes, we're giving a $4.7 million blank check to this committee, which has not seen fit to consult with the Permanent Building Committee and other boards in town," Looney said.

"Town Meeting will have no further say and we're going to be stuck with" the project, he said.

Mike Connolly also delivered an impassioned speech against the renovation project. "The biggest waste of money in this project is the Winchester Room," he declared. The room is the town's original library, now the town clerk's office, and has an original vaulted ceiling now hidden by an acoustic tile drop ceiling.

"The committee has utter contempt for Town Meeting," Connolly declared.

Immediately after Connolly's speech, Moderator John Sullivan called for the vote.

Town Meeting will continue at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the high school auditorium and meet each Monday and Thursday thereafter until a total of 33 articles have been considered.

Residents, Haulers Are Angry

every resident in town is entitled to," he insisted.

During the course of the hearing, Welch interrupted several times to remind residents and haulers that the meeting was a hearing, not a debate.

Resident Carol Barlow said, "It's embarrassing that a town like Winchester doesn't have curbside trash pick-up. I shouldn't have to pay extra to have my trash picked up," she said.

"I'd like to see the transfer station finished with."

Member Mark Lombardi suggested selectmen form a subcommittee to study the problem. He said a representative group from the residents and the haulers would be welcome.

In other action, selectmen denied a request from the Irish-American Club in Arlington to serve liquor at St. Eulalia's Hall on Ridge St. on May 3. Because Winchester is now considered a "wet" town, the board has the power to vote for or against one-day liquor licenses.

Board members voiced concern about the policy and the guidelines attached to the proposal because Winchester has never granted one-day licenses.

"I don't know what I'm granting," member Robert Deering said.

Muggia said, "I'm sorry I didn't know about this," adding that the board wasn't given sufficient time before the event to set up guidelines.

Welch suggested the board table discussion and put the issue on the docket in two weeks at its May 6 meeting. No action was taken to grant the request of the Irish-American Club.

Noreen Arcari and Town Day Committee members were issued a permit by selectmen to hold Town Day Saturday, May 31, from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. with a rain date of June 1.

Committee members came before selectmen Monday night to discuss briefly the schedule of the day's events.

The board approved a food vendor license request for a gourmet catering business at 253 Swanton St.

Girl Scout Leaders Needed

Winchester Girl Scouts have volunteer opportunities for adults 16 and over who have a few hours a week to spare. Leaders and assistant leaders are needed so more girls can enjoy the best Girl Scouting has to offer.

Leaders make Girl Scouting fun. From helping the girls plan camping trips to working on badges, leaders become an important part of girls' lives.

And as a Girl Scout leader, the rewards are many. Ask any of the leaders in Winchester.

Training is provided for those who need to freshen their skills. Volunteers can learn to organize group projects as well as how to master camp-fire cooking. This training will help leaders become more confident in their skills and in working with the girls in their troop.

There are also other volunteer jobs available on a troop level. Adults are needed to assist with transportation, telephoning and working on the cookie sale. There's a volunteer opportunity for everyone.

For more information, contact Patriots' Trail Council in Waltham at 893-6114 or 729-3082.

Racquet Group Honors Koslowski

John Koslowski, president of the Winchester Racquetball Club and Tennis Center, was recently honored at the New England Racquet Sports Association spring meeting.

Koslowski had served on the board of directors and was stepping down after four years of service.

During the awards presentation, it was also noted that Koslowski, a Belmont resident, is one of the original owners/participants in the association.

Being Single: Fear Loathing Or Fun And

"Fabulously handsome single male, 28, seeks female companion. Into travel, tennis, hiking, camping, both water and snow skiing, and will enjoy a quiet candlelight dinner."

By GEORGE DERRINGER

Is it okay to be single? Judging by dollars single people spend in an effort to either escape or enjoy singleness, one would think not.

Business is booming at Singles Almanac, a Boston monthly that contains hundreds of "respectable personals," in the words of publisher Dorothy Fishbein.

Dating services are also doing land-office business volumes and you can hardly avoid advertisements and posters promoting singles groups.

"Dating services came into their own in the 1970's when it became okay, in most people's minds, to use one," Fishbein says. "And there's nothing wrong with dating services. I just think you get more for your money with a personal ad."

She admits her bias. The Singles Almanac calls personal ads "the 80's way to meet" and its publisher calls the personals "a do-it-yourself dating service."

One thing she doesn't call them is "personal ads"; the buzzword is "personal messages." The distinction is lost on most people.

What distinguishes personal ads from other ways to meet prospective mates? First, they often eliminate married people pretending to be single.

"When I was living in Atlanta, I went to singles bars," Fishbein says, "but I wasn't meeting anyone except losers and married men out on the town."

She joined a singles group at a Unitarian church but it wasn't the answer either. "Some organizations are good and you can sometimes meet the right people there," Fishbein says. "But more often you become part of a group relationship and get emotional support from the group."

Yes and no, Fishbein says. "In the 29-34 age group, the numbers of single men and women are equal.

The chances of finding a mate from the group are less promising, she said.

Later, she tried the personals in an Atlanta newspaper. "I used the personals very timidly," she says. "And I also read them carefully. In between the people who liked whips and chains, you might find one or two respectable ads."

In 1981, Fishbein came to Boston and decided to start a publication that contained only so-called respectable ads. Singles Almanac was born.

"Actually, we receive very few whips-type ads and we haven't got ten one in the past six months," Fishbein said. "At the beginning, we got more of those ads and had to reject them."

Kinky personals aren't a big problem, Fishbein says, "because people read the magazine and don't see those kinds of ads in them."

Singles Almanac is distinguished from other publications by the age group it serves. About 80 percent of its advertisers are between 29 and 59.

"Younger people either don't want to get married, they are in college with a big circle of friends and lots of ways to meet people, or they're still seeing people they knew in school," Fishbein says.

An untapped market exists in people more than 59 years old. "We find that a lot of people over 59 really like the magazine but we've never marketed it to them," Fishbein says. "Probably we ought to."

Perhaps surprisingly, Singles Almanac has about equal numbers of ads from men and women. Aren't there more single women than men?

Yes and no, Fishbein says. "In the 29-34 age group, the numbers of single men and women are equal.

Airborne: Giving A Lift To

By PAM DERRINGER

If you are single and your social life needs a lift, maybe it's time to fly United... or American... or New York Air.

Although the price of admission may be lofty, the clientele is correspondingly selective and can quickly put your love woes back home in broader perspective.

So much the better if you already are planning a trip; the social opportunities presented on a plane ride add no more to the tab!

Even for the very shy, a plane provides safe flirting grounds. Almost everyone is a stranger; all passengers are on the same social footing, and all have something in common: their destination.

And there is no social pressure. While conversational ice-breakers abound, it is equally acceptable to read a magazine or look out the window, scarcely saying a word.

So far, airlines have lagged in recognizing the social services they could perform and concentrated instead on prompt flight scheduling, cost control, hijacking detection equipment and automatic ticketing machines.

Sure, they query with crisp concern whether a passenger would prefer a window or aisle seat, smoking or nonsmoking, efficiently punching the stated preferences into their computer, from which an official, typed boarding pass emerges.

But do they seek to fulfill the deeper personal needs of their passengers, of far greater concern than cigarette smoke or the view?

Specifically, why not ask if you would prefer to experience your trip next to a male or female, an Aquarius or a Leo, a sports fan or an intellectual, a blond or the brunette, a person at the height or depths of his or her intellectual, social or physical biorhythm cycles?

Nor have the airlines explored the potential of airborne "Cruises to Nowhere," offering scenic flights for singles which circle Cleveland, for instance.

It's obvious that airline officials have failed to exploit the full marketing potential of the journey itself, not just the final destination.

For those wishing to make the most of the social opportunities on their plane rides, the following are tips distilled from more than 200 flights:

— a change in planes, or at least a stop-over flight, increases the possibilities for social contact and is recommended over a nonstop

What To Learn

Where To Go And What To Do Here

Single folks, especially those new to the area, can pick from several books written for them.

Winner of the competition for Longest Name is easily "Where To Go and What To Do When You're Single and Living in and Around Boston" by Dale Koppel. (Published by DK Enterprises, Cambridge.)

If nothing else, the book is comprehensive. It covers dating services, singles groups, bars and restaurants, special interest groups, adult education, support services, publications.

The book's strengths include listings of fees for everything from psychologists to camera club membership. Koppel's directory also includes recommendations for 20 other books written specifically for singles.

Weaknesses include too much reliance on copy prepared by business owners themselves. One publication, for example, is described in the same glowing terms it uses for in-house promotional materials.

Those who like new words will like Koppel's book. "Networking" is recommended several times; it means joining or creating a group of people who are at least in contact with each other. (Trendy types already knew that.)

If you need to write a personal ad, the book can help you. Don't start with "If you like Pina Colada..."

Its ultimate message is the same as always: Single people can't just sit there and expect to be "found." That's especially true for women, who are outnumbered overall.

Unless, of course, they elect to try the dating service radio shows. They're described in the book as well. Try WMRE, 1510 AM, from 4 to 6 p.m. Sundays for a sample.

And Flying?

'I wasn't meeting anyone except losers and married

Above 35, there are more women than men tend to join groups more often to find a mate. Men over 35 are slightly more likely to place a personal ad," she says.

Men are apparently more convinced of the brilliance of their prose. "Men are much more likely to place an ad in two successive issues. Women just want to try it once," Fishbein says.

Is any group more likely to place a personal ad in search of love? No, says Fishbein. "There's a broad spectrum of religions and other backgrounds," she says. "If there's one unifying factor, it is that the writers are generally literate people — but that's not surprising in this area, where people are comfortable reading and writing."

Everyone in Atlanta is not so comfortable with reading, Fishbein says.

There are, of course, many places to read and place personal ads. Boston Magazine is one, but it's relatively expensive and "has a mostly yuppie clientele. Some people have told that the magazine's personals are good if you like to meet snobs."

A different demographic group might use the Phoenix, although its market is somewhat younger. "The Phoenix still suffers from a reputation it got for running kinky personals. It may not deserve the reputation any more, but it's going to die hard," Fishbein says.

You don't have to advertise to use the personals, of course. Some publications allow advertisers to give phone numbers or post office boxes, others make you use a "blind box" to respond.

Do personals really work? If not, many publications are making a fortune anyway.

— to keep the conversation in perspective and avoid physical injury while attempting to ascertain the passenger's marital status, give passenger's personal space by choosing an aisle seat from a group of three rather than an aisle-window pair;

— if another passenger requests the middle seat (particularly if the newcomer does not meet your social preferences) offer to move over instead;

— to keep the conversation in perspective and avoid physical injury while attempting to ascertain the passenger's marital status, give first priority to seats on the left side of the plane;

— try to select smaller planes; the atmosphere is more intimate and there are fewer distractions, such as in-flight movies and stereo headphones.

If your social expectations fail, there's gum on the inside of your seat belt, a hyperactive child sitting behind you or a honeymooning couple beside you — cheer up, there's always the laundromat!

— avoid flights with assigned seating so seat-mate selection is by choice, not chance;

— timing is crucial: try to board the plane when it is one third to one half full. Sitting next to the passenger of your choice is hardly subtle if he is the first on board and you are the second.

Waiting until the last minute, on the other hand, can limit your selection;

Tons Of Talent Musical Hit For

Boston Youth Theater Produces Dynamo Of Show

Faneuil Hall, the historic site where the concepts of the inalienable rights of the individual and the passions of Revolution were nurtured, will be converted into a theater for the first time when XAX, an original musical, premieres through May 18.

Performed by Boston Youth Theater in conjunction with the Mayor's Office of Business and Cultural Development, the production, written and conceived by B.Y.T. Artistic Director, Elaine Koury, and set in a fantasy world Olympic Games-like arena, explores themes of winning; losing; power; identity and relationships and is highlighted by "high-energy" gymnastics; original music by Clinton Ray, II; production numbers and storytelling-rappers. The audience follows the 36-member company (15-23 year olds) through the Games as their stories (one of which looks at a young man who accidentally ruins his younger brother's chances at winning and commits suicide) unravel.

"Ultimately," stresses Koury, "XAX" is optimistic — kids can have positive impact on their lives and their destinies."

Incorporated in 1978 to provide inner city youth with the creative tools, hopefully leading to personal and professional growth, Boston Youth Theater staged the successful musical "Inner City Energy" last season at City Hall.

"We produce original plays with young people, 75 percent of whom are from lower income families with limited opportunities," said Koury.

"Boston Youth Theater dispels the myth that inner city youth are 'trouble' by training them to become role models of self-confidence and responsibility," Koury added.

XAX performances in Faneuil Hall at Boston's Quincy Market run at 8 p.m. Thursday and Friday; 2 and 8 p.m. Saturday; 3 p.m. Sunday. Tickets are $10 at door and $5 in advance. Call 492-2805.

Romeo And Juliet Closes Season

Star-crossed lovers meet again as Theatre by the Sea opens on their final production of the season, Shakespeare's immortal Romeo and Juliet.

The show opens this weekend and will play through May 24. The cast of 17 is under the direction of Malcolm Morrison.

Perhaps one of the best-loved romances, Romeo and Juliet is the classic tale of young, forbidden love and two long-feuding families whose growing antagonisms are finally dissolved by the deaths of a son and daughter from each of the hostile homes.

Featured in the lead roles of Romeo and Juliet are T. Scott Cunningham and Melody Combs, respectively.

Coordinating the exciting sword fights in the show will be Rick Sordelet, who is a member of The Society of American Fight Directors and an instructor of Stage Combat at Rutgers University.

Scene Designer Mark Pirolo returns to TBS not only to design the set but also the costumes for this production.

Tickets are now available for this production by calling (603) 431-6660. The box office is open Tuesday through Sunday, 12 to 9 p.m.

John Williams Opens The Pops' 101st Season

Conductor John Williams will launch the 101st season of the Boston Pops when he conducts the orchestra in its Opening Night concert Tuesday, May 6 at 8 p.m. at Symphony Hall with special guests clarinetist Richard Stoltzman and jazz singer Joe Williams.

A world premiere, the Boston Overture, by Boston composer William Thomas McKinley, will begin the evening's performance, which is sponsored this season by AT&T.

Williams, now in his seventh year as conductor of the Pops, will lead the orchestra in a program which will also include the Prelude from the Suite for strings in E major by Foote; Suite from The Incredible Flutist by Piston; a new arrangement of show tunes by Kurt Weill; show tunes; Another Op'nin, Another Show from Kiss Me Kate; and Everything's Coming Up Roses from Gypsy.

Stoltzman will open his portion of the program with his own arrangement of Debussy's Girl with the Flaxen Hair, followed by Rossini's Theme and Variations for clarinet and orchestra.

Joe Williams, featuring his trio, will perform On the Sunny Side of the Street, by Fields; Prelude to a Kiss, by Ellington; Just the Way You Are, by Joel; and All of Me, by Marks-May. He will be joined by Stoltzman in Ellington's Mood Indigo.

Clarinetist Stoltzman has performed with more than 100 orchestras, including the New York Philharmonic, London Symphony Orchestra, and Milan's La Scala Orchestra. His programs often include jazz works as well as classical compositions.

Jazz singer Williams started performing on the south side of Chicago nearly 50 years ago.

He sang with Count Basie from 1955-61, making his first hit with Mr. Basie, who called him his "number one son."

The Boston Pops Orchestra commissioned Boston-based composer William Thomas McKinley to write a new work for this year's Opening Night at Pops. Boston Overture is the first McKinley work to be performed by the Boston Pops.

Pops Conductor Williams will share the podium this season with Pops Assistant Conductor Harry Ellis Dickson and returning guest conductors Michael Lankester, John Mauceri, Erich Kunzel, Bruce Hangen, and Harry Rabinowitz.

Pops violinist Max Hobart, who made his Pops conducting debut in 1983, will lead two programs.

Boston Pops cellist Ron Feldman and Paul Gemignani will make their Boston Pops conducting debuts.

The Boston Pops Esplanade Orchestra will present six free public concerts on the Charles River Esplanade, July 5-10 at 8 p.m. each evening.

Performances for the 1986 Pops season will take place nightly, Tuesday through Saturday at 8 p.m. and Sunday at 7:30 p.m.

Old Timers Night is scheduled for Saturday, May 24. Tickets for all other Pops concerts at Symphony Hall go on sale three weeks prior to the concert date.

To charge tickets on a major credit card in Boston call CHARGIT: 542-3600.

The box office is open from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday, and through intermission on concert nights, throughout the Pops season; on Sundays, the box office will open at 1:00 p.m. All programs are subject to change.

—hen Stern, Wyatt Jackson, and Javier Pagan delight audiences with their theatrical acrobatics and ton of talent in the Boston Youth Theater's original musical production of XAX, in performance at Faneuil Hall through May 18; Melody Combs and T. Scott Cunningham appear in Theatre by the Sea's final production, Romeo and Juliet; in their recent visit at the Wang Center, the Alvin Ailey Dance Theater dazzled Boston dance fans.

Starlight Roof Celebrates Jazz

There is a jazz revival in Boston these days and the Starlight Roof has been a major catalyst.

Two years ago, in May of 1984, they began their noted Rooftop Jazz Series, bringing internationally known jazz artists to the Hub on a weekly basis after a lapse of several years that helped spark the interest in jazz.

Located at 575 Comm. ave. in Kenmore Square atop Howard Johnson's Hotel, The Starlight Roof is an acoustical gem, has a great view of the Charles River and the famous neon Citgo Sign.

Shows are held at 9 and 11:30 p.m., generally Thursday through Saturday, and tickets may be purchased in advance by calling Concertcharge at 497-1118. Further information is obtainable by calling 267-6059.

A second anniversary celebration is planned through Saturday, May 3, when singer Gloria Lynne will headline. She is familiar to listeners of Eric In The Evening on WGBH FM, where Eric Jackson has found that play of an old album reissue results in great audience response.

Born in New York City in the early '30s, Lynne learned her art through gospel singing in church as a child. In 1951 she won an amateur contest at the famed Apollo Theatre and then made her professional debut.

By the late '50s, she began recording for Everest Records, and had several hits. She has been compared to Nancy Wilson, Ella Fitzgerald, and Mahalia Jackson.

Organist Lonnie Smith jams at the Starlight May 8, 9 and 10 with guitarist Jimmy Ponder and drummer Terri Lynne Carrington.

Known for his CBS and Blue Note Recordings in the '60s, Smith has recorded with folks like Grover Washington, Lee Morgan, Ron Carter, and Billy Cobham.

In the '60s he worked extensively with George Benson. One hit remembered was Move Your Hand, a jazz funk original on which Lonnie also sings.

Your Mind Is Disconnected and Your Mouth Is Working Overtime is the title of one of the zany tunes that Mose Allison will sing during his stint, May 15 to 17. His wit and dry musical humor highlight his act.

Returning May 22 to 24, the great Dakota Staton will strut and wail with her own Boss Townsend Trio. One of her great hits, Love For Sale will be rendered in her own inimitable style. "Scorching, up-tempo and soulful" was the headline in May, 1985, when Globe jazz critic Ernie Santosuosso reviewed Dakota at the Starlight.

Opening Of Horovitz Play

The world premiere/pre-Broadway tryout of Artistic Director Israel Horovitz's Gloucester-based play, Park Your Car In Harvard Yard, opens at the Gloucester Stage Company on May 8 and runs through June 8.

Actor commitments have forced the GSC to postpone the originally scheduled April 3 opening until May 8.

Park Your Car In Harvard Yard deals with Gloucester High School's toughest teacher at the end of his life and a former student who is hired as his live-in housekeeper.

This comedy/drama runs at The Blackburn Tavern, 2 Main st., Gloucester, with an 8 p.m. curtain.

Ticket prices are $8 on Thursday and $10 on Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Call 281-4099.

Alvin Ailey Wows Audience

REVIEW

As the final curtain rang down on the opening night performance of the Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater at the Wang Center for the Performing Arts, the audience rose as one, the tumultuous applause building to a deafening crescendo. One curtain call followed another, and the grateful ensemble, fully aware that the capacity crowd would not be denied, broke into a final foot-stomping, hand-clapping reprise that simply brought the house down. The brilliance of this troupe defies description!

This marked the 17th visit of the country's leading modern dance company to the Hub, with proceeds from this black tie opening night gala being contributed for scholarship assistance for talented young Boston area dancers to train at the Ailey School in New York.

Ailey introduced the bill of fare. In the Black Tradition, which reflected on his roots, his childhood in Texas growing up beside the railroad tracks, and living with the traditional Black music that provided his inspiration, his insight into Black issues and the basic origins of style ("Been down so long, getting up don't cross my mind... When you see me laughing, I'm laughing to keep from crying...").

This exuberant multi-racial (predominantly Black) company has fused black and white dance into a unique form and is well-deserving of its popular and universal appeal. It is athletic and physical, dramatic and often very funny! It draws from modern, jazz, and classical styles, even the acrobatic, and is set to music that ranges from jazz to symphonic, the blues to spirituals (the backup music is always sensational!).

Ailey focuses on "dance." The stage is devoid of frills. There is no scenery and few props. Flavor and atmosphere are provided by clever and multiple lighting changes. There are no ornate costumes, skintight leotards or padded dance belts.

Dress is purposefully kept simple and flowing to allow the magnificently built dancers' total suppleness and freedom of movement, and to emphasize their line and form, their skillful turns and amazing extensions, their technique and interpretation. Every nuance is meaningful...the swagger, the strut, the slightest pelvic movement suggestively sensuous. There is power and joy, humor and drama, imagination and beauty, vitality and ultimate theatricality!

The curtain-raiser, Blues Suite, has choreography by Ailey, backed by ten traditional tunes. As the program notes, "From the fields and barrelhouses of the Southern Negro sprang the blues — songs of lost love, despair, protest, and anger — hymns to the secular regions of his soul."

Cry, also by Ailey, is dedicated to "all Black mothers everywhere — especially our mothers," and features Deborah Manning in a stunning 20-minute tour-de-force turn.

Rainbow On My Shoulder, set by Donald McKayle, features Ralph Glemore and company in Men on the Chain Gang and Renee Robinson in The Dream. Suite Otis, a tribute to the late Otis Redding with choreography by George Faison, is backed by a half-dozen Redding compositions.

The primary male dance unit is truly phenomenal and, if the ensemble does have a star, it has to be Ralph Glemore, who literally shines throughout!

What About Art? By Meredith Fife Day

Tire tracks lend texture and detail to the foreground of Alexander Pertzoff's mixed media collage, Oil Drums.

Nature Observed, Painted

Alexander Pertzoff is an attentive observer of nature.

His eye for the small occurrence in the large view lends a clue to his assiduous regard for the world outdoors.

Pertzoff's recent paintings in egg tempera and mixed mediums, including watercolor, collage and oil pastel are on exhibit at Gallery on the Green in Lexington through May 17.

For several years Pertzoff worked exclusively in egg tempera, a medium that does not allow for broad brush strokes and is thus suited for the shorter strokes that can define delicate form, fine detail, textures and rhythmic surface pattern.

Characteristic of the works in this medium is Cotton Grass, a golden-hued field which pushes its hilly, curved horizon of evergreens and spidery-limbed trees into the top one-third of the painting.

The grass tips, wildflowers and fern fronds are naturalistically depicted — seen wafting in the autumn breeze. They are, as well, pictorially rhythmic, with their repeated short marks setting up a pattern across the picture's surface.

A similar handling of surface pattern and naturalistic detail may be observed in Corn Stubble, another egg tempera work. Once again, Pertzoff allows his eye and brush to roam and examine the earth's surface, pushing the horizon upward.

The examination continues in Jeep Tracks. Marks that tires have left are explored, then illuminated by the pink snow in which they are embedded.

Pertzoff's interest in the earth's surface and textures does not exclude his looking into waters or thickets of trees.

The lovely small tempera entitled Pond, with its liquid green reflections, and the watercolor Tidal Pool with blue-grey water swirls, are examples of the artist's ability to use his drafting skill, the medium and his palette toward the description of observed natural phenomena.

Twin Beeches are two works side by side in one frame. On one side is a detailed study — perhaps an underpainting — in warm neutral washes, of a beech tree and the surrounding wooded area.

Next to the study is another painting of the same subject executed in a fuller range of color and more intricate detail.

In both, careful shadows are cast across the trees' trunks, and branches are bent and jointed with a kind of specificity that could only come out of hours of careful and caring observation.

There are also included in the exhibit a series of mixed media works in which colorful, perky chickens take on the starring role.

These works feature a looser handling than most of the landscapes displayed. Line plays a more versatile role, too, both across the form of the chickens and in the chicken wire fence of Hilltop Stock Farm which anchors itself right onto the paper's surface, then disappears and reappears as the viewer peers through it to the chickens and farm beyond.

Some of the most recent works, especially those in which collage is used, combine Pertzoff's unerring eye for nature's detail with more abstract considerations.

A row of trees on the horizon and a wedge of land topped by a house are silhouetted in Oil Drums against the light of the sun and the paper to become big shapes in a pictorial drama with all the poise and counterpoint of Chinese landscape painting.

Clearly, in all the works Pertzoff has experienced the nature he paints. And, clearly, the experience seems to renew itself with each painting.

Gallery on the Green is located at 1837 Massachusetts ave. Hours are Tuesday through Saturday 10 to 5. Call 861-6044.

Mothers Day!

1 9 8 6

Skin Skills For Moms

Mother's Day — that special day recognizing mothers, who deserve to be pampered and to look and to feel their best.

Arbonne International, pure sophisticated Swiss skin care offers some tips and information on maintaining healthy skin.

First, let's discuss wrinkles. How do you get them, and if you have them, how do you get rid of them?

Wrinkles occur when, over time, skin loses its water or moisture content. It is similar to the raisin — a grape that has lost its water. It shrivels and becomes dry.

Skin reacts the same way to moisture loss.

So we must find a way to retain the water in our skin.

First, using proper cleansers that are PH-balanced will help. But more importantly, use moisturizer.

Yes, even oily skin needs moisturizer, because it can wrinkle also.

Moisturizers contain humectants which enable skin to retain its water, instead of losing it to the environment. This is one of the most important steps in a good skin care regime.

Another way to help skin maintain water is to drink water — six to eight glasses a day.

Then the moisturizer will lock this water into the skin.

Put that same raisin into water and it plumps up. So too will skin cells plump up when they retain the water they once were losing.

What does PH-balanced mean, and how does that affect skin?

The PH of skin is 5.5. Skin is slightly acidic, which is the body's natural way of protecting it from bacteria.

Most products and soaps are a high PH than the skin, stripping away this protection and enabling skin to be more prone to acne and other skin care problems.

What about different skin types and sensitive skin? Is there a product that can help these people?

Yes. Arbonne has different formulas for different skin types, creating balance and a normal skin type for all. These formulas are unique, and since the ingredients are pure, oily and dry skin people will see a difference in their skin.

Noted Writer Pays Tribute To Mother

Author Edgar Allan Poe's actress-mother died when only 24. As a boy, Poe often was found crying at her grave in Richmond, Va., which now bears a tribute published to her in the Broadway Journal July 19, 1845.

In those days, actors and actresses were looked down on by many people, but Poe wrote proudly:

"The artist of talent is poor indeed, if he does not look with contempt upon the mediocrity of a king. The writer of this article is himself the son of an actress — has invariably made it his boast — and no earl was ever prouder of his earldom than he of his descent from a woman, who, although well-born, hesitated not to consecrate to the drama her brief career of genius and beauty." — CNS

"Thou art thy mother's glass, and she in thee calls back the lovely April of her prime." — William Shakespeare

Mother's Day: How It Happened

Believe it or not, Mother's Day is not the brainchild of a greeting-card company or florist. It isn't the idea of a mother who was tired of being taken for granted.

It's the product of one woman's lifelong obsession.

"Thanks to the tireless, even obsessive labors of Anna Jarvis of West Virginia, we honor all our mothers on the second Sunday in May, the anniversary of her own mother's death in 1905," according to American Heritage magazine.

While the holiday can be credited to Jarvis, the tradition of setting aside a day to honor mothers can be traced back as far as the days of ancient Greeks, who dedicated an annual festival to Rhea, the mother of Jupiter, Pluto and Neptune. Perhaps some vestige of this pagan celebration inspired early Christians to set aside the fourth Sunday of Lent to honor Christ's mother, Mary. On this day, also called "Mothering Sunday," the devout traditionally honored the Virgin Mary with gifts and flowers.

As time went on, Mothering Sunday was looked upon as an opportunity to honor not only Mary, but all mothers. In England it became traditional for the eldest son to give his mother a special gift this day.

Despite this lengthy history, a day to honor mothers was not declared a U.S. holiday until 1914, after years of dedicated campaigning by Jarvis.

Jarvis was the eighth of 11 children born to Anne Reeves Jarvis, a Sunday school teacher at Andrews Methodist Church in Grafton, W.Va., who frequently lectured adults and children on "Great Mothers of the World."

After her mother's death, Jarvis took this theme to heart. Determined to create a national day for honoring mothers, she campaigned vigorously for a number of years, enlisting the aid of sympathetic friends, politicians and clergymen. By 1907, she had arranged at the Grafton church a special service dedicated to mothers to mark the second anniversary of her mother's death. That Sunday, all attendees were given carnations — her mother's favorite flower and a flower still associated with Mother's Day.

The service became an annual event in Grafton. In the following years, at Jarvis's urging, several clergymen in other cities also set aside that Sunday to preach about motherhood.

On May 10, 1913, the U.S. House of Representatives unanimously passed a resolution calling the American mother the greatest source of the country's strength and inspiration and requesting that all officials of the federal government, "as a token of our love and reverence for the mother," wear a white carnation or some other white flower on the second Sunday in May.

On May 8, 1914, a joint resolution was passed by Congress that authorized and requested President Woodrow Wilson to call upon Americans to display the flag on the second Sunday in May as a public expression of devotion to the mother.

In 1933, President Franklin D. Roosevelt issued a Mother's Day proclamation reasserting the principles in Wilson's original document.

Her Image: Jewelry Sets The Stage

If you're pinning your hopes on making this the year you give a Mother's Day gift mom really will like — and use — you can broach the issue and come out in style.

Women — even moms — love jewelry, and one of the most popular pieces of jewelry this season is the brooch or pin.

Since costume jewelry is in fashion, you don't need to invest in a brooch destined to become a family heirloom. You don't have to worry about finding a design that, because of its expense, should complement several of mom's outfits. Costume jewelry is so affordable you can splurge on a pin that will match only one of mom's outfits, because you — or she — can afford to purchase a separate pin for each outfit.

According to a survey by Monet Jewelers, a costume jewelry manufacturer, nearly 50 percent of women aged 18 to 59 purchase costume jewelry for themselves, spending an average of $200 per year. Women prefer costume jewelry to the real thing because it is affordable and innovatively designed, updating basic wardrobes inexpensively, the study said.

Some of the niftiest pins at the moment are baroque with over-size faux jewels and encrusted with pearls, some of which dangle from tiny chains.

As for wearing pins, just about anyplace is fashionable these days — on a lapel, pocket or shoulder pad, at the neck in place of a tie or necklace, down a sleeve or at a cuff.

If you think a pin won't prick mom's fancy, there are other costume jewelry options available. In fact, there is such an array of faux-and-fun fashion at hand that you practically are guaranteed of finding the perfect piece of jewelry for mom at a price that's right for you.

Polished and dull-finish metals in gold and silver tones team up with brightly colored stones or stand alone to create dramatic and flashy earrings, necklaces and bracelets.

Earrings are available in styles from gold-tone hammered disks to dangling hoops and geometric shapes. Multi-link metal chains make popular necklaces and bracelets, as do gold-coin motifs. Chunky, clunky plastic jewelry also is popular — big beads, geometric shapes, bold colors — for necklaces, bracelets and earrings.

Monet offers these tips for choosing quality costume pearls:

— Look for pearls made of glass rather than plastic, since heavier glass best simulates the weight of genuine pearls and hangs properly around the neck.

— Choose costume pearls that are dipped several times in a pearlescent lacquer imparting a luster that looks real and resists damage from perfume, hair spray and cosmetics. Repeated dipping also minimizes chipping and peeling.

— Examine the color and size consistency of pearls on a strand. If the necklace is graduated, the size of each pearl should be perfectly proportionate to the next largest pearl on the strand.

Mothers: At Home Or Work Role Juggling Is Worth It, Say Moms

Today's moms have to be super-moms, whether they split their duties between office and home or devote all their time to motherhood. They're under pressure and had better be ready to handle it — because no matter whether a mother chooses the traditional homemaker or the working mother role, someone will criticize.

Some experts claim total motherhood no longer works, that it leaves the mother unfulfilled and frustrated and the child stifled. Others contend that working mothers are abusing their children with a neglect that is the root for such problems as drug abuse, delinquency, suicide and other emotional dysfunctions among today's youth.

These accusations are guaranteed to fill any mother with concern that she's not doing the best thing possible for her child. Still, no matter what mothering option is selected, most mothers find their children the most important and rewarding part of their lives.

"It's the most difficult role a woman can have, and it's sometimes thankless. But it's rewarding," said family sociologist Rose Somerville.

It also is "only one of the boxes of a woman's life," she said. "She also is a worker, a citizen, a student, a wife, because she has to be."

Women who understand the complexity of today's world realize "they need more than one role. They must take education seriously. They must take an occupation seriously. They must take wifehood as well as motherhood seriously," Somerville said.

And that can lead to serious stress.

Mothers who juggle children, husband and career in a bid for having it all are sometimes downtrodden, always busy women who often feel guilty about a lack of time to devote to any one cause.

One working mother said it this way: "We have to make baby a part of our life, but not give up our life, and still get around the guilt of not being the classic all-giving mother."

Enid Blaylock, an educational psychology professor, however, said it's unrealistic to believe that a mother doesn't have to sacrifice her individuality, independence, freedom or career.

"Being a good mother requires some modification in all these areas," she said.

But that doesn't mean that any of these roles must be forsaken. A woman can fill a variety of roles and, indeed, may need to fill the roles to feel self-fulfilled. But a woman doesn't have to tackle them all at the same time.

"Women have many years to pursue careers, engage in self-fulfilling endeavors and enjoy freedom and independence if they begin childbearing early," Blaylock said.

She believes that without the continuity provided by a loving, nurturing mother who stays at home during a child's first five years, that child can be plagued in adolescence by a slew of psychological problems growing out of insecurity and low self-esteem.

By age 5, a child is equipped physiologically and emotionally to cope without that maternal continuity, she said, and a mother can explore other avenues outside parenting.

"It matters very much if the mother is not the sole caretaker during her child's early formative years, from birth to 5 years," Blaylock said. "During the first six months, an infant forms a bond with its mother, an attachment that provides a sense of belonging, of continuity, of well-being.

"Maintaining this attachment is crucial to the development of a strong personal and family identity. ... No matter how loving the surrogate mother happens to be, she constitutes a disruption of this vital mother-child attachment."

Said Judy Todd, a psychology professor: "I've never seen a piece of evidence that substantiates a statement like that. In fact, there's a lot of evidence that children whose mothers go to work benefit in a lot of ways — they certainly learn independence quicker than most children, and they learn self-responsibility."

Whatever the truth of this issue — if there is a truth — there's no avoiding the fact that the absentee father has been joined by the absentee mother as a high percentage of women enter the work force out of desire or economics or both.

Some people claim that the traditional mother role has been eliminated by fiscal necessity and changing social norms. Women, even women who want to stay at home, no longer can because society won't allow it, Somerville said.

"We have to look at realities. The high divorce rate, high inflation. One sees that young women today have no choice, they probably will have to work," she said.

Blaylock, however, believes that financial security is confused with luxury because of commercial pressure to acquire material possessions.

"The idea that it doesn't matter who takes care of a young child as long as the caretaker is warm and loving was fabricated by the business world to encourage two-pay-check families, thus increasing earning power and better consumption," she said.

Blaylock acknowledged that some mothers actually need to work, but said they were only a minority.

Most psychologists today condemn neither the stay-at-home mother nor the working mother. Most take the middle-of-the-road stance that if a mother feels good about herself and what she's doing, the kids will adjust as long as they're well taken care of. Time will tell.

In the meantime, women will continue to be professionals, students, wives, mothers. Whether motherhood is a woman's only job or whether she's juggling bottles with business, motherhood means sacrifice of some sort — a sacrifice of career, personal time or peace of mind.

HOW INTEREST RATES AFFECT HOUSING DEMAND

The housing market has changed radically! Fifteen years ago, the mortgage interest rate was basically level — buyers went from bank to bank trying to get a 1/4% advantage rate on a mortgage rate. Today, we have to live with interest rates that can fluctuate wildly each year. When interest rates skyrocket houses are harder to sell, and a larger percentage of buyers no longer can qualify for mortgages. This creates a back log of buyers waiting for rates to drop. Economists call this back log "pent-up demand for houses." But when banks have a surplus of money to lend and interest rates drop, thousands of prospective buyers surge into the homebuying market. With growing demand comes a growing price increase in housing. The housing market heats up when interest rates are low. Watch the direction rates are going to decide when you want to enter the market. Remember, mortgage rates affect the affordability of houses.

Louise Ruma-Ivers is the immediate past President of the Greater Boston Women's Council of Realtors, and a past Director of the Marketing Institute for the Greater Boston Real Estate Board. She is a member of the Arlington Historic Districts Committee.

Dot Stein is a Vice President of the Greater Boston Real Estate Board and a Director of its Multiple Listing Service. She was a long-time Arlington Town Meeting member, and a member of the Arlington School Committee.

Police Arrest
Three More
For O.U.I.

By MAUREEN QUINLAN

Police last weekend arrested three more people for drunk driving, including two from Winchester.

Arrested were Paul Hamel, 16, of 4 Taft rd., Mark D. Stevenson, 18, of 70 Hemingway st., and 22-year-old Robert M. Bernier of Somerville.

Hamel escaped injury May 4 at about 6:30 a.m. after his car skidded 249 feet and landed flipped over on its roof in the yard of a Wildwood st. home.

According to police reports, Hamel was driving east on Johnson rd. and failed to negotiate a bend in the road.

Police said damage was done to a wooden fence, a tree and a bush in the yard of the Wildwood st. home.

Hamel took a breathalyzer test, police said.

Hamel faces charges as a first offender at a pre-trial conference May 27 in the Fourth District Court in Woburn.

The second Winchester resident, Stevenson was arrested at the intersection of Church st. and Bacon st. for operating under the influence and driving with defective equipment.

Stevenson was administered field sobriety tests and a breathalyzer test.

Stevenson faces a pre-trial conference May 22 at the Fourth District Court in Woburn.

At about 7:30 p.m. last Friday, a 22-year-old Somerville man escaped injury after he lost control of his truck, which jumped the sidewalk and smashed into Stetson Hall on Elmwood st.

Police arrested Bernier for driving under the influence and driving to endanger.

According to police, Bernier drove up Park st. the wrong way and circled around down Vine st. at a high rate of speed. Police found 45 feet of skid marks.

Stetson Hall suffered structural damage, a broken window frame and smashed window panes.

Bernier requested a breathalyzer test. Police seized a quart and a half of an alcoholic beverage from his truck.

Bernier faces a pre-trial conference May 28 at the Fourth District Court in Woburn.

Complaint Against Store
Employee Denied

A complaint against a Winchester Wine & Spirits employee was dropped after the minor to whom he allegedly sold liquor failed to identify him.

At a hearing at the Fourth District Court in Woburn, the complaint was dropped against the clerk but the minor still faces arraignment May 16.

On the night of April 5, an 18-year-old Berkshire dr. resident allegedly purchased a bottle of vodka at the store without showing identification to an employee.

Winchester police Inspector James B. Gray said he witnessed the purchase, followed the youth and pulled him over on Wildwood st.

Police Arrest
Local Man On Seven Warrants

Police arrested a former Glenwood ave. resident, now of Northcross, Ga., on seven outstanding warrants and car larceny.

At about 10 p.m. May 2, a Cross st. resident called police to report someone sleeping in a car on his property.

When police arrived they ran a check on the man and found warrants for him for receiving stolen property under $100, a $500 cash bail or $5,000 surety, three warrants for forgery and two warrants from the Bedford police for larceny and larceny of a car.

The man was taken to Woburn to be held for court because he could not pay bail.

right front, fender, door and hood of the Firebird and to the right door and fender of the Plymouth.

At 1:23 p.m., a manager at Domino's Pizza told police someone stole a cartop sign from one of the delivery cars while it was parked on Socrates way at 9 p.m., May 3.

At 12 p.m., an Arlington resident was cited for failure to use care and caution when turning after he lost control of his car on Mystic Valley pkwy. and hit a tree. Police found the car resting against a tree. The man was taken to Winchester Hospital and treated for face and head cuts. Police also cited the man for an expired inspection sticker. The car was towed from the scene.

Rotary Club Supports
Alcohol Education

The Winchester Rotary Club recently donated $275 to support the CASPER program, an alcohol education program for all Winchester students.

CASPER's alcohol education curriculum, "decisions about drinking," has units for grades 1-12. Each unit is designed for seven to 10 sessions.

The activity-oriented curriculum attempts to have students discover for themselves consistent truths about alcohol use and misuse throughout their school careers.

GOP Names Cannon Chairman

John L. Cannon of Winchester was elected chairman of the Winchester Republican Town Committee at its special biennial meeting April 17.

Cannon served in the U.S. Army

The program has been accepted by more than 1,500 schools and agencies in 49 states and seven countries.

The program will begin in Winchester schools next fall, according to Winchester juvenile detective Daniel McGee.

McGee says it is important to educate elementary school children and make them aware of future decisions they will have to make about drinking. He said elementary children will inevitably face the pressures of drinking in junior high school.

Corps of Engineers for 30 years moving to Winchester from Vicksburg, Miss., after his retirement in 1981. A graduate of the U.S. Military Academy in 1952, Cannon taught for three years in West Point's math department. In 1957 he received his master's degree in civil engineering from California Institute of Technology.

In addition to his different assignments in this country, Cannon's foreign orders included three years in Germany, two years in Taiwan and one year each in Korea, Thailand and Vietnam.

John and Jane Cannon, who originally came from Clemson, S.C., have two married daughters and a son. He is program director of Nichols Research Corporation in Lynnfield. Town Committee members "look forward to his term of leadership," they said.

COUNTER OFFERS

You're selling real estate. You have told a prospective buyer how much you want for your property, and he has delivered an offer to you. He says he wants to buy, but he won't pay as much as you want. Likewise, you won't agree to sell for the figure the potential buyer says he is willing to pay. You would, however, sell for less than your original asking price. Now is the time for a counter offer.

As with an offer, the best way to make a counter offer is in writing, setting out exactly what your new terms are. Nothing of significance should be left out. This means, in addition to the new price, such important items as how long your counter offer will be open and whether you are willing to provide some or all of the financing in order to obtain the price you want. You should spell out EXACTLY to what extent you are willing to engage in owner financing, including the interest rate and terms of years for the repayment. The written counter offer should include a space for the buyer to sign his acceptance. Once he has signed, a legally binding contract is created.

John Cormier rode a crane to the top of the Winchester Town Hall a few months back, taking pictures to document the damage to the bell tower. Town Meeting members voted last week to issue bonds for $4.7 million to repair and renovate the entire structure.

Town Hall Wins On Second Try

By GEORGE DERRINGER

A proposal to renovate and repair Town Hall picked up 7 percentage points during a second effort to easily win approval of Town Meeting May 1.

Only 65.7 percent of the vote favored the project April 28 but 72.7 percent voted in favor three days later, giving the project an extra cushion beyond the two-thirds vote needed for approval.

During the three-day interim, Town Manager Chad Maurer and at least some of the most vocal opponents of interior renovations rewrote the motion for approval to accommodate several of the foes' concerns.

Exterior work will begin in July with first attention given to the crumbling bell tower.

Interior renovations, with plans still to be approved in detail, begin in January 1987.

The overall cost of the project is estimated at $4.7 million.

At the start of Thursday's session, John Looney moved for reconsideration of the previous rejection. Without reconsideration, neither the interior nor the badly needed exterior repairs to the bell tower could be done.

Maurer told the Town Meeting that bids for exterior repairs would be opened May 15 and he needed to know what would happen.

"If this meeting votes to do only exterior repairs, we'd have to modify the specifications and re-bid the project," he said.

An attempt to delay reconsideration until May 19 failed and Looney, one of the main speakers against the proposal three days earlier, rose.

"Since Monday, I have had occasion to talk to additional people and get additional information," he said. "You now have a motion to create a process and product that will be acceptable to most of us."

The new motion added several checks and balances and created a brand new Town Hall Building Committee to oversee the project. Neither the committee nor the Town Manager will be able to do anything without the other's approval.

Members of the new committee include a selectman, a finance committee member, a permanent building committee member, a planning board member, a registered engineer, a registered architect, a person to represent historical interests and two members at large, all to be appointed by Moderator John Sullivan in consultation with Wade Welch, chairman of the selectmen. Looney also suggested that Congress might take away the "tax exempt" feature of income from municipal bonds. He said that threat means Winchester's bonds should be issued soon.

Alan Macdonald supported the overall project. "If we do the exterior and interior separately, as had been suggested three days earlier, the extra cost will be more than we imagine," Macdonald said.

Lawrence Tobiasson, a member of the permanent building committee, said having two contractors was a poor idea. "At best, public building in Massachusetts is a horrendous deal," he said.

Tobiasson said having two contractors would make the project more difficult.

He cited previous projects, noting, "A project like the police and fire station is a test of one's mettle." Daniel Kenney, chairman of the planning board, was unmoved in his opposition to approval of the project and again said approval would be "a blank check." He made the same arguments three days earlier.

After a coffee break, Town Meeting voted 135-18 to reconsider the project. Kenney followed with an amendment to appropriate only $1.6 million for actual exterior renovation work and final design of interior work.

Asked how much more it would cost to separate inside and outside work, architect Bill Rowe estimated something between $500,000 and $1.5 million.

Tobiasson urged the meeting to reject the proposal this spring but to reconsider a total package, using only one contractor, at the fall Town Meeting.

Kenney's motion for $1.6 million failed in a voice vote.

A vote for the original motion, $4,720,000 in repair and renovation, passed 112-42.

Town Meeting Approves Budget At One Sitting

By GEORGE DERRINGER

Winchester Town Meeting members made relatively short work of the budget Monday night, thanks in part to agreement between the finance committee, selectmen, school committee members and Town Manager Chad Maurer on nearly all articles.

Very few line items provoked any discussion after Moderator John Sullivan read each item, its recommended amount and the motion for approval.

A perennial issue was again in Town Meetings members' minds: publishing a tax list.

Assessor John Murphy said his office would make up a tax list on a computer for anyone who wished. It would cost $20 to $25, he said.

In recent years, Town Meeting appropriated money for printing a tax list but one was never printed and the money reverted to town coffers. Murphy said a $2,100 appropriation was not spent because printing the list would have cost $4,500.

Sullivan took the bull by the horns. "The intent of Town Meeting was to get the book published," he declared.

At Sullivan's direction, assessors were told to get an estimate for printing of a tax list book similar to the green book published in 1973. It cost $2.50.

At Thursday's session at 7:30 p.m. at the high school, assessors will present their estimates.

The budget of the Council on Aging was also amended to provide another $4,105 to allow the council to both add a part-time social worker and increase the hours of the office clerk from 25 to 35 hours per week. Only the social worker had been included in the Town Manager's recommendation.

Clarence Borggaard said the town "spends $60,000 a year on seniors and $13 million on schools. Are you going to nit pick this small amount? It's ridiculous!"

His argument carried the day. Only two or three people had courage to vote "no" in a voice vote.

An amendment to increase the highway budget for additional curbing easily won approval. William S. Stroud said the Dept. of Public Works has a 10-year backlog of curbing requests and asked for another $13,430 in the budget.

Against the advice of the finance committee, Town Meeting members voted to approve the additional amount in an effort to get more up-to-date with requests.

An amendment to increase the youth center budget by $9,309 to make the youth center supervisor a full-time position was not presented Monday but is expected to be considered Thursday night.

All other regular budget items, including the school budget, were approved. The capital improvement projects will be considered Thursday night as the annual Town Meeting continues.

Adult Ed Seeks Courses

Winchester's director of adult education, Karen K. Baker, is planning the fall session.

The program will begin Monday, Sept. 29, and run for 10 weeks through Dec. 10. Most classes will be at Winchester High School during day or evening hours.

If you have a specialty you would like to teach, please contact Baker at 721-7020, ext. 12, between 7:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

"It is necessary that I have a course description as soon as possible if it is to be offered in our fall program," Baker said. "An exciting challenge awaits you if you would like to teach in this popular program."

Town Seeks Board Members

Town officials are seeking applicants for several town boards and committees, including the Town Hall Building Committee formed last week by a vote of the Town Meeting to renovate and repair the historic building.

The Town Hall Building Committee will serve until the town hall project is completed in early 1988 and will oversee all of the $4.72 million project.

Members of the committee, as stipulated by Town Meeting, will include one selectman, one member of the finance committee, one member of the planning board, one member of the permanent building committee, one registered professional engineer, one registered architect, one member representing the historical interests of Winchester and two members at large.

The Town Moderator, in consultation with the chairman of the board of selectmen, will appoint all nine committee members. Those interested in appointment should submit a letter of interest by May 23 to either Wade Welch, chairman of the board of selectmen, or John Sullivan, Town Moderator, at 71 Mt. Vernon St.

The permanent building committee is also seeking members, one to serve a two-year term and two for three-year terms. The committee supervises design and construction of building projects specifically assigned to it by vote of Town Meeting.

The three members to be appointed must include an attorney, a professional engineer and a citizen at large. Letters of interest should be sent to the Town Moderator, 71 Mt. Vernon St., by May 23.

The finance committee is seeking five members to serve terms of three years each. The committee receives and reviews budgets submitted by the town manager, conducts public hearings and files its own recommended budget with Town Meeting members.

Letters of interest may be sent to the Board of Selectmen or the Town Moderator, both at 71 Mt. Vernon St., or to the chairman of the school committee at 154 Horn Pond Brook rd. They must be received by May 23.

The personnel board also seeks citizen applications to the same three addresses as the finance committee. Three members to serve three-year terms are needed on the personnel board. The board conducts research about area wage and working conditions and serves in an advisory capacity to town agencies and the town manager.

The personnel board also assists in coordination of collective bargaining activities with all organized groups except the professional school staff.

Letters of interest should be received by May 23.

New Apartment Project Financed

The Co-operative Bank of Concord has provided $1.9 million in construction financing for development of a 23-unit apartment building in Winchester.

The building, Stonehenge Apartments, is located at 35 Vine St. James K. Lavoie, vice president at the bank, arranged the financing. The builder is owner/developer Richard A. Johnson of R.A. Johnson Realty.

Stonehenge Apartments is a four-story, 32,925 square foot all-concrete structure. It contains 15 two-bedroom and 8 one-bedroom units as well as underground parking facilities.

The "topping off" ceremony is scheduled May 15. The building is expected to be ready for occupancy Sept. 1.

DOGS FOR THE HEARING IMPAIRED

For many years, dogs have performed yeoman service in guiding and protecting the blind. Did you know that dogs are also trained as guides for those with hearing loss? These dogs are free to those who qualify for them. Cost for their training is underwritten by a variety of groups and organizations.

One organization, International Hearing Dogs, Inc., runs 25 training programs around the United States. The dogs—300 to 400 of them each year—learn to respond to sounds, then alert the hearing-impaired owner to each sound's source. The dogs' loyalties usually transfer to their new owners quickly, within a five-day period. For info, contact, International Hearing Dogs, Inc., 5901 East 89th Avenue, Henderson, CO 80640. HOW PEACE CAME TO THE WORLD

Edited by Earl W. Foell and Richard A. Nenneman

It can happen. In the year 2010 the world is at peace and the threat of nuclear devastation has vanished. How has this come about? Through the imaginative ideas of forty men and women—lawyers, doctors, professors, conflict research specialists, and others who think about peace in a different way, who do not accept that war is inevitable.

The wealth of original and workable approaches to peace presented in this book has been selected from entries to "Peace 2010," a contest sponsored by The Christian Science Monitor.

This book is available for sale in your local Christian Science Reading Room.

"The essays collected in this volume are sound ideas of what all nations of the world must do to make our planet safer for ourselves and for future generations." Ronald Reagan

"The book is a superb reminder that people everywhere owe a duty to the children to safeguard the future." International Physicians for the Prevention of Nuclear War, recipients of the 1985 Nobel Peace Prize

Rotary Gives Chefalo Second Harris Fellowship

Harry Chefalo, one of Winchester's best-known citizens, also became the Winchester Rotary Club's most-decorated member April 15.

Named the recipient of a Paul Harris Fellowship in 1978 for his many years of work in the club, Chefalo last month became the first club member to be honored twice. The Harris Fellowship is named for the founder of Rotary International.

Club President Chuck Armstrong made the presentation to a very surprised recipient.

"I told my wife I didn't know why she made my reservations for Tuesday night instead of Wednesday," he said. She knew in advance of his honor.

The second Paul Harris award noted Chefalo's "untiring devotion and outstanding service above self to Rotary."

"Harry has been the major fundraiser for the club for many years," Armstrong said. "He has managed the Rotary Barn activities, which are our major source of funds, and has contributed many, many hours."

A multiple Paul Harris Fellowship is unusual and is the highest honor that can be given by Rotary International, Armstrong observed, after a member is recommended by his home club.

Chefalo has also been involved in many other civic activities. He was elected to the finance committee in 1946 and became a selectman in 1950.

He has since served in many other roles, including sewer and water commissioner and, most recently, on the Town Hall Advisory Committee. That committee was dissolved last week after Town Meeting approved its proposal.

Friends Of Library To Hear Wine Expert Elia

Friends of the Winchester Public Library will hold their annual meeting at 3 p.m. Sunday, May 18, at the library.

Richard L. Elia, publisher and editor of the Quarterly Review of Wines magazine, New England's only wine magazine, will speak about wine buys, wine trends, wine auctions, wine investments, and wine news generally.

Elia, a Winchester resident, is the wine commentator for radio station

WEEI. He has a weekly wine program at 11 a.m. Wednesdays.

Elia has been head of the Channel 2 wine auction for several years and is well-known in the field. He is also a frequent contributor of wine information for many Boston media, including Boston Magazine, WBUR and WGBH Radio.

He will be available to answer questions.

Admission is free. Wine and cheese will be served.

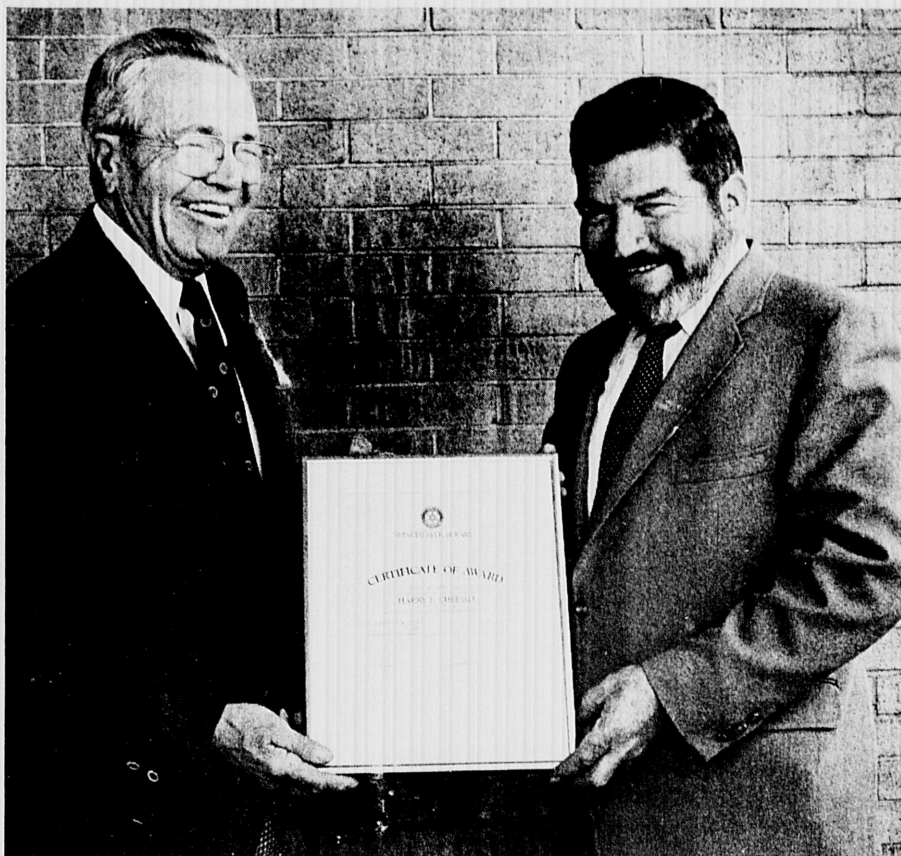

Homes Sought For Japanese Students

Summer homes for Japanese students visiting America for one month are being sought in the Winchester area.

In an exchange program sponsored by LEX America, Japanese and American students aged 12-19 change places for a month to learn each other's way of life.

The Japanese students arrive July 24 and depart Aug. 22. They are screened, fully insured and bring their own spending money, but need to find families willing to show them American sights.

More information about hosting a student is available by calling Tracey Nickerson at 661-2612.

Panel Will Discuss Day Care Issue

Winchester residents are invited to a panel discussion on family daycare to be held at the Burlington Holiday Inn, May 20 at 7 p.m.

The event, sponsored by the Family Daycare Provider Support Network of the Mystic Valley Council for Children and the Child Care Resource Center, will help area residents learn about setting up a home daycare business.

Demand for quality childcare in Massachusetts far exceeds supply.

Family daycare, which is the care of from one to six children in a private residence regulated by the State Office for Children, is the most popular form of childcare for very young children.

At the May 20 event, family daycare providers, parents, Senator Richard Kraus and a representative from the State Executive Office of Human Services have been invited to lead a panel discussion.

If you are interested in attending this panel discussion please contact Mary McCarthy, community representative at the Mystic Valley Council for Children, 729-4350 or Susan Twombly at the Child Care Resource Center, 547-1063.

Seniors Caution Town On Tipping Fee Hike

Both of Winchester's major senior citizen organizations, one an agency of the town and one private group, have cautioned selectmen about a proposal to increase tipping fees for residential rubbish haulers who use the town transfer station.

In a letter dated May 1, Council on Aging President Helen Dame said the town group "is concerned about the proposed increase in fees for transfer station use, especially, as it affects the older residents in town."

She wrote, "Many elders are dependent upon private haulers. . . Some seniors on fixed income cannot afford an increase in fees. Since the elderly represent nearly 20 percent of the town's population, an increase in the fees would impact upon a sizeable group in town."

The letter does not specifically ask selectmen to reject an increase in fees but "to review the proposal for a fee increase, keeping the needs of the senior population in mind as a priority."

A letter from Leonor M. Rich, president of the private Winchester Seniors Association, calls the proposed increase in fees from about $1 per ton to $38 per ton a "great concern to seniors who do not have any means of taking care of refuse other than using the services of private haulers."

She asks selectmen to consider that "19.77 percent of the population fall in the elderly group and the rising cost presents a major problem for those on fixed income" before taking action.

Her letter was delivered to selectmen Monday afternoon.

The town Dept. of Public Works has recommended increased tipping fees to private haulers because of rising costs to the town and the disposal district in which it participates.

Star, Other Century Newspapers To Be Sold

"We are very pleased that the Century Newspapers will become part of the News-Transcript family," said Hopson. "These high-quality weekly newspapers fit well with our commitment to good community journalism, and the communities they serve are among the most attractive in the Boston area."

"Becoming part of Harte-Hanks means greater opportunities for our employees," Jorgensen said, "and Harte-Hanks' excellent reputation for quality journalism and community service ensures that our newspapers will be in good hands."

Commenting on the acquisition, Harte-Hanks President Robert G. Marbut said: "We are particularly pleased with the Century acquisition because it contributes to our growth strategy — to concentrate our resources in fewer, larger markets. We believe the Boston market is one of the most attractive in the United States."

Harte-Hanks Communications Inc. currently owns and operates 23 daily newspapers and more than 100 non-daily publications, including weekly newspapers, advertising publications produced by newspapers, city and tourism magazines and a trade publication for the radio industry.

The company also produces shoppers that are zoned into 413 separate editions reaching 4.8 million households each week.

Also owned and operated by Harte-Hanks are four VHF network affiliated television stations. The company owns cable television systems serving 143,000 basic subscribers. Harte-Hanks owns and operates six marketing services companies and 25 direct mail systems reaching 96 percent of American households.

The company has five alternate delivery systems which can reach more than 1 million households via hand delivery. Harte-Hanks also operates a nationwide trucking service specializing in delivery of advertising materials.

Town Meeting Members Vote For Higher Sewer User Fees

Wade Welch, chairman of the board of selectmen, noted that the new agency is charged with the cleanup of Boston Harbor, estimated to cost $3 billion. Rates will rise 77 percent this year, Welch said.

Welch admitted that the selectmen's recommendation to raise the rates from 60 to 90 cents would still leave the sewer division in Winchester with an operating deficit. But two selectmen opposed any increase and the 90-cent figure won the support of three selectmen only after lengthy wrangling.

There will be no increase this year in water rates.

Maurer addressed Town Meeting members, noting that the MWRA is legally exempt from restraints of Proposition 2½. He and others have protested the legality of passing a $36 million MDC debt on to the MWRA, however.

"Winchester's share of that debt is $360,000," Maurer said.

Finance Committee Chairman Eric Bradlee made the motion for an even greater increase to $1.05, enough to cover all of the increased MWRA assessments to the town.

"Some non-taxpayers are large water users," Bradlee said. "And the finance committee believes user fees are substantially more equitable than a general tax."

Bradlee also said the projection is for 40 percent sewer rate and 20 percent water rate increases each year in the near future.

Former selectman Mike Saraco took the floor. He said the Town Meeting was the only body with the authority to set water and sewer rates. Saraco recalled a motion he made at Town Meeting 10 years ago, saying his amendment took rate-setting power from selectmen but gave them the sole right to make recommendations.

But any amendment from the finance committee did not fit into the scheme of things, Saraco said. "This Town Meeting should either adopt or reject the (one) recommendation of selectmen," he said.

Welch pointed out that some residents would rather underwrite operating deficits in the property tax rate because property taxes are an itemized deduction on income tax returns. Town spending has been held in check enough to allow that plan, even within the limitations of Proposition 2½.

Town Meeting member David Mortensen spoke in favor of the finance committee's amendment for a $1.05 rate. "We might as well pay as we go," he said.

Robert Ericson agreed. "Since the MWRA has no limits imposed by Proposition 2½, it makes no sense to let it draw on our pool of funds (property taxes) that has limits," he said.

Moderator John Sullivan, addressing Saraco's contention earlier that the Town Meeting should act only on the recommendation of selectmen, read Saraco's motion of 10 years earlier.

"Water rates shall be set by the Town Meeting after a public hearing and recommendations by the board of selectmen," he quoted. Sullivan said the wording allowed Town Meeting to set the rate "in whatever way it chooses to do so."

Town Meeting voted 90-64 to substitute the $1.05 rate.

Selectman Frank Sopper rose to oppose any increase in the sewer rate. Sopper pointed to more than $500,000 in reversions, money appropriated but not spent, from last year's town budget.

"The MWRA bill should be paid out of last year's taxes," Sopper contended. "Why pay the bill forever when we can pay it in one lump sum?" he asked, arguing against a permanent rate increase.

Sopper also said some of the state's $600 million surplus is likely to be given to MWRA or to cities and towns.

Clarence Borggaard, longtime Town Meeting member, provided a chuckle. He said he didn't want to push the increase into the future "when we get old and have to pay for it then."

The higher rate quickly passed on a voice vote.

The Rewards of Caring.

Working in a nursing home in Massachusetts is a very rewarding experience. As anyone who works in a nursing home will tell you, there's no feeling quite like it. To us, the most important people are the people we care for, and there's nothing more satisfying than the joy of bringing them pleasure.

The more than 50,000 people in Massachusetts who work in nursing homes are special individuals who have dedicated their lives to ensuring that frail elders and disabled citizens who need 24 hour care are able to continue leading fulfilling and productive lives as valued members of their communities.

The citizens of the Commonwealth should be aware of the many contributions that have been made, and will continue to be made, by nursing home residents with the support of caring nursing home staffs. May 11-17 is National Nursing Home Week. We invite you to visit us during this special week and throughout the year, and experience for yourself, the rewards of caring.

'Lifeline' Helps Subscribers Stay In Own Homes

In the two years since the inception of the Winchester Hospital Lifeline program, the 24-hour emergency service has helped subscribers living alone remain independent.

That independence comes from knowing "help is just the push of a button away" if the subscriber should suddenly become ill, according to Winchester Hospital Lifeline Coordinator Dorothy F. Roemer.

"They're less stressed ... they know that help is within reach," Roemer said of the 60 residents now using the program.

Families of Lifeline subscribers are also relieved "that an extra pair of eyes" is available to act as a portable monitoring system that allows an elderly or disabled relative security and freedom in their home, she continued.

The system meets the individual needs of both the subscribers and their families and is available for a long or short term use.

One man caring for his elderly mother following her surgery at the hospital was reluctant to leave her home alone during her convalescence despite the fact he had to return to California to care for his daughter who was ill.

"He was relieved to know the Lifeline service was available," Roemer said, because it enabled him to return home knowing that his mother, while on her own, could still contact the hospital for help within moments.

The service is not limited to bedridden home residents and is often used by active elderly or disabled persons. One woman wears her Lifeline unit while she works on her garden, taking advantage of the 200-foot radius of the device. The communicator can also be turned off, if needed.

The Winchester Hospital Lifeline service works by providing members with a personal emergency response system that helps them contact the hospital if a health problem should suddenly arise while they are home alone.

The subscriber uses a Lifeline communicator pin that can be clipped to clothing, or worn as a pendant or bracelet. The device is compact, lightweight, portable and easy to use.

In the event of a problem, the wearer simply presses the "HELP" button on the communicator which activates an electronic signal through the telephone to the Emergency Response Center located in the Winchester Hospital Emergency Room.

A Lifeline response volunteer will then contact a friend or family member, specially designated by the subscriber, to check on the problem. If medical assistance is needed, an ambulance will be dispatched to the subscriber's home.

Maintenance of the Lifeline communicator consists of a simple periodic resetting of the device by the wearer. The unit works by battery in a power failure and will activate itself if no resetting occurs. In addition, subscribers receive monthly calls from Lifeline volunteers to check the service.

Because the Emergency Response Center keeps a personal file on each subscriber, they are familiar with the background of any member who activates the device. In the case of one elderly Reading man with a heart condition, the file card denotes that an ambulance should always be sent immediately because the condition has been so severe in the past.

The hospital service area covered by Lifeline includes Winchester, Reading, Woburn, Burlington and Wakefield, as well as other outside communities. The only commitment subscribers make when joining the program is that they be taken to Winchester Hospital if medical treatment is needed when the unit is activated.

Although the Lifeline program is available at only a nominal fee, Roemer said often the service is a gift from other concerned family members. Anyone with a disabled or elderly relative should consider the gift of Lifeline as an additional helping hand, she said.

Winchester Shares New Life Group

By EDWARD ENGEL

Area residents whose goal it is to educate the community about rights of the unborn have formed an Arlington-Belmont-Winchester chapter of a state pro-life organization.

The area chapter of the 40-chapter Massachusetts Citizens For Life was created two months ago, says co-founder and president Jan Hardy, because "there are local goals and statewide goals. It would be impossible for the state level to meet local needs. A state chapter could not come into Arlington and educate the community, for example."

Massachusetts Citizens For Life was created to "foster respect for human life, from conception through old age," she says.

Hardy, who along with the current Cambridge chapter president Ruth Pakaluk founded the local chapter, sees the goal of the group in Arlington as primarily educational. "We want to educate the community in respect to the unborn."

Chapter member and Arlington resident Marjorie Mills says the chapter acts largely as a referral group. "We're very supportive to a woman who is pregnant and doesn't think she can continue with her pregnancy. We will refer her to other agencies that will provide her with free pregnancy testing, or a place to live, or cribs."

Mills believes that abortions can leave psychological scars on women.

"They (women) do not realize just what they have within their bodies, and the abortionist will tell them it's just a blob of tissue, not a human being," says Mills. "And many times a woman will have an abortion, and she will not know what's going on during the abortion. Later, she can go through a lot of mental difficulties."

Mills says she joined Mass. Citizens For Life because she has been a pro-life supporter since before the 1972 Supreme Court decision that legalized abortions.

Among the chapter's educational activities are sending speakers to schools and arranging for community screenings of such anti-abortion movies as "The Silent Scream."

Most of the group's other activities are legislative. For instance, the chapter is now contacting state congressmen on a referendum it wants passed on the November ballot. The referendum would put to a vote the question of Medicaid-funded abortions. Last year, Medicaid spent approximately $1.4 million statewide on abortions.

Mills says she does not like the image of pro-life supporters as fanatics. She says that although occasionally a pro-life group member will approach a woman outside of an abortion clinic, it is "not to threaten her, but to ask her, 'Is this really what you want.'"

Mills says that a woman's boyfriend or parents often push her into getting an abortion without first considering the woman's needs.

Hardy says the chapter was started to foster respect for the elderly, as well as the unborn. "There's a tremendous amount of suffering (among the elderly). I'd like to see more members give more time to already existing organizations like Meals-on-Wheels and nursing homes."

The Arlington-Belmont-Winchester chapter meets on the fourth Tuesday of each month at the St. James Convent meeting room on Appleton st. in Arlington.

Although the chapter has only 15 members now, Hardy says, "Small things start small and grow from there."

"(Our group) is filled with love and caring by dedicated people," says Mills. "We want to inform people that there are alternatives to abortion, and very happy alternatives."

WINCHESTER STAR

Rehabilitative Medicine Specialist Loves His Work, Town

By GEORGE DERRINGER

Dr. Bhagwan Shahani of Winchester loves his work and the town of Winchester about equally.

Shahani says his field of rehabilitative medicine is "very fascinating."

And he says living one year in Wenham, away from the rolling hills of Winchester, "was enough. It was almost like a sabbatical away from home."

As chairman of the electromyography and motor control department of Massachusetts General Hospital (MGH), Shahani's latest discovery is that the effects of polio didn't end years ago.

About 250,000 Americans survived the killer disease that was wiped out by the Salk vaccine in the early 1950s. Many regained most or all of their mobility and strength, Shahani says.

Unfortunately, the effects of the polio virus didn't end. Many victims now experience new muscle weakness, fatigue and pain as a direct result of having polio 30 or 40 years ago.

Shahani and several colleagues at MGH are able to precisely diagnose polio's after-effects on muscles and nerves. Therapy and rehabilitation are often possible.

But the doctors fear many polio survivors aren't aware their aches and pains are related to the disease.

"Because symptoms vary, and the victims are getting older, many post-polio effects are mistaken for something else, usually just the aging process," Shahani says.

Electromyography, Shahani's field of specialty, is the science of measuring electrical impulses in individual muscles or muscle fibers.

"For me, just learning how to correct a physical problem isn't enough. I want to know what is causing the problem, what is really going on," the doctor says.

Shahani earlier became well-known for using the technique to aid musicians, especially pianists, who developed trouble moving their fingers.

"For people using very fine motor movements, an impairment of even a millisecond in getting the message to a muscle is critical," Shahani notes.

Increasingly, the same science is being used for athletes. "They must also have proper control of their body movements," he says.

Blessed with a scientific mind and a desire to help people, Shahani says it isn't enough to tell a performer to rest and maybe his fine motor control will improve.

"I want to know exactly what goes wrong," he says. Biofeedback, which Shahani says is often misused by zealots, is a part of his study.

Shahani is dismayed with the "true believers" in biofeedback because, as he said several times during an interview, "No medicine will treat all diseases."

Recently, Shahani and Dr. Robert Brown have decreased the amount of work they do with musicians.

"There are so many interesting things to do, but I enjoy all of my work," Shahani says. "Very few people get to do what they enjoy. The motor system of the human body is very fascinating."

All areas of rehabilitation, not just musicians and polio victims, are important to Shahani. In 1984, he taught the first course in "Principles and Practice of Rehabilitation Medicine" at Harvard Medical School.

Rehabilitation medicine has never been very "big" in New England says, because Harvard has not emphasized it. But Shahani's interest in the field is more than professional.

"Dr. Howard Rusk, the father of rehabilitation medicine, served as the father of the bride when my wife and I were married," he says.

Maya Shahani is also a physician with her own pediatrics practice in Beverly. She is considering opening an office in Winchester or Lexington.

Shahani developed an interest in rehabilitative medicine in his native Bombay, India, before coming to the States in 1963. Now he and MGH are collaborating to build "another Mass General, a world-class hospital" in the Indian city.

Using funds from the Hinduja Foundation, the new hospital will give free care to one-fourth of its patients and subsidized care to an equal number.

The National Indian Medical Institute has asked Shahani to organize a post-medical program in neurology. Doctors from India will come to Mass General to learn and MGH doctors will teach there.

But a large portion of Shahani's mail right now is from polio victims who send money to further research on post-polio effects. Stories about Shahani's work have appeared in every publication from The China Post to The New York Times Magazine.

Sometimes Winchester gets a "plug" in those articles. After all, a magazine article was partly responsible for his decision to come here.

"You remember when Winchester was named one of America's 10 best suburbs by Ladies Home Journal? Well, that reinforced my impression of Winchester as the right place to move," Shahani said.

A colleague had also suggested Winchester after Shahani investigated a few other area towns and rejected them.

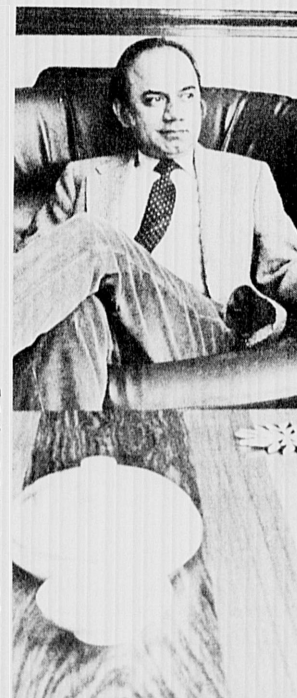

For several years, Shahani has dreamed of taking piano lessons. "No, I haven't started yet," he confesses. "But I will. Two interests are driving me: my love of music and my interest in motor control."

Very recently, Shahani founded a new national society, the American Academy of Clinical Neurophysiology, whose president is Dr. Robert R. Young of MGH. The group will hold its first convocation June 3 to 8 at the Westin Hotel in Boston.

"We have several hundred members already and we never even sent out a letter," Shahani said. "There was clearly a need and an interest."

Shahani and his family, which includes 13-year-old son Robin, keep busy in many ways. But Old Village dr. in Winchester is home.

"Just look out the window," he says. "I love this place. I couldn't live without it."

BEACON HILL ROLL CALL

The House and Senate, "Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local senators' votes on three roll calls and local representatives' votes on five roll calls from the week of April 28-May 2.

Abortion (H 5338)—A Constitutional Convention approved 123-69, a proposed constitutional amendment stating "no provision of the Constitution shall prevent the General Court from regulating or prohibiting abortion unless prohibited by the U.S. Constitution, nor shall any provisions of the Constitution require public or private funding of abortion or the provision of services or facilities therefor, beyond that required by the U.S. Constitution. The provisions of this article shall not apply to abortions required to prevent the death of the mother."

Supporters argued abortion is murder and said the amendment will allow the legislature to eventually enact bills to give the state tough anti-abortion laws.

Opponents defended "pro-choice" and argued abortion is not murder but is a private matter for an individual to decide. They said anti-abortion laws will simply result in illegal and unsafe abortions.

A "Yea" vote is for the amendment. A "Nay" vote is against it. The proposed amendment now goes on the November 1986 ballot for voter consideration.

Senator Richard Kraus voted no. Representative Sherman Saltmarsh voted yes.

Prescriptions (S 186)—Senate 20-9, rejected an amendment to a bill which allows registered nurses to dispense some drugs in more than a single dose in certain family planning clinics.

The amendment would prohibit the drugs from being dispensed without a written or oral prescription of a physician. Amendment supporters said the law is vague and claimed the amendment insures that birth control and other pill prescriptions will not be written by nurses.

Kraus voted no.

Guns (H 1919)—House 107-36, rejected a bill tightening regulations regarding firearm sales and record keeping.

The bill requires gun license applicants to successfully pass a written and practical exam in the safe handling and use of firearms to be administered by police departments or National Rifle Association clubs.

Supporters said the bill will simply insure that gun owners are educated and knowledgeable about guns.

Opponents said the bill is too restrictive and noted the problem of liability for gun clubs and communities administering the test. Saltmarsh voted no.

You Can Find Love Notes In Coffee Shops, On Roadways

By TERRY MAROTTA

It was Sunday and it was spring again.

The earth had awakened, kicked into the grow mode and sent spiky antennas of green up in the moist dark soil.

It was Sunday, and the geese were out early, honking like cranky commuters and gossiping at the edge of the pond.

Spring-thirsty humans, impelled by the urge to connect with nature, waded among them, the tag-ends of muffins and day-old bread at the ready for scattering.

But birds were above such measly forms of tribute; they ignored these featherless bipeds and strolled past them like property owners, surveying their holdings.

The few cars that were out looked bright, crayon-colored and toylike. Seeming to head nowhere in particular, they described playful circles on the map of the morning.

My own car made similar festive turns, and, parting a curtain of church bells, capered past gardens nodding with sleepy tulips and tossing with the daffodils' more boisterous dance.

It brought me in time to a coffee shop, doing, at that hour, a brisk business in fragrance.

Folks entered the place singly and by twos, settled into booths or perched upon stools, sighing with satisfaction as they sniffed the various scents.

I watched them as they drank in the pungent mahogany fumes of their coffee.

They rolled the heavy china mugs that held it between their hands, inhaled deeply, and with the measured deliberation of chemists, introduced to it the thick witchcraft of cream.

Eggs snoozed in tidy rows on the stainless steel counter, dreaming rich high-protein dreams of the origins of life. They moved in twos and threes to the snapping surface of the griddle, where limber and expert wristwork transformed them into crisp Over-Easies and fluffy folds of Omelet and the creamy sling of Scrambleds.

Bacon, meanwhile, having begun the day flat as the world before Columbus, took on character and topography as it crackled on the heat; muttered and sizzled while it shrank like a witch basted by virtue in a fairy tale.

Toast popped in syncope. Muffins steamed and Danish drizzled in sugary excess.

Over all of these foods, and over the people that consumed them, the sunlight poured, buttery and abundant, from a window facing East.

A woman entered with her hat on in deference to the day's special character. A man came in with his toupe off in tribute to the same. I knew both of these folks and could not have said which looked happier or more festive: she in her headgear resembling pigeons nesting in some cabbage, or he in the honest gleam of his Sunday baldness.

It was time to go though.

I climbed back in my red car, half expecting to find a giant wind-up key protruding from its rear. Together we sniffed out the path toward home.

We passed a hillside of apple trees huddled close in that way they have, limbs held high and encircling each other's shoulders. Their crabbed old branches whispered of death; their blossoms giggled and said they never heard of the word.

Some folks attend religious services as a regular thing in the course of their weekend. I do myself and take comfort in the music and the beauty of the place and the warm sustaining presence of others come to make a pool of quiet in their week.

We're looking for God, I guess.

When you go about in the world on a morning like this one, you see that God is looking for us, too. And leaving us love notes, both in the coffee shops and on the roadways.

Left, Cynthia Whetstone, Marcia Frado, and William McElhiney have been elected officers at Winchester Savings Bank. Whetstone and McElhiney will be Assistant Vice President's and Frado and Robert Gaff will be Assistant Treasurer's.

Town Day May 31

With Town Day '86 only a little over three weeks away, activities and events are rapidly being finalized for the big day, Saturday, May 31 (rain date June 1).

The day will begin with a 'Fun Run' at 9 a.m. followed by a '10K Race' at 9:45 a.m. Registration for both races is at the Recreation Dept. office at McCall Jr. High School.

For kids who think the right way to start the day is with a fishing pole in hand, the annual Kiwanis Fishing Derby will begin at 9:15 a.m. To register, pick up a form at the Sports Shop.

From 10 a.m. on, the center of town will be closed to traffic so pedestrians can wander down the streets stopping at display booths set up by merchants, community groups or individuals. If interested in booth space, pick up a form at the Chamber of Commerce office as soon as possible.

Scheduled events will include a Spelling Bee for elementary age students at the end of which the winner of the essay contest will also be announced. 'Odyssey Puppets' will return with Cecil and Sebastian, a great favorite of past Town Days. And, it would not be a Town Day without athletic events such as the three-legged race and the messy of messies, a pie eating contest.

At a stage set up over the Duck Pond, there will be continuous music starting around 11 that morning. Three Winchester High School student bands will put on performances, 'Oasis', 'The Blues Connection' and 'Soapbox' which features Kathy Kingsbury as vocalist. Both Gerry Skinder and Rick Cyge will perform on guitars.

There will again be boat rides on the Duck Pond all day. The Police and Fire Department will be open all day for tours.

Ex-Cello-O Purchases Division

Ex-Cell-O Corporation and TRW Inc. have agreed to the sale to Ex-Cell-O of TRW's Compressor Components Division. The division, with annual sales of about $100 million, produces jet engine components.

Ex-Cell-O's McCord Winn Division produces precision parts at its plant on Washington St. in Winchester.

The agreement was announced by E. Paul Casey, president and chief executive officer of Ex-Cell-O, and Richard A. Campbell, executive vice president of TRW Inc.

"This acquisition supports our strategy of broadening our aerospace customer and product base, and it brings us added experience and state-of-the-art facilities that complement our existing business," said Casey.

"Our customers and our employees should be pleased that Ex-Cell-O has decided to acquire this division," Campbell said. "The operation will enjoy the benefit of Ex-Cell-O's experience and reputation in the industry as well as its diversity and stability."

The purchase price is subject to final determination at the closing, which is expected within 60 days. The acquisition is expected to make a positive contribution to Ex-Cell-O's earnings, company officials said.

Ex-Cell-O's aerospace/defense segment contributed $414 million of the company's $1.14 billion in sales in 1985. Ex-Cell-O also manufactures precision products for automotive and industrial applications.

TRW, based in Cleveland, Ohio, provides high-technology products and services primarily for electronics and space systems and car and truck markets worldwide. In 1985, TRW sales totaled about $6 billion.

High School Math Team Performance Honored

Winchester High School's mathematics team has been recognized by Raytheon Company for the team's outstanding performance in math-related competitions this year.

At an awards luncheon in Andover, Winchester's six-member team was honored for its second place finish in the state mathematics tournament as well as top placement in league competitions held earlier in the year.

The Winchester team and 15 other top high school math teams were recognized as part of Massachusetts Mathematics Day, which honored the state's top mathematics teams and individuals. The day's activities, hosted by Raytheon, included an awards luncheon, a tour of Raytheon's Microelectronics Center, and a special address by Edwin Kessler, director of the National Severe Storm Center in Norman, Okla.

In his remarks, Kessler praised the group, saying that each student "has the potential to make a difference in the advancement of science and high technology in the next decade."

John Kelly, Winchester's math team advisor, said that "being recognized in this way is a real tribute to the students who devote hours of their free time after school, on weekends, and during vacations to make the Math League a success. It is truly a team effort and a nice way to finish the state competition."

SCHOOL NEWS

The team will next compete in the New England Invitational Tournament in mid-May at Canton High School. More than 50 schools will compete.

Team members from Winchester include Derek Rutherford, Andreas Coppi, Robert Southworth, Jun Urano, Michael Chen, Michael McCandless and advisor Mary Mirka.

Math League competitions began in the state nearly 30 years ago when a small group of North Shore schools decided inter-school competitions would provide an added dimension to a student's math education. Today, more than 3,000 students from 175 schools in the state participate in math league competitions each year.

Raytheon Company is the corporate sponsor of Mathematics League in the Commonwealth.

V-O Plant

Sale Is Friday

The traditional annual Mother's Day Plant Sale will be held at the Vinson-Owen School from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Friday, May 9.

The sale originally was at the Parkhurst School. After that school's closing the sale continued at Vinson-Owen by popular demand. It is traditionally the Friday before Mother's Day and provides an excellent opportunity for children to buy gifts for mothers and grandmothers.

Sponsored by the Vinson-Owen Parents' Association, and under the chairmanship of Anne Lacey, flats, potted and hanging plants are for sale. Offered are coleus, petunias, Volunteers are needed and welcome to help children at the plant sale. The public is invited.

'Telling It Like It Is' Talk Slated

The Alternative Homes Program of the Mystic Valley Mental Health Center will present the fourth program in the "Telling It Like It Is" series, "Pressure," at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, May 8, in the Barn, 186 Bedford St., Lexington.

"Telling It Like It Is" focuses on adolescent concerns and problems.

Vinson-Owen Young Writers

Vinson-Owen sixth graders are writing a collection of short stories, including mystery, adventure, science-fiction and children's stories, and are putting them together as a book which is on display at the school office.

P. Kennedy Tully, chairman of the school and community committee, reported the results of a comprehensive statistical survey of the community and the needs, goals and abilities of the students in McCall.

Other members of the committee were: staff members Joseph Dilorio, Irene Halstrom and Edmund Musteikis, assistant superintendent Robert D. Fitzgerald, school committee member Steven Powers, and Elizabeth Sayre, who represented parents.

The next phase of the self-study will be the approval of a statement of philosophy and goals. Charles Corley, industrial arts teacher, is chairman of the philosophy and goals committee.

After-School Music Program Taps Into A Real Community Need

BY MAUREEN QUINLAN
Winchester Music Program has taken on a new name, Winchester Community Music School.
Coordinator Corie Nichols of Oxford st. says the reason for the name change is "to reflect professionalism" and to distinguish the after-school program from the public school program.
"Our program is a supplement to what happens in school," explains Nichols.
Coordinator Sandy Thompson of Samoset rd. emphasizes, "We don't want to sell this in opposition [to the public program]."
One aspect of the program that distinguishes it from the public school program is it offers lessons to students on a one-to-one basis.
"We have discovered a lot of people like the one-to-one attention," says Nichols.
"We're tapping into a real need in the community and it hasn't been a real hard sell," says Thompson.
In the after-school program, beginner through advanced lessons are offered to 5-year-olds through adult.
In the public school system, lessons begin in third and fourth grades and end in sixth grade.
Nichols says several students in Winchester who want to learn to play an instrument when they are in junior high or high school are out of luck because beginner lessons are only offered in the elementary schools.

This, she says, is how the after-school program really does supplement the public school program.
The music program began six years ago with the help of The Belmont Music School, which provided leadership, helped with bookkeeping and hired teachers.
The program has expanded tenfold. What used to be a staff of three teachers and 30 students has expanded to 28 teachers and 225 students.
The school is open four days a week after school from 2:30 to about 7 p.m. at McCall Junior High School.
Lessons are given on three floors.
On a given day, Nichols says, eight or nine lessons are in progress on all three floors.
Nichols says it's important to spread lessons over three floors because of sound problems. Other instrument sounds can cause a break in a student's concentration, Nichols says.
Students benefit from private lessons because they progress at their own pace while getting undivided attention from teachers.
A typical lesson between a teacher and a student consists of constant back and forth playing, talking and coaching. A teacher plays a portion of a musical piece to give the student a clear idea of the piece and the student follows.
The back-and-forth method has proven very effective, Nichols says.

Instrumental lessons available for students include banjo, baritone cello for age 5 and up, clarinet, classical guitar, tuba, viola, oboe, guitar, recorder, trumpet and organ. Voice lessons are also offered.
The caliber of musicians that teach is outstanding, says Nichols. Most are professional musicians from the Boston area.
When a visitor walks through the empty halls of McCall, sounds of trumpets blaring, drums beating and clarinets squeaking can be heard faintly behind classroom doors.
But Nichols says a student doesn't have to be 5 years old to join the program. A eurythmics class is a good way to introduce a 3-year-old to the world of music.
"It is important to develop the pleasure of listening and playing at a young age," explains Nichols.
Nichols says music has always been significant in her life.
An accomplished pianist, Nichols enjoys singing also. "It's an enriching part of everyone's life," she says.
Both Nichols and Thompson attribute the growth to a "need in the community" and word-of-mouth.
Nichols said before the program started, many parents were driving outside of the community to provide private lessons for their children.
Because the program is accessible and convenient, community involvement is peaking.

NOTES FROM THE BLACKBOARD

Hospital Tour

Lincoln School first graders visited Winchester Hospital recently. They saw many interesting things, including the x-ray and emergency rooms. They all loved the ride on the x-ray machine.
Upon returning to school, the children wrote wonderful stories about their visit.

cucumbers, horseshoe crabs, lobsters, sea urchins, snails and hermit crabs. The children were allowed to handle most of the animals.
All the children enjoyed the experience and were busy telling their teachers, Sheryl Norris and Ellen Gaiero from the WIN class, all about the new and strange things they had observed.

third grade at the Vinson-Owen school as the children continue their study of the history of Boston. In addition to discovering why the Puritans left their native England to come to the New World, and how they began their new life here, the study will include details of such historical events as the Battle of Bunker Hill, the Battle of

Animal Research

The children in grade 2/3 science classes have completed a research project on animals. Each student selected an animal and was responsible for a written report and an oral presentation.
Project requirements included a

"Next Generation"

Second graders at Lincoln School had the wonderful experience of being filmed by Cable News Network. The students worked with pulleys, batteries, bulbs and motors to demonstrate an example of Winchester's nationally recognized science program. Their class was part of the CNN Science and Technology segment called "The Next Generation."

Kindergarten Explorers

Jane Martel's kindergarteners at Muraco School have been exploring their community. They visited the Winchester police and fire stations and participated in a Read-Along at McCall Junior High School.

In the next few weeks trips to the Habitat Nature Center in Belmont and to the Shriners' Circus in Wilmington will broaden their experiences even more.

In addition to these visits, the children were recently treated to a journey into the space world when parent, Philip Myers, astronomer at the Harvard-Smithsonian Center for Astrophysics, presented a slide show and talk about comets and theories about their possible role in the demise of the dinosaurs.

Historical Hunting

The Winchester Public Library loaned volumes of the National Register of Historical Houses to several Lincoln school classes. This reference work has information about houses built prior to 1917.

Most students studied older houses in Winchester. Thirteen children found historical information about their own homes, with the oldest house having been built 156 years ago.

Springtime Poets

Springtime poetry and multimedia watercolor designs have brought a touch of spring to the halls outside Anna Oliver's kindergarten at Muraco.

As part of a spring unit, the children heard the book "Don't Tell the Scarecrow and Other Japanese Poems" by Issa, Yaya, and Kikaku. After using all their senses to see, smell, hear and feel spring, they created visual and word pictures to express the essence of the season. Parents will be invited to view the artistic masterpieces.

Good Sportsmanship

At the Vinson-Owen School, kindergarteners have been talking about "good sportsmanship" and what it means to be a good sport. Cooperating, being kind and having fun are important qualities.

To put their ideas into practice the children had relay races to show each other what good sports they were as well as how quickly they could run!

The children took pictures and did lots of laughing and cheering.
The Parents Association provided ribbons for everyone involved, so the morning fun ended with good sports awards for all!

Lollipop, Hubert And Gwendolynn

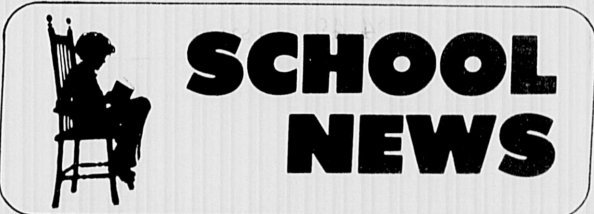

The Lollipop Dragon and his friends Hubert and Gwendolynn have arrived at the first grade in the Vinson-Owen School.

Lollipop will help children realize the vast number of careers in the world in which people work: that we are dependent upon one another's work in our everyday lives and that when each person does his own job, through careful planning, the end result is satisfactory.

Children will have the opportunity to "role play" interview and become a part of the decision-making process.

Boston History

The words of Paul Revere are resounding loudly and clearly in the Lexington and Concord, and the Boston Tea Party.

Major goals of this social studies unit are to have children learn how the history of their country began "right in their own backyard" and to develop an appreciation for the part that their "city" played in the growth of America.

Children have been divided into small groups to begin research on a topic of their choice pertaining to the study. They are learning how to locate and use reference materials, organize ideas into a well-structured report and design a visual activity to supplement their information.

Ambrose Fair

Kindergarteners, first, second and third graders at Ambrose School are looking forward to their Primary Education Fair which will be held on May 22. They have been busy researching and studying a variety of topics that involve earth, air, and water. During the course of the evening, individual projects, including both reports and visuals will be displayed to fellow students, families, and friends.

Mapping It Out

Maps have become the prelude to the Intermediate Level Curriculum Project at Ambrose School. Fourth graders are mapping the school grounds using rectangular and polar coordinates, an application of their science curriculum.

One fifth grade group is working with cross section maps, while another is involved with a simulated research project to map a "newly discovered" archipelago in the North Atlantic.

Sixth graders are learning new skills with clinometers as they map the west side of the school building.

Following their map making experiences, students will use maps as learning tools. Their group projects will include the statement of a hypothesis which must be proved or disproved through maps.

Library Notes:

The Vinson-Owen library will be open Monday afternoons until 3:15 to give students extra time for research and browsing. The French exchange students who visited the library last week donated a book, "Le Livre de Mon Ami," by Anatole France. Recently Vinson-Owen sponsored "Teacher's Day in the Library," giving teachers an opportunity to browse through displays of new materials as well as enjoy some coffee and "goodies."

Teaching Aliens

Could you teach an alien how to brush its teeth or eat spaghetti? Vinson-Owen fourth and fifth graders were given a writing assignment in which they had to teach someone from another planet how to perform a specific task. Some students taught aliens how to make Jell-O, make a sandwich, make a bed, ride a bike, wash a rocket, and many other earthling activities.

Author Speaks

Visiting author John Bellairs spoke to fifth graders at Vinson-Owen recently about the many children's books he has written, including "The Letter" and "The Witch and The Ring." Bellairs autographed copies of his books for students who have read and enjoyed his writings. Students and staff found him an interesting personality.

Computer Program

The first grade computer program at Vinson-Owen is well underway with particular assignments completed in the Delta Draw program. A program to correlate with learning the days of the week and the order of the months of the year is currently being completed. Facemaker enable the children to create a face that can wink or smile. All the programs require that the children read and follow directions. Mrs. Wells, a former first grade teacher in the Winchester school system, is volunteering her services to help children on a one-to-one basis while they discover and work through these new programs.

Congratulations

Congratulations to Vinson-Owen sixth graders John Chen, Sean Lee, Mary-Catherine Segota and Campbell Foster for being selected to play in the Adventures in Music Orchestra performing at Lexington High School this month.

ASK THE EDUCATORS

Thomas Tracy
Director of Art
Public Schools

Question: Does a good arts program in high school influence students to choose the arts as a profession?

A well developed program from kindergarten through high school is important. Along the way, students are pinpointed at each level as having special talent and given encouragement to help build their self-confidence.

The arts program at Winchester High School covers not only fine arts but industrial arts and home economics as well. By the time students graduate, many have already decided to pursue a career somewhere in the arts field.

In the last 15 years, Winchester has the distinction of having more students going on to higher education at arts schools than any other high school in Massachusetts.

An outstanding example would be Philippe Baumann, Class of 1981. Phil recently completed work at Brown University and received two degrees, one in architecture and one in fine arts. In addition, he also completed work at the Rhode Island School of Design and received a degree in fine arts and is now applying to graduate school.

He was an outstanding arts student here. We have had positive feedback from other architecture students, particularly those at the more prestigious schools, that having a well developed fine arts training at the high school level gives them a headstart on students lacking this training.

I must emphasize, however, that the main goal of the arts program of the Winchester Public School System is to teach and encourage all students to appreciate and grow in the arts in their own individual ways and to enrich their lives in the understanding of man's creations.

Gitte Irving

Director, Comprehensive Academics

Question: How long should I study?

"How long should I study for this test?" is often asked by high schoolers. The answer lies in the definition of the word "study."

If getting good grades is your goal, studying means "practicing until you know it." This is not achieved by studying at the last minute, but by setting up a sound routine of regular work. Here are some rules of thumb for high school students:

1. Acknowledge that high school is hard work. You are the person who will benefit from the good grades, and you are the person who has to put in the work and time to earn those grades.

2. Space is important: make sure you have a place to study where your papers and books will not be disturbed.

3. Do homework on time. You will know immediately if you are having difficulty with a specific concept. Do not delay — ask your teacher for help. There will not be time to clear up all those questions the day before the test. Also, teachers often lower grades automatically if homework is not done or is late.

4. When your homework is done, give yourself 10-15 minutes to review past concepts in a specific subject. If you have no homework in a given subject, you should still spend time reviewing; you will panic less when tests or quizzes are given.

5. Keep your papers in order. If you have a math test coming up, spending an hour sorting through piles of papers can be discouraging. Keep a folder for each subject, placing into it homework and test papers in chronological order. Studying for tests will be much easier for you!

If you do assigned work on time, and build in review time, you will find that studying for exams is a much less overwhelming task, and the results may be quite pleasing.

Hospital Lab
Gets Accreditation

Winchester Hospital chief pathologist Dr. John G. Guillemont has announced that the hospital laboratory has been recently accepted for accreditation by the College of American Pathologists (CAP).

The two-year accreditation was granted in April after physical inspection of the labs and examination of its personnel by CAP Commission on Laboratory Accreditation members.

Commission Chairman Dr. John K. Duckworth congratulated Guillemont on meeting the CAP standards of laboratory performance as well as "the excellence of the services being provided patients and clinicians" under his direction.

To maintain the standards of CAP accreditation, the hospital laboratory must monitor functional standards through its own personnel.

Skin Cancer
Talk Slated

Philip S. Ellerlin, M.D., a board certified member of the American Academy of Dermatology, will give a lecture and slide presentation on the recognition and prevention of skin cancer Wednesday, May 28, from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Choate Hospital in Woburn.

Frederick Cohen, right, an optometrist with 30 years experience, and his son Dana, right, an optician for the past 10 years, have opened Main St. Optical at 600 Main St., Winchester. Cardiovascular
Risk Assessment

Many factors known to play a role in development of cardiovascular disease are controllable. We can make changes in our daily lives to reduce the risk. To determine the current level of risk, individuals must minimize chances for developing these diseases.

Learn your risks for heart disease by coming for blood work — including tests for cholesterol/HDL, triglycerides, and glucose at either Choate Hospital in Woburn or the Symmes Hospital in Arlington on Wednesday morning, May 21. A follow-up visit will be scheduled with a health educator one week after the blood pressure test and individual lifestyle counseling to minimize risk for heart disease.

Free Blood Pressure Clinic

What takes less than five minutes, is painless and can help prevent heart attack, kidney disease and stroke?

Having your blood pressure checked, according to Susan Powers, R.N., Winchester Hospital's community health educator. But while screening for high blood pressure is easy and can rule out a major health risk, it's a simple step too many people ignore, she said.

To encourage residents to check for hypertension during May, which is designated as National High Blood Pressure Month, Winchester Hospital will conduct a free blood pressure clinic May 20.

The clinic will be held in the main lobby of the hospital from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. and from 2 to 3 p.m. In addition to the free screening, information about management of hypertension through the use of medication, diet and exercise will be available as well.

Anyone interested in participating should call 729-9000.

Hospice Care
Has New Office

Hospice Care, Inc. (HCI) has moved. The new office is in the recently renovated Central School, located behind the town hall, on Academy St. in Arlington.

HCI will share the building with other elder and social service organizations including Arlington Council on Aging and Cooperative Elder Services, Inc.

Hospice Care, Inc. serves terminally ill patients and their families in the north suburban Boston area. For more information call 648-3172.

Blood Pressure
Clinic May 17

The American Red Cross will have a free blood pressure clinic at 39 Church St., Winchester, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., Saturday May 17.

Hypertension, high blood pressure, often has no symptoms and can lead to such serious conditions as heart attacks, strokes and kidney disease. One third of all Bay State residents are estimated to have hypertension.

For further information, please call the Red Cross at 729-2300.

REAL ESTATE AND YOU

By Dick Murphy
The Bixby & Porter Co. Realtors

729-7000

THE MULTIPLE LISTING SERVICE

Over the past ten years, the Multiple Listing Services around the country have revolutionized the way real estate is sold. When an agent lists your home for sale, he takes all of the pertinent information about the property and places it in a computerized inventory bank.

Once a home is placed on M.L.S., agents all over town have immediate access to information about price, location, the number of bedrooms and baths, the kitchen equipment and other appliances that convey with the home, the size of the yard, the type of heating and air conditioning systems, the garage, and a host of other features. The system allows agents to feed in their buyers' basic needs and match them up to the listings of all area Realtors. When you list your home, you, in effect, employ not only the listing agent to market your home, but hundreds of his colleagues all over town. They can then work cooperatively to get your property sold as quickly as possible.

By placing your home on the Multiple Listing Service, you have the most effective advertising there is, because it reaches the people who are so influential in getting homes sold — the Realtors working with qualified buyers!

If there's a move in your future, call the professionals at Bixby & Porter Co. Realtors. Our number is 729-7000, or just drop by our offices at 33 Thompson St., Winchester. We're happy to serve all your real estate needs.

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Farmhouse Among Homes In Historic House Tour

Tickets are still available for the House Tour sponsored by the Winchester Historical Society on Saturday, May 10, from 1 to 5 p.m. They may be purchased by calling 729-0726 or 729-0362.

Tickets must be purchased in advance at a cost of $6 for members and $7 for non-members.

Among the five houses to be on tour is a single-family New England farmhouse of the late Victorian style with a separate three-story carriage house, situated on property which slopes downward to the banks of the Middlesex Canal which was filled in the mid-19th century. The house was built in 1886 and passed into the hands of a second owner where it remained for 70 years.

Major repairs, restoration and renovation were undertaken by the next owners. Present owners completed final polishing of this jewel. The foundation consists of fieldstone with a rear brick wall and a cement floor. Ten brick pillars support the wooden post-and-beam construction of the upper three floors. The exterior is sheathed with the original cedar siding and all the windows, which are of cedar sash, have had the original glass completely reglazed, restored and weatherstripped. The bay windows are the original plate glass.

The cupola of the carriage house contains the original cedar shingle roof with copper flashing and a reproduction copper weather vane. The carriage house is of three stories with wooden post-and-beam construction. A wooden ramp provides access to three cars on the second level.

The ground level houses four cars. All folding doors suspended from metal tracks are the original. Access to the hay loft is through a door under the front gable surmounted by a tackle beam.

The house retains many of its charming original features. The front hall closet is lighted by an original semi-circular rose glass window. In the living room the original mahogany fireplace mantel is decorated with a flower motif repeated from the exterior of the window bay and repeated in the original Chelsea tiles and firescreen.

The dining room contains an original marble sink within a semi-circular alcove. The interior walls are of the original horsehair plaster over wooden lath.

The original gas lights have been removed and replaced by semi-antique chandeliers of glass crystal in the dining room and by pewter, brass, cast brass and china in other areas of the house.

The owners "have attained the perfect marriage of faithful restoration with state of the art in modern conveniences," the Historical Society reported.

Following the tour, refreshments will be served at the Winchester Boat Club, itself of historic interest.

Violin, Piano Recital Planned

Violinist Scott Knoop and pianist Carol Farley will present a recital of works by Beethoven, Bartok, and Brahms at 4 p.m. Sunday, May 18, at the Brammen Brothers Flute Factory, 58 Dragon Ct., Woburn.

Admission will be free. Voluntary contributions will benefit For A Cleaner Environment (FACE).

Anne Schwitters, a sixth grader at Lincoln School, practices on the French horn.

Patty Cummings, Ambrose School fifth grader, prepares for the CSA spring concert.

Young Musicians Ready For Concert

It has long been "play at again" and "one-more-time" for elementary musicians tuning up for the annual Community School Association (CSA) spring concert.

Under Director of Music Lynne Rahmoier, students have been working steadily and enthusiastically for their performance at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, May 15.

Portions of the one-hour concert will be shared by the All-Star Band, All-Star Orchestra, and All-Star Chorus. The groups are made up of talented fourth through sixth graders selected from five elementary schools in Winchester.

The event annually provides scholarship money to a music and an art student graduating from high school. A $1 donation will be requested at the door.

Winchester High School/Junior High Orchestra Director Mary McCann, right, presents checks to raffle winners Mary Johnson and Elizabeth Westner, a second grader at Vinson-Owen School.

Johnson Wins Orchestra Raffle

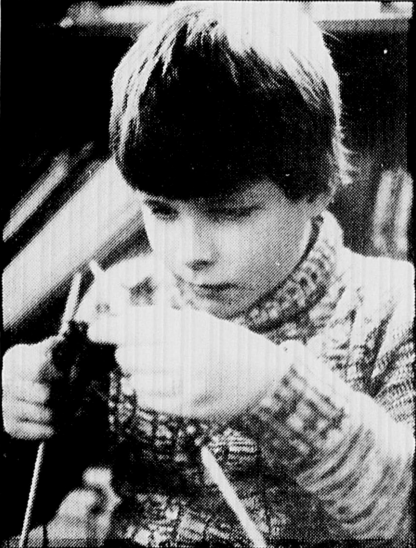

The drawing was held recently for the raffle supporting the Winchester High School/Junior High orchestra's trip to Washington.

First prize winner was Mary Johnson ($300); second prize, Elizabeth Westner ($150); and third, Arlene Green ($50). Orchestra director Mary McCann presented prizes during a rehearsal.

The orchestra will leave for Washington at 6 a.m. Friday, May 9, and return Sunday evening. It will perform at the Post Office Square Mall in Washington Saturday at 2 p.m.

Students on the trip are paying half their own expenses. The remainder of the cost of the trip was covered by the raffle, along with a $750 donation by EnKa and a $225 gift from the WHS Friends of Music.

In 1984, Peter Kelly received a CSA scholarship to attend New England Conservatory of Music and in 1985, Patricia Lynch began the Rhode Island School of Design with CSA encouragement.

The concert in the high school auditorium will be followed by a spectacular reception sponsored by Superintendent Charles Mitsakos, in honor of the musicians and their guests, from 8:30 to 9 p.m. in the cafeteria.

Beginning at 10 a.m., Tuesday, May 13, there will be periodic Bay State MediPlus presentations at Winchester Hospital in the Kingsbury Seminar Room. Other scheduled MediPlus meetings are from 10 a.m. to noon, May 20 and 23.

Choate-Symmes Geriatric Unit Is Expanded

Special geriatric care units at the Choate and Symmes Hospital Divisions have been expanded.

Established under a two-year research grant from the Hartford Foundation, the units (known as the Hartford Units) provide individualized and innovative care for the over-65 population in a cost-effective manner.

"The research project, completed in conjunction with Brandeis University, confirms the value of this type of care for both the elderly patient and the hospital. Because of the positive outcomes identified in the study, the Hartford Units have been expanded from the original ten beds at each division to 43 at Choate in Woburn and 38 at Symmes in Arlington," said President Paul Downey.

Brandeis researchers noted that the number of Hartford Unit patients who returned home, rather than to a nursing home, after discharge increased, and that hospital readmissions did not increase, even with the shorter length of stay. They also cited heightened staff morale.

Great emphasis is placed on encouraging the patient to be independent by performing his or her own activities of daily living as much as possible. "We encourage the patient to move around and help himself whenever it's feasible," said Fountain.

An activities room in each Hartford Unit enables patients to participate in communal dining and enjoy socialization. The activities room is important for it helps the elderly patients combat loneliness and depression, while encouraging activities and exercise beneficial to recovery.

To help realize the Units' goals, family participation in the care process is encouraged and of great value.

Winchester '9' Wins A Pair Of Games

By DAVE DEMARCO

The boys baseball team won two of three games last week, but lost 13-3 to Stoneham in its biggest game of the season.

Against a tough, first-place team, you have to be at your very best and Winchester simply wasn't there. In fact, the Sachems were flat. They committed five errors and exhausted four pitchers in a futile attempt to catch the powerful Spartan bats.

In the meantime, Stoneham hurler Joe Vitello allowed only six hits over a full seven innings. The Sachems get another shot at the league leaders May 23 at Ginn field.

Last Tuesday, Sachem T.J. DellaSala delivered Winchester from the hands of cellar-dweller Watertown with a two-out single that brought Tim Budrewicz home for a 4-3 victory.

Winchester's Shawn McElhinney pitched well in his debut on the mound. The sophomore struck out six and allowed only four hits on the afternoon.

Budrewicz and DellaSala each had two hits for the Sachems and Alex Nasson had two RBIs.

Winchester beat Reading, its rival for third place in the Middlesex league, 4-2 after a shaky first inning.

Reading scored two quick runs before Nasson put the clamps on the Rockets, retiring seven straight batters. Nasson and Budrewicz each had two hits for the Sachems.

Winchester hosts Lexington, Woburn, and Belmont this week at Skillings rd.

350 Runners In Bunny Hop

Overcast skies and a constant rainy drizzle could not dampen the spirits of over 350 runners participating in Bonnell Ford's third annual "Bunny Hop" five-mile road race in Winchester this past Sunday to benefit Easter Seals.

Runners warmed up and stretched out to the upbeat music provided by "Balooney Tunes" and were given pre-race health tips by Robert Fitts from Winchester Chiropractic Center and Vincent Buscemi of Winchester's Orthopedic Plus.

"Our primary concern is to have a safe, fun run and at the same time provide Easter Seals with a substantial donation as well as some public exposure for the Easter Seals cause. For the third year in a row, I think we've been able to accomplish just that," said race director Joe McCullough of Bonnell Ford.

"We hope to increase our field of runners each year. Based on the positive feedback we've been receiving from participants, I think we can expect that to happen," said McCullough.

Cambridge resident Chuck Martin took first place with a time of 25:15, followed by last year's second-place winner, Woburn's Lou Ruggiero, with 26:07 and Greg O'Melia from Ashburnham in 26:14.

Last year's first place overall winner, Winthrop's Con Doherty, took his division's first-place prize in the 40-49 age group with a 27:21.

The first female finisher was Karen Smyers of Smyers of Somerville in 28:25, followed closely by Wiley McCarthy, also of Somerville, in 28:46.

The under-18 age group winner was Andrew Junas of Lexington and the masters division first place went to Tony Sapienza of Bradford.

Representing the wheelchair division for the second year was Matt Calazza of Stoneham, finishing in 52:14.

Ralph H. Bonnell Jr., founder of the "Bunny Hop," thanked all who came to "run for kids who can't."

The Sachemettes Lose Three Games

By DAVE DEMARCO

The girls softball team dropped three of four games last week, holding on to seventh place in the Middlesex league with a record of 3-6.

Against Burlington last Monday, the Sachemettes built an eight-point lead, only to watch the Red Devils chip away at it and finally tie the game at 9-9 in the sixth inning.

After the tying run, the Sachemettes just seemed to fall apart. Burlington amassed 10 more runs in the fateful sixth and won it 19-9.

"We made a few errors and it just kept going on," sighed Winchester's LeeAnn Pappas.

Tuesday, Winchester staged a late-game rally of its own to beat winless Watertown 9-8.

Sachemette relief ace Heidi MacDonald pitched five innings of excellent baseball that kept Winchester within two runs going into the final frame.

A base hit by Debbie Taylor that brought home Sara Porsell tied the game in the seventh. Then, with Sue Allard on third, MacDonald knocked one into shallow left-center field for the winning run.

"The kids came through," said coach Jim Machonochie. "We executed the way we were supposed to and did the little things. We were a little down after Burlington and this one really got us psyched for Reading."

Alas, the Sachemettes could have used more psyche against the first-place Rockettes, who defeated Winchester 7-2 Wednesday.

Reading pitching ace Kim O'Riordan held Winchester to just three hits until Rocket reliever Katie Quinn came in and mopped things up for Reading.

Winchester travelled to Stoneham Friday to face this year's surprise team in the Middlesex league. The Spartans were 8-0 and share the league lead.

Although the Sachemettes were up 3-1 going into the fifth, Stoneham began hitting well, including a three-run homer by Katie Carr that put Stoneham up 8-3. Allard played well, netting two RBIs in four times at bat.

This week the Sachemettes begin a three-game home stint that includes Lexington, Woburn and Belmont.

Lacrosse Team Wins A Squeaker

The Winchester lacrosse team had a rough time of it last week in the absence of starting goalie Brian Gannon, who had chicken pox and missed most of the week.

The Sachems squeaked one out 9-8 over Framingham South last Tuesday on a four-goal rampage by senior James Campo.

Following a 3-3 halftime score, the Sachems mounted their attack behind Campo, Mike Murray with two goals, and John Ward. Going into the fourth period, Winchester led 9-5.

South, which scored three goals in the final period, simply could not make up the difference.

Gannon's absence became more marked the next afternoon as Winchester fell to Weymouth 14-4.

"We really missed Brian out there today," said Winchester coach Gene Bouley. "Louie Frate did better than I thought at backup goalie, but it was tough out there. They were up 8-1 at the half and we just never got the ball on offense enough to do anything."

The Sachems' suffering defense continued to plague them Friday against the Minutemen of Lexington. Winchester lost 10-2 in what Bouley described as "a very poor game for us."

Bouley said that while the team knew it was weak defensively, it has shown surprisingly ineffective offensive punch as well. The Sachems are planning some offensive adjustments for Tuesday's match at Lincoln-Sudbury.

"Our offense has a tendency to fold," said Bouley. "We need to find a way to get it into the net."

Tobakis Shines In Swim Meet

Vicki Tobakis of Winchester, a member of the Community Stars and Stripes swim team of Medford, turned in a strong showing at recent U.S. Class C championships in Medford.

Swimming against a field of more than 90 competitors, Tobakis was 15th in the 200-yard freestyle, 19th in the 50-yard backstroke, and turned in best personal times in the 100-yard breast stroke and 50-yard butterfly.

She was also 16th in the 200-yard individual medley, 20th in the 50-yard freestyle and 21st in the 100-yard backstroke.

Tobakis, the daughter of Carol and Ted Pringle, was also part of 200-yard medley relay and 400-yard freestyle relay teams which were sixth and fifth respectively.

Sachem Track Teams Win

Boys' Track

By DAVID MOORE

The Winchester boys track team won its third meet in a row Friday, beating Burlington 76-69.

In the 330-yard low hurdles, Glen Dorsam won for the Sachems in 41.6 seconds; Kevin Galli of Burlington placed second and Dave Fitzgerald was third.

Dave McClintock's personal best of 4:45.9 in the mile was good for a Winchester second place, while Sachem Ben Ault finished third at 4:53.

Dorsam also won the long jump at 19-8 1/2, followed by Burlington's Kurt Duprez and Sachem Jeff Alberti at 16-11 1/2.

Fitzpatrick

In State Meet

Sarah Fitzpatrick has qualified for the United States Gymnastics Federation Class III optional state meet.

At a recent qualifier, she scored 27.7 in the all-around to qualify for the state meet.

The state meet will be May 10 at Algonquin High School in Southboro. Fitzpatrick currently competes for Montvale School of Gymnastics as a Class III gymnast in the U.S.G.F. Region 6.

Boston College soccer stand-out Maria Montuori

Maria Montuori Honored By BC

Boston College held its annual All-Sports Dinner April 23 at the Charles River Country Club.

There were over 150 athletes, coaches and guests in attendance as soccer and softball stand-out Maria Montuori of Winchester was awarded the Daniel Lyons Scholarship for her contributions.

This scholarship will be put towards her tuition for her senior year at the Heights. Montuori has played on a final 8 soccer team which ended the 1985 season ranked seventh in the nation and been named to the All New England and All-East first teams.

As an outfielder for the softball team, Maria was the 1985 Triple Crown winner and key player on the MAIAW championship team.

Montuori was recognized and applauded for her accomplishments and contributions to the growing women's athletic program by her peers, administrators of the university and alumni.

Her parents were on hand and excited both with the financial contribution to her education but also with the school's appreciation for their daughter's hard work and dedication.

Girls' Team Victorious

By DAVID MOORE

If anyone in the Middlesex league could challenge the Winchester girls tennis team it was Reading. And the Rockets didn't even come close, despite one heroic contest.

The McCall sisters, Karen and Linda, quickly dispatched their respective opponents at first and second singles. Karen won 6-1, 6-2 and Linda won 6-1, 6-3.

At third singles, freshman star Laura Tozza showed her mettle with a poised 4-6, 7-5, 6-4 comeback victory over Reading ace Gail Girasella. Trailing 1-4 in the second set, the tenacious Tozza fought back to take the set and, eventually, the match. "It was really good tennis," said

Winchester coach RoseAnn Innes after the match. "Laura showed her mental toughness. It would have been easy for her to give up in that second set."

The first doubles team of Lulu Kermond and Kelly O'Callahan made short work of Reading's Paula Bordieri and Laura Marshall 6-2, 6-2. Their victory was particularly sweet after the duo's loss to Melrose April 25.

In second doubles, Kathy Gray and Kristin Rothmann put Rockettes Sandy Finlayson and Joanne Fedele to rest 6-2, 6-1.

With three games left in dual meet competition, the Sachemettes are 6-0 and very alone atop the Middlesex league.

NRA Course Set In Woburn

Woburn Sportsmen's Association is offering a National Rifle Association (NRA) home firearms responsibility course Wednesday, May 28, from 7 to 11 p.m. and Saturday, May 31, from noon to 4 p.m.

The course covers firearm handling, care, usage, storage, recognition, and current laws.

Any person over 18 can register by phoning Dick Carey Jr. at 345-4824. There is a $15 fee for instructional material and ammunition. An NRA certificate is awarded after completion of both sessions.

The Woburn Sportsmen's Association is located on the Middlesex Turnpike, 3.7 miles north of the Burlington Mall, opposite Oak Park.

Boys' Netmen Win 5-0 Games

Despite several close matches, the boys tennis team swept Reading 5-0 Friday and demonstrated once again the kind of poise and inner-strength with which one identifies a class team.

Although the feisty Rockets never actually won a set, they played stubborn tennis and forced the Sachems to work hard for three-of-five of their wins.

At first and second singles, Shawn Herlihy and Joe Palumbo trounced Reading's Mark Roberts and Ron Graziosi 6-1, 6-1 and 6-1, 6-0 respectively.

In third singles, however, Rocketman Peter Harutunian never gave up enroute to losing to Gavin Barton 6-4, 7-5.

First doubles Hank Lynch and Chris Terpkio beat Eric Doherty and Mark Coronis 6-2, 6-3, while the tandem of Chris Aronson and Elliot Foley survived the tough play of Rockets Scott Hayes and John Harutunian 7-5, 7-5.

The Sachems are now 6-0 and in first place in the Middlesex league.

The Winchester Star LIBRARY NOTES

Library To Honor Trustees

Austin Broadhurst and Loretta Redding served as trustees of the Public Library for 13 and 12 years, respectively, before their retirement from the board this spring. In recognition of their long tenure and dedicated service to the library, the current trustees, the director, and the Friends of the Winchester Public Library will sponsor a public reception in their honor Thursday, May 22, at the library.

The reception will be in the Reference Room from 9:30 to 11:00 a.m. Light refreshments will be served and everyone is invited.

Broadhurst was first elected as a trustee in 1973 and Mrs. Redding was appointed to fill an unexpired term the next year. Broadhurst had served as a Town Meeting member, and was on the Finance Committee and School Committee before he was inspired to run for a library trustee seat by his mother's work with the library in Springfield.

Mrs. Redding had served on the Library Addition Committee before applying for her seat as trustee. Together, they saw the library through the funding crisis of the tax limitation law, Proposition 2½, and the selection of a new director in 1981.

"Please join in saying goodbye and thank you to these two energetic and dedicated people," other library trustees said.

The library's Sunday hours ended May 4. The adult department is now open from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday to Thursday and from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

The Junior Library is open from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

Library Board Re-elects Mirak

Alice K. Mirak was re-elected chairman of the board of the Winchester Public Library at the organizational meeting of the library board of trustees April 29.

Other members of the board include Vice Chairman James W. Blackham Jr., Secretary Mrs. Ellen B. Browning, Mrs. Anne K. Nevins and Ernest Phillips Jr.

Colonial Travel Can Customize A Vacation To Fit Your Wants And Needs.

Whether your vacation takes you across the state, across the country, or around the world, whether your needs are more toward the economy vacation, or money is no object, or whether you prefer the excitement of the fast lane or serenity of seclusion, Colonial Travel, located at 564 Main St., Winchester, can customize a vacation to fit your wants and needs.

With more than 27 years of experience as travel agents between them, Colonial's co-owners Elaine Mahoney and Tony Sampson have tailored vacations for thousands of satisfied clients to all corners of the globe.

"What many people don't realize is travel agents don't charge a service charge," explains Elaine. "Our fee does not affect the price our client pays."

Instead, booking through a travel agent is not only easier, but it can also be cheaper. With access to plane fares, hotel rates, and car rental rates at their fingertips on computer, Tony and Elaine can assure you the best rates and can book a reservation simultaneously.

In addition to helping you get the best rates, Colonial can make your vacation more pleasant by meeting your needs with corresponding accommodations ranging from standard to deluxe or superior.

"Some people prefer to travel alone, while others want the security of a group," explains Elaine. "Some travelers want a more free schedule while others prefer a guided tour. In any case we will make the arrangements to fit their needs."

Some other benefits of booking through travel agents include their knowledge of special discounts, their awareness of the atmosphere, weather conditions and economic state of the place you are traveling to, and their ability to assist you in planning and getting ready for your vacation.

Tony and Elaine can assist you with passport needs, rate of exchange, and will make you aware of any other necessary information to make your trip easier and more enjoyable.

Has Colonial Travel seen any effects on European bookings as a result of the situation abroad?

"Bookings to Europe are down," explains Elaine, "but that has led to a noticeable increase in bookings to places like Hawaii, the Caribbean, Bermuda, cruises, and U.S. destinations."

In any event people are vacationing and the smart ones are letting Colonial Travel find them the vacation they desire at the price they want to pay.

To have Colonial Travel arrange and fit your vacation to your needs, call Tony or Elaine at 729-4700 or visit their office at 564 Main St., Winchester. They are open Monday through Friday 9-5, Thursdays till 8 p.m., 11-3 on Saturdays, and both Tony and Elaine are available any other time by appointment.

Toxics Major Concern Assessors Vow To Do Job Equitably

once used to make gelatin products and then for glue. A fire destroyed the building in 1980.

State Rep. Sherman "Whip" Saltmarsh was asked to speak about the site.

"First, I'm not the developer," Saltmarsh said. The developer, Marotta, is also a legislator, however.

Saltmarsh said any development at the site would require action by a Town Meeting later, simply to change the site's zoning. That action could not come before November, he added.

Town Counsel already has enough to recommend that no action be taken," Saltmarsh said. "The DEQE has asked the developer to make a number of studies. The firm engaged by the previous owner, also, is one of the finest firms in the state."

Expressing faith in the DEQE, Saltmarsh added, "The DEQE has the strictest laws in the nation — and a huge budget." Saltmarsh said the town should not spend another $50,000 for its own study but should wait until it gets a request to rezone.

Taylor responded, saying he thinks the board of health can delay the project "on the grounds the board is not convinced of the site's safety."

But I hope the issue won't arise."

Marion Crandall, speaking for the planning board, reminded the meeting "the burden of proof is on the developers. The board of health, the conservation commission and the planning board are very much involved."

Others wondered if chemicals from the site had leaked into the river or Leonard Pool. Taylor said soils test and a test of the wellwater at the site had all failed to find toxic contamination.

Mike Connolly said he remembered workers pouring chemicals into the swampy area nearby many years ago.

Eric Bradlee, chairman of the finance committee, recommended against spending another $50,000 for the study. "It seems there are other checks and balances" on the project, he said.

Joe Tabbi, director of public health, described the soils and water tests in the area.

The addition of $50,000 to the board of health budget was rejected but could be brought back later in the meeting through formation of a committee and funds for the study.

During a selectmen's meeting in March, Murray said the project had been scaled down from 99 units to 72. At the request of the planning board, he added, the parking area had been reduced from 1.75 spaces per unit to 1.5.

Murray's major request to selectmen was to negotiate an alternative access to the site, using the roadway off Cross st. to Leonard Pool for some distance and then bridging the river.

A further complication exists in the property lines. Since the original deeds were drawn, the river has changed course. The town now owns some land on the Hudson Industries side of the river and vice versa.

Selectmen were also interested in negotiating some "affordable" low to moderate income housing units if the project were to get approval. Murray assured selectmen then that the DEQE would approve the site for housing if the developer followed all of its guidelines for dealing with hazardous waste first.

Selectmen then suggested forming a negotiating committee composed of several members from various town boards, noting it would have several advantages, including "not having TV cameras or newspaper reporters present."

with no axes to grind."

Anybody who doesn't like his new assessment is welcome to complain to the board of assessors, Mahoney said.

"We're here to listen. There are no more rubber stamps in the assessors' office," Mahoney said. "We believe everyone has the right to be heard." Being heard doesn't mean winning your point. Last year, the assessors heard appeals from 32 property owners. Only 10 abatements were granted.

"Still, we're willing to give everyone a hearing," Mahoney said. "If we get 320 requests this year, we'll hear them all."

Assessors are working against a deadline of June 7 to get their new assessment to the state for review by its field crew. Data collectors will make no visits after May 31.

"We're behind. Of the 1,500 places to visit, we'd only done 280 by April 29," Mahoney said. Winchester has about 7,200 properties, he said.

Despite Winchester's general sophistication, Mahoney said many property owners remain convinced that a 50 percent increase in valuation means a 50 percent increase in taxes.

"People get a look at their new valuation, multiply it by last year's tax rate and have a heart attack," Mahoney said.

In fact, the funds needed by the town are appropriated by the Town Meeting and tax rate needed to raise enough money is set by selectmen. Assessors have nothing to do with the tax rate, but when the town's overall assessment goes up, the tax rate will go down.

As an illustration, assuming the town's expenses were to remain the same, any property owner whose assessment increases by a smaller percentage than the entire town's valuation increases would actually get a lower tax bill. And vice versa.

Anti-Racism Task Force Is Formed

expected to meet regularly beginning in the fall and to present its final report no later than April 1987.

The School Committee expects to make the formal appointment of members of the task force at its meeting May 27. Anyone who would like to be considered for membership of this task force, prior to May 20 please notify Mitsakos at 154 Horn Pond Brook Rd., Winchester 01890.

Creation of the Task Force is partially a response to charges that racial prejudice played a part in casting of a Winchester High School play.

RELIGION

Spiritual Journey

At 8:30 p.m. Monday, May 12, the Worship Committee of the Unitarian Church will offer a program on "exploring spirituality and applying it to life in our challenging times."

The discussion will be led by William Stucky, who lived at Swarthmore's center in India, and Joel Baehr, an affiliate minister.

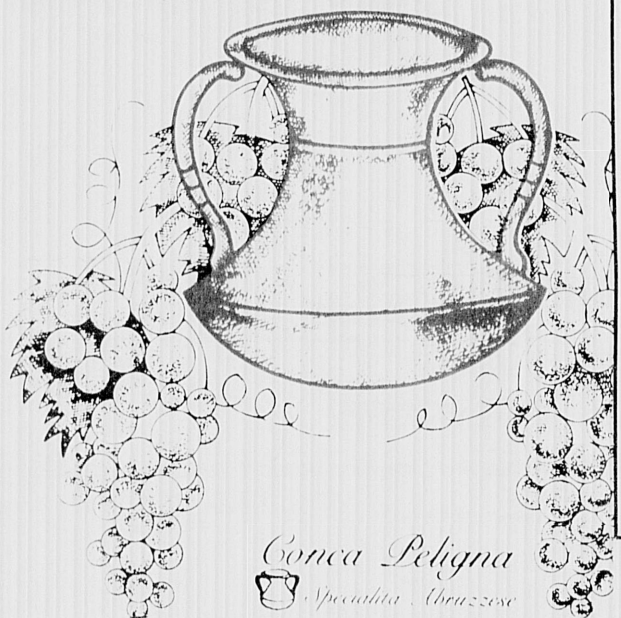

Preceding this experience at 6:45 p.m., there will be an hour of introductory Yoga led by Pat Bruno. A floor mat or towel and stretchable clothing are recommended. If there is sufficient interest, this group could develop into an ongoing class.

All are invited to bring an ingredient for a salad bar to share at 8 p.m.

Where To Find The Best Of Blooms: Give Mothers And Others A Floral Treat

Our parks and countrysides may be renowned for brilliant fall foliage, but in May they blossom into a living Mother's Day card. The justly famous parks and gardens of Greater Boston should be seen now, when so many blooms are at their best. Here are some sites that are ripe with flower-power:

The good word at the Arnold Arboretum this month is lilacs — and plenty of them.

A rolling hill by the paved walkway contains over 700 lilac plants of about 500 different hybrids and varieties — a feast for both the eyes and nostrils.

While the lilacs bloom all month long, Lilac Sunday, May 18, is a special, annual day of celebration. Guided van and walking tours as well as horse-and-carriage rides will be given throughout the Arboretum. The Morris Dancers and Saturday Nite Revue, a barbershop quartet, will also be performing on the grounds.

Gardening buffs can take advantage of the various courses offered here. A class on lilacs takes place

May 20, beginning at 9:30 a.m. Noted rose expert Malcolm Lowe offers classes called Pruning Roses and Shrub And Species Roses in May and June respectively. Coming up May 31 is Sky Gardening, a symposium on creating a landscape to attract and support birds and butterflies.

The 265-acre arboretum, which is open to the public from dawn till dusk, is in bloom with dogwoods, crabapples, dove-trees, peonies, fothergilla, cherry blossoms and much more.

For more information, call Arnold Arboretum, located off route 1 in Jamaica Plain, at 524-1718.

The Garden In The Woods, on Hemenway rd. in Framingham, has one of the greatest collections of wildflowers in the Northeast. Over 45 acres of hilly, glacier-carved woodland has been carefully landscaped to grow the widest variety of flowers possible. More than 1500 species of wildflowers create a living pallet of color.

You can stroll by ponds and bogs, through woodlands and meadows, in search of rare oconee bells, trailing arbutus, pink lady's slippers, shooting star, anemones and much more.

Guided tours are available when they are requested in advance. Also available are plant information resources, educational programs, special events and plants for sale.

Garden In The Woods is about a 40-minute drive by car. Take route 128 west to route 20 east; turn left on Raymond rd., which runs into Hemenway. For events information, call 877-6574.

The Lyman Estate, also known as The Vale, has long been admired for its landscaped grounds as well as for its greenhouses, which are the oldest in the country.

Four of the five operating greenhouses were built in the early 1800s. Although the earliest house, completed before 1820, is no longer in use, it is thought to be the oldest standing greenhouse in the country.

The present Grape House was built in 1804 for a variety of citrus trees as well as pineapples and bananas. In 1870, it was converted to a graperie with black Hamburg grapes grown from vine cuttings at Hampton Court in England.

Other greenhouses grow an abundance of tropical plants, orchids, citrus trees and the estate's famed camellias.

The 30-acre estate grounds were influenced by naturalistic English landscape designs. They house a number of garden beds, lawns, woods, and ornamental trees and shrubs.

To reach The Vale, take route 20 (Main st., Waltham) to Lyman st. Or, take route 60, then head south on Beaver st. For information about special events, call 891-7095.

The largest Massachusetts Audubon Society sanctuary, the Ipswich River Wildlife Sanctuary, Perkins Row, Topsfield, is filled with exotic plants as well as with birds. Splashed between pine and hardwood forests are fields of starflowers, periwinkle, swamp azalea, blue iris, cattail and Canada mayflowers. Ten miles of trails are there for the hiking.

A garden walk through a cemetery may sound peculiar unless you've been to Mount Auburn Cemetery in Cambridge. The burial ground of many celebrated New Englanders, Mount Auburn was also the first garden cemetery in the country. The Massachusetts Horticultural Society planted an experimental garden there in 1831, and, today, many walk the tulip, hollyhock and camellia paths along its 164 acres. It's a good place for birdwatching, too. For information, call 891-7095.

Also worth seeing is the wildflower garden at the Habitat Institute For The Environment, a 26-acre wildlife sanctuary at 10 Juniper st. in Belmont. Lovely, seasonal self-guided nature trails exist here. For information about special courses, slide shows and events, call 489-3850.

For urban gardens, head for Boston.

The Boston Public Garden, the well-heeled, 25-acre oasis in the heart of the city, was the first public botanical garden established in the United States. The French-styled garden is blooming with tulips, dogwoods and azaleas this time of year. Kids love the swanboat rides and the ducks in the lagoon.

For an insider's view of Beacon Hill, take advantage of the once-a-year Beacon Hill Hidden Gardens Tour, which takes place all day on May 15. The self-guided walking tour, which costs $10 in advance, $15 the day of tour, gives visitors a peek at a dozen of the area's most exclusive townhouse gardens. For details, call 227-4392.

A Potpourri Of Lights Up The Spring

Triangle's After Eleven Is Great Fun!

REVIEW

Victor Bumbalo, whose comedy, Niagara Falls, was favorably received by critics and audiences here two years ago, has a new work on the boards entitled After Eleven. In its Boston premiere with the Triangle Theater Company, Bumbalo has lost none of his knack for providing material for a very funny and entertaining evening of theatre.

Like its predecessor, After Eleven is comprised of two one-act playlets, its title derived from the fact that most sexual activity in Bumbalo's gay-oriented world occurs after 11 p.m.

The playwright has infinite flair for comedy, not unlike Terrence McNally's in style, and is obviously well-versed in his subject matter, which truthfully mirrors this subculture. However, while Niagara Falls included characters from all walks of life, After Eleven is devoid of heterosexuals. As a result, the author does himself a disservice, for he restricts his audience base rather than broadening his horizons.

Both vignettes focus on role reversals, with riotous results. The title piece takes place in Ken (Raymond G. Gamache) and Frank's (John Spellman) Greenwich Village apartment.

Frank has agreed to let Ken buy a dog for a pet and, in return, Ken has succumbed to Frank's heated entreaties of hiring a hustler ("Thank God for credit cards!") for a threesome. Frank is all agog in anticipation. Ken sulkily questions its wisdom. Young Tim (Joey Branden) arrives.

As the evening wears on, however, Ken warms up to Tim and Frank feels alienated.

The stronger of the two pieces, Kitchen Duty, occurs in an apartment in the same building later that night. Muscular Michael (David Panella), brings home mincing Bob (Joey Branden).

As Michael manipulates Bob into a position of bondage, Bob becomes increasingly nervous, ultimately suffering a violent asthmatic attack. Bob's ex-friend Gary (Steve Auger) brings the desperately needed medication.

Hilariously, the pills serve as a magic potion of sorts, for when Bob and Michael resume their playacting, Bob assumes the role of lord and master, and hunky Michael, the whimpering slave.

Craig Carter's adroit direction keeps the action moving and inoffensive. John Spellman is notable in the curtain raiser and David Panella lends strong support in the finale, in which Joey Branden excels as the "Nellie" Bob. C.R.

Simone has provided a most functional set.

The Triangle closes its season with the world premiere of a new musical, The Flames, in late May, at their showcase, the Paramount Theatre, 58 Berkeley St. in Boston's South End. Call 353-0434.

Olympian Games Is Final A.R.T. Offering

The final offering of the American Repertory Theatre's 1985-86 season will be Olympian Games.

Olympian Games is a musical journey through the groves of classical mythology, based on famous tales of transformation by the brilliant classical Roman poet, Ovid. In Metamorphoses, a narrative poem based on stories of the gods' romantic adventures, Ovid exuberantly recounts Greek and Roman legends about miraculous transformations of shape.

In Olympian Games, Barbara Damashek and Kenneth Cavander have adapted these tales of love and lust, featuring the exploits of Pygmalion and Galatea, Echo and Narcissus, Jove, Adonis, and others, with a musical score that joyfully accompanies the games of the gods.

This production replaces a previously announced project by Andrzej Wajda, whose film commitments prevented his participation in this year's A.R.T. season. He is scheduled to direct during the 1986-87 season.

Olympian Games begins previews 8 p.m. on May 9, with an official opening 7 p.m., May 14 and continues in the repertory with Jean Genet's The Balcony, which returns May 27 through June 18.

The season will conclude with final performances of Robert Wilson's Alceste, from June 27 through July 10.

For tickets and reservations to all of these performances, call the A.R.T. box office at 547-8300. Performances are 8 p.m. Tuesday through Sunday, with matinees at 2 p.m. on weekends. Theatre party, student group and senior citizen rates are available.

Jessica Tandy Shines In Mundane Play

REVIEW

It is always a treat to observe an artist like Jessica Tandy ply her craft, even under imperfect conditions. Such was the case during the recent engagement of Brian Clark's new play, Petition, at the Wilbur Theatre, in which Tandy starred with her husband, Hume Cronyn.

Obviously, the script was going

By Dann Kosow

Performances Season

Clockwise, from left: the heyday of whaling and clipper ships comes alive in Sea Revels at Old South Meeting House; dragons, ducks, and doves add flair to Le Grand David's magic show at the Cabot Street Cinema in Beverly; Gounod's Romeo et Juliette is performed by the Metropolitan Opera at the Wang Center.

through extensive change, for dialogue pickup was hesitant and lines had to be fed due to an occasional memory lapse.

Such problems are easily rectified and excused, for that is the purpose of the out-of-town, pre-Broadway tryout.

However, the major stumbling block here is Clark's uneven play which is, at times, funny, at times absorbing, and at times downright static. Nor does Peter Hall's plebeian direction or John Bury's unattractive set help matters.

All the action in the two-character drama takes place in the Milne living room in their Belgravia, London apartment. Sir Edmund (Cronyn) is an 80-year-old retired Brigadier General, stiff upper-lip, dull, reserved, controlled, arrogant, practical and apolitical, who likes his Scotch.

Lady Elizabeth (Tandy) is warm, voluble, and an independent thinker who, after age 60, earned her degree at Open University and has "voted Labor" since 1945.

During the morning, they hash and rehash politics, their life in Calcutta during World War II when Sir Edmund "was married to the army," morals codes of yesterday and today, the new generation, their four children, eight grandchildren and great grandchild on the way, the threat of the Russians and the prospect of "living under the Russian heel," wars, and soldiering... the happiest days of Sir Edmund's life.

The major thrust is a petition Elizabeth has drawn up, signed, and financially supported, advocating the ban of the H Bomb, in contrast to government leanings. Sir Edmund, stunned at her lack of diplomacy, sees it as "contempt for his values," and is concerned that he will be subject to ridicule. He argues that "the bomb is a defense... a peace treaty" and shudders at being involved in a controversial issue. Elizabeth counters, "Didn't you know we were involved?"

The bantering, bickering and sniping, the pain and the pleasure of a lifetime together, turns less playful when Elizabeth discloses the details of an affair she experienced 30 years earlier, and deadly serious as she stifles the pain of "her insides" by taking an increasing number of pills.

After making light of "the stitch" and "the twinge," she finally bares the discovery of malignant cancer during an operation a year ago and that she has three months or less to live. Edmund, bitter and broken, admonishes her for withholding the information.

Elizabeth consoles, "How could you have coped with it for a year? You always hated long goodbyes!" Amidst mutual protestations of love, they play out their private war and make their own peace. "It's not the end of the world," Elizabeth reflects, "That's why I signed the petition!"

Maritime Music

Sea Revels began in 1984 as a production of Revels in Boston at the historic Old South Meeting House.

This new production of Sea Revels is based on the sea—its rituals, songs, poetry and drama of the seaman, their wives and children and of the fisher-folk of a coastal village.

Revels seeks to create a new community of celebration and interest in our rich maritime heritage within the Boston area and to awaken Boston's pride and awareness in its waterfront past.

Directed by Revels Director Carol Duveneck, the 1986 Sea Revels performances will be in two parts, Part I being set in Boston during the 19th century, with its rich heritage of the days of whaling, square riggers and clipper ships, a tradition portrayed in the music and sea songs of the period.

The rich cultural heritage of life at sea for the seaman as well as life at home for the women and children is depicted in musical terms with well known songs from the Sea Revels record album such as Blow, Ye Winds and the Flam-borough Head Sword Dance.

Again the audience is drawn into the production to help create a fierce storm at sea with sounds of the ship's hull straining, securing of sails, waves, sea-gulls and wind.

The storm subsides with everyone singing the hymn Eternal Father, Strong To Save and the great whaling ship returns to port in Boston with a triumphant and joyous celebration of song and dance.

Sea Revels is a production of Revels, Inc., which was founded by John Langstaff in 1970. This production will feature such noted performers as Peter Marston from the PBS production of Voyage of the Mimi, Boston area actor Bart McCarthy, and the Revels cast of 50 instrumentalists, actors, singers, dancers and children.

For ticket information call Concertix at 876-7777. For more information on Revels, Inc. or Sea Revels, call 864-9183.

What About Art? By Meredith Fife Day

Margaret Swan's aluminum sculpture, Myliitta, is named after the Babylonian goddess of love and war. Gaea, Innana and Paladin are goddesses and gods of other cultures after whom Swan has titled her works.

Grace, Elegance In Metal

The initial impression one gets from Margaret Swan's large wall mounted sculptures is that they are strikingly bold and contemporary in their aggressive, simplified form.

Longer involvement with the pieces, however, brings to light subtle complexities within that economy of form. A myriad of associations along with historical and cultural references to other worlds, other times, emerge.

"The pieces look very much like vessels," says Swan of her 7-foot high aluminum sculptures. "They appear as though something or someone could be inside them."

"The interior space of the sculpture is as important to me as the exterior of the piece."

Swan further plies the mystery of these possibly hollow vessel forms by creating openings through which the wall or shadows may be seen. The openings are then curved and broken by the sculpture's solid planes of metal which deny the complete revelation of what may or may not be contained within.

The figurative implications of these abstract works come, also, from Swan's interest in the cylindrical form that characterizes much of Egyptian, Sumerian and archaic Greek sculpture. Medieval armor, in which metal planes are put together in a way that articulates body parts, is another source for the works.

In Swan's sculpture, though, armor is free of its rigidity, and becomes graceful — even elegant.

Folds of clothing are suggested as the aluminum pleats itself around the pulled-in lower half of the work, Gaea. Planes overlap and curve, catching and reflecting light, then casting shadows on one another.

"The idea of light and shadow is essential to my work," explains Swan. "Perspective, too, becomes an important element. The forms appear to taper away from the viewer, giving an illusion of more volume than there actually is."

The aluminum pieces extend a maximum of about 18 inches from the wall but do appear deeper as a result of Swan's use of linear perspective.

There are also in the current exhibit at Boston Art Institute, four copper sculptures. They are smaller and more recent than the aluminum works and reveal the additional influences of African masks, early constructivist sculpture as well as the work of David Smith, and Constantin Brancusi, of whom whom Swan says "pared something down to its essence."

These pieces, too, are wall mounted, but, unlike the aluminum works, do not have bases which touch the floor and the resulting implication of vessel forms.

They do, however, retain the figurative connotations. The suggestion of heads as the subject of these sculptures is supported by their shapes and the form they take as well as by their titles.

One's Head is a lively assemblage of curved shapes and straight edges. The sum of its varied parts is something very much like the profile of a knight's headpiece.

Here, as in the aluminum pieces, the rivets, functional in holding the planes of metal to one another and to their internal structural armatures, lend visual cadence in the form of surface embellishment.

Swan begins her works with large metal sheets which she cuts with electric shears and "folds" with a sheet metal brake.

The sculpture ultimately takes its form from the curves of pressure created through the process of wrapping and riveting the sheets over their armature.

Swan works out of a studio in Chinatown and resides in Winchester.

She teaches at Middlesex Community College, and in 1985, was awarded a Massachusetts Artists Fellowship.

The exhibit, Margaret Swan: Sculpture, may be viewed at Gallery East, The Art Institute of Boston, 700 Beacon st., Boston, through May 23. Gallery hours are 9 to 4:30 Monday through Friday and noon to 4 Saturday. Call 262-1223.

The Rewards of Caring.

Working in a nursing home in Massachusetts is a very rewarding experience. As anyone who works in a nursing home will tell you, there's no feeling quite like it. To us, the most important people are the people we care for, and there's nothing more satisfying than the joy of bringing them pleasure.

The more than 50,000 people in Massachusetts who work in nursing homes are special individuals who have dedicated their lives to ensuring that frail elders and disabled citizens who need 24 hour care are able to continue leading fulfilling and productive lives as valued members of their communities.

The citizens of the Commonwealth should be aware of the many contributions that have been made, and will continue to be made, by nursing home residents with the support of caring nursing home staffs. May 11-17 is National Nursing Home Week. We invite you to visit us during this special week and throughout the year, and experience for yourself, the rewards of caring.

What's Healthy? About Scabies

By Dr. ROBERT NORMAN

What are scabies? How can they be treated?

Each year up to two million Americans are infested with scabies, a skin condition that produces a rash and a serious itch.

Scabies is caused by a mite that is virtually invisible to the naked eye. The female mite burrows just beneath the superficial layer of skin cells. It then digs a tunnel there, where it lays eggs. The eggs hatch three or four days later, and the newborn mites work their way to the skin surface, where they mature. Often, visible burrows are present on the skin surface, capped by tiny blisters. The skin irritation causes severe itching that is usually most noticeable at night when the victim is trying to get to sleep.

Scabies can present at any point on the body below the chin, although the mites prefer to burrow in certain locations such as the webs between the fingers, the armpits, the underside of the wrists, the back of the elbows, the waist, the lower buttocks, the feet and the ankles, the female breasts and the male genitals.

Scabies can affect anyone of any age. Personal hygiene is not a major factor in the prevention of scabies. The disease is spread by direct skin-to-skin contact or through the clothes or linens of the infested person. Because it is so contagious, entire households can contact the disease.

Diagnosis can be difficult because the symptoms of scabies resemble those of other skin disorders. Diagnosis can be confirmed by scraping off areas of the skin and examining them under a microscope for mites, eggs, or excrement.

Fortunately, scabies can be treated both efficiently and easily. Creams containing lindane or crotamiton are available by prescription, and they almost always kill the mites promptly. Because the disease is readily contagious, once one family member has been diagnosed of having scabies, doctors will sometimes recommend that all family members be treated - even if they show no symptoms. Special sprays can be prescribed for use on clothing and linens to prevent reinfection.

All lotions and creams prescribed for scabies must be used exactly as directed. Otherwise, the treatments themselves might cause other problems that will complicate matters.

Dr. Norman is a Winchester resident who is a family practitioner in Arlington. He is associated with Symmes Hospital. Questions can be addressed to him at 22 Mill st., Suite 109, Arlington, 02174.

CHECK OFFER WITH CARE

Your home has been for sale, inspected and the latest enthusiastic prospect presents you with an "offer" to buy. Review this offer with care. It's an extremely important part of the sale.

Are all names correct? Is the property correctly described? Is the mortgage information accurate? Can you move by the possession date? Is the purchase price satisfactory? Then double check your calculations to be sure you know how much cash you will receive. If you have any doubts about points contained in the offer do not sign it until they have been completely removed from your mind.

The offer to purchase is binding on the purchaser for the amount of time stated in the offer. You can accept it without change. You can let it expire, or you can consider changes. If you change anything in the offer you are reversing the process and making an "offer to sell" to purchaser who then has the same options.

Before you sign, be certain that it clearly states all the points of agreement because the sale will be according to the letter of that script.

Louise Ruma-Ivers is the immediate past President of the Greater Boston Women's Council of Realtors, and a past Director of the Marketing Institute for the Greater Boston Real Estate Board. She is a member of the Arlington Historic Districts Committee.

Dot Stein is a Vice President of the Greater Boston Real Estate Board and a Director of its Multiple Listing Service. She was a long-time Arlington Town Meeting member, and a member of the Arlington School Committee.

Blackpowder Shooters

If YOU think putting holes in paper is about as exciting as watching the traffic lights change, consider team shooting at breakable targets against a stopwatch. The 10th Massachusetts Battery is looking for more people. We are part of the North South Skirmish Association, a 4,000 member competitive shooting organization where the shortest elapsed time wins. Units take their names in honor of actual Civil War regiments and members shoot original or reproduction weapons of the 1841-65 period. The 10th Battery competes with 38 cal. rifled muskets, caplock breechloading carbines, and a 1300 lb. full size 3 inch rifled muzzleloading cannon. Yes, there's some paper punching too for those interested, but the real excitement is in the rapid fire team events where you shoot at flower pots, hanging water-filled coffee cups, ceramic tiles and 32 clay pigeons on a 45' cardboard backer at 50 yds. We welcome all shooters regardless of experience. Our team members live all over — from Maine to Rhode Island to New York — but most are from eastern Massachusetts. Prayer To Holy Spirit

O Holy Spirit, thou who art all knowing, who brightens every path that I may reach my idea, thou who givest me this divine gift of forgiving and forgetting wrongs done to me and who in every instant of my life art with me, I'd like in this short dialogue to affirm my gratitude for all your blessings and reaffirm once again that I never want to part from thee though the illusion of material things abound. My desire is to be with thee and all my loved ones in perpetual grace. Thank you for your mercy on me and mine. Person should pray 3 consecutive days without revealing petition. Within three days, grace will be attained regardless of how difficult the petition may be. Publish this prayer once grace attained. Grateful for grace attained. B.G. 5/8/TF

Audi Remanufactured Parts. Built Like New. Priced For Less.

Remanufactured parts are better than "rebuilt" or "reconditioned" parts. They may even be better than original parts since technical advances are often incorporated into the remanufacturing process. Each unit — alternator, water pump or one of over 300 other parts — is disassembled, cleaned and tested to exacting standards. During reassembly, parts that do not meet these standards are replaced. Then the assembly is tested again to make sure it works as well as the original in every way.

Our remanufactured parts carry the same 6-month/6,000-mile limited warranty as new Audi Parts. The only thing that isn't like new is the price.

*Ask for Autobahn or Audi Limited Warranty at our Parts Department.

Marotta In Final 40 For Astronaut

Perry Marotta of Winchester, a columnist for The Star and an other newspaper, was named Wednesday as one of 40 finalists for a ride on the space shuttle.

She was chosen last month as one of 100 semifinalists in the "Journalist In Space" competition.

One of the final 40 will be chosen to ride in a space shuttle flight. Marotta's selection is especially noteworthy because her column is about everyday subjects, not "hard news."

After her selection as a semifinalist, Marotta said she was excited to be chosen and looked forward to trip May 12-13 to Iowa City for more interviews.

Marotta loved writing in high school but had almost stopped writing for nearly 15 years until she started writing for The Star in 1980.

By GEORGE DERRINGER

Low and moderate income housing, easily the most controversial subject of the Spring Town Meeting, was again postponed Monday night.

The subject will definitely be taken up at 7:30 p.m. today, May 15, however, when the Town Meeting temporarily moves to McCall Junior High School for its deliberations.

Proposals for subsidized family housing units, in other duplexes or single family homes, will be considered then. Passage of any site, however, appears doubtful.

One site, the Woburn Loop property near Skunkton St., will get the recommendation of some. It's a free vote for the Housing Authority.

selectman Wade Welch told other selectmen Monday night before Town Meeting. The state Executive Office of Communities and Development has flatly stated that Winchester must approve seven units of subsidized family housing by the end of May.

Through when the school committee refused to declare the land unneeded, it could not be used for permanent structures, even though the Town of Winchester actually holds title to the land.

Other sites also got cool receptions from selectmen. Welch promised neighbors of the Canal-Hemway St. site he would not vote for that housing site.

Yet another housing site proposed by the Housing Authority, part of the Ambrose School property, fell through when the school committee refused to declare the land unneeded.

It would have met opposition, anyway. Selectmen Judie Muggia said Monday she "objects to taking any school, conservation or park land."

Tonight's meeting will begin with a threat hanging over the head of Town Meeting. The state Executive Office of Communities and Development has flatly stated that Winchester must approve seven units of subsidized family housing by the end of May.

By order of the state transportation commissioner, former railroad right-of-ways like the Woburn Loop cannot be used for permanent structures, even though the Town of Winchester actually holds title to the land.

Tonight's meeting will begin with a threat hanging over the head of Town Meeting. The state Executive Office of Communities and Development has flatly stated that Winchester must approve seven units of subsidized family housing by the end of May.

Through when the school committee refused to declare the land unneeded, it could not be used for permanent structures, even though the Town of Winchester actually holds title to the land.

Other sites also got cool receptions from selectmen. Welch promised neighbors of the Canal-Hemway St. site he would not vote for that housing site.

Yet another housing site proposed by the Housing Authority, part of the Ambrose School property, fell through when the school committee refused to declare the land unneeded.

It would have met opposition, anyway. Selectmen Judie Muggia said Monday she "objects to taking any school, conservation or park land."

Local Man Arrested For 3 House Breaks

Police will issue a warrant for the arrest of a local man suspected of breaking and entering into three Winchester homes last weekend.

33-year-old Paul A. Doyle of 28 Lebanon st. had been arrested and was scheduled to appear in Fourth District Court in Woburn Tuesday but defaulted his arraignment. Police will issue an additional warrant for failure to appear for his arraignment.

The three breaks all occurred on May 10.

An intruder smashed windownpanes of a basement door to break into a Grove pl. home. Police said storage closets in the basement, and rooms on the first and second floors were ransacked. Police reported medicine missing from the medicine cabinet in the bathroom and a small amount of cash.

A Highland ave. resident also reported a break. Police said the intruder smashed the window on the rear door of the home, reached through, and unlocked the door. A general ransacking took place. Police found several beer bottles and an odd design sneaker print on the carpets.

Also on May 10, another Highland ave. resident reported a break. Police again found the same odd design sneaker print at this residence.

Later that day, Bedford police called Winchester police to check on Doyle. Police said he was wanted in Bedford for breaking and entering into Middlesex Community College in Bedford.

Bedford police released Doyle to Winchester officers Peter A. Hersee Jr. and Douglas Wilkinson and brought to Winchester where he was later bailed for court.

The arrest was made through a combined effort of Sgt. Francis R. Manzie, Sgt. John J. Alford, officer John E. Guarante, officer James R. Gallant, Inspector James B. Gray, officer Lewis P. Best, officer Peter A. Hersee Jr. and officer Douglas Wilkinson.

Police chief John McHugh awards Winchester Cooperative nursery school student Stefanie Gentile with a junior police badge. Alison Orecchio watches her classmate receive a badge. McHugh and safety officer Kevin Mawn talked to the class about safety precautions.

Police Arrest Local Man On OUI Charges

Police arrested Anthony R. Schuurman, 21, of Manchester rd. for operating under the influence of an intoxicating liquor and failure to keep right on May 12. His court date has been continued to May 30.

According to police, Schuurman was driving a red Chevrolet pickup truck east on Wildwood st. Police said they observed the truck swerving and crossing the yellow lines in the middle of the street.

Police stopped the truck at Wildwood st. and Fletcher st. and arrested Schuurman. He agreed to a breathalyzer test. He was later bailed at 3:40 a.m.

Police ran a warrant check on Schuurman and found three outstanding warrants from the state police in Andover for driving without a license and registration, in Framingham for driving without an inspection sticker and in Norwell for driving without an inspection sticker. Police said he was bailed separately and given separate court dates for the warrants.

READY FOR A CONDO?

If you have been living in a house, but the children have long since left the nest and you no longer need all that space, you may be ready for a condominium or townhouse. Condominium living, for example, gives you the advantages of home ownership, including tax deductions, but without all the upkeep of a house and yard.

Some condominiums also have recreational areas that are shared by condo owners, such as swimming pools, tennis courts, and other attractions. With no yardwork or house maintenance to worry about, living in a condominium gives you more leisure time to enjoy other activities. Condos can also be a good investment for the money.

Changing from house living to condo living means a change in lifestyle, of course, and this is something you should consider before you buy. Check with your Realtor today to find out what's available and what would best fit your needs.

Winchester Observes First 'Senior Day'

About 400 people marched in Winchester's first "Senior Day" parade Saturday as students and seniors joined forces in mutual support.

The Winchester High School band supplied marching music while Lynch School students and their "grandpals" marched together. Wheelchair-bound seniors from nursing homes were pushed by other seniors while parade participants carried colorful "Jenks Seniors" balloons on the sunny, 70-degree day.

After a 30-minute parade, people of all ages gathered at the Jenks Senior Center for hot dogs, soda and popcorn.

Winchester Seniors Association President Leonor M. Rich welcomed the crowd and a festival chorus of 50 members from four local churches performed for a crowd of several hundred. Participating churches were St. Mary's, St. Eulalia's, the First Congregational Church and the First Baptist Church.

Informal tours of the Jenks Center were given to many participants while an evening dance at the center completed the Senior Day.

Spokesmen for the association said the event "was to acknowledge Winchester's senior population by involving the entire community in a Jenks Center activity."

"Jenks Senior Center is a community resource that affects and involves not just seniors but people of all ages," they said.

"The success of the event illustrates the vitality of the Center and the dedication of hundreds of volunteers who have given generously of their time and financial support to the Jenks Senior Center expansion program," concluded those who coordinated the events.

Groundbreaking Slated Friday

Groundbreaking ceremonies for the proposed addition to Winchester's Jenks Senior Center are scheduled at noon Friday, May 16.

Local government officials, as well as members and officers of the Council on Aging and Winchester Seniors Association, will attend. The public is invited and light refreshments will be served.

Architect for the expansion project is Philip M. Locasiano of Winchester. General contractor is the Bowdoin Construction Corporation of Needham Heights. Among Bowdoin's many area projects are the Hartwood Office Building in Lexington, United Electric Controls in Watertown, and GCA Corporate Data Center in Andover.

Fundraising efforts for the addition began in November and have continued at a steady pace. Although the $850,000 goal has not yet been realized, groundbreaking has been scheduled to take advantage of reliable construction weather during the summer.

Fundraising efforts will continue in anticipation of raising the capital necessary to complete the expansion project.

Baptist Church Explains Condominium Proposal

Housing articles will finally come to Town Meeting for consideration at 7:30 p.m. tonight, May 15, at the McCall Junior High School auditorium.

One housing question, largely lost in debate about Section 705 subsidized family housing proposed by the Winchester Housing Authority, concerns rezoning of the First Baptist Church property.

The Rev. William A. Huegel, pastor of the church, has written to the church's neighbors to explain the project. His letter follows:

"As we hope you know by now, First Baptist Church is looking forward to making some necessary and, we think, exciting changes in the usage of our building.

"We are responding to our sincere need to adapt the size of our facility to our current size of the congregation. Years of careful thought and planning have gone into the best interest of First Baptist Church, the town, and you, our neighbors.

"Our building, built in the shape of a T, naturally divides itself into half. The proposal is to take the 'head' of the T (the half facing Washington Street) and to convert it into 11 living units to be sold as condominiums. We will renovate the 'leg' of the T which houses our sanctuary for Sunday school and church use.

"Several benefits for our neighbors include: (1) The Baptists continue to be your neighbors. The option is to put the building on the real estate market, which might result in a much larger and less desirable group of people coming and going from the building creating an ever-increasing parking problem.

"(2) New landscaping will enhance the appearance of the building.

"(3) No significant exterior changes will be made (slight accommodations for windows only).

"The benefits for our town are: (1) Some new living units to be sold between $150,000 and $250,000 with the elderly as the target group for marketing.

"(2) A broader tax-base. The condominiums will be taxable.

"(3) And the continued ministry and attractive presence of First Baptist Church a 135-year-old institution.

"The benefits for First Baptist Church include: (1) A newly renovated attractive, energy-efficient building.

"(2) Reduced maintenance expenses.

"(3) The joy of seeing all of its facility used wisely.

"(4) The ability to maintain its current location.

"Almost all of the need for church parking is during off peak hours. We will be using the spacious municipal parking lot across the street from us. Condominium owners will take over our present 20-car lot. We envision no additional parking or traffic congestion to the neighborhood.

"All of these changes are conditional upon the approval of Town Meeting for rezoning (from S1 to RB-20). We have gone into covenant with the planning board to assure no major external building changes be made. Even the minor changes will be subject to the board of appeals site-plan review.

"We believe the final product will be enjoyed by the Town, the Church, and by you, our neighbors. Thank you for your support of us now and for so many years."

Berman Appeals To Town For Housing Proposals

Roger Berman, chairman of the Winchester Fair Housing Committee and a member of the Citizen's Advisory Committee to the Winchester Housing Authority, has told Town Meeting members it is "time to act."

In an open letter to Town Meeting members, Berman argues that the town should "approve some, if not all, of the warrants which relate to housing."

Prospects for approval of those articles which count — those which could actually be used for housing in the near future as required by state officials — appear dim, however. Support for them has been minimal at public forums while opponents have been vocal.

The text of Berman's letter: "Nobody said it would be easy."

This statement could have been made about the Spring Town Meeting deliberations. One of the more difficult series of votes will come before you shortly. The series of warrant articles dealing with the use of town owned lands for construction of family housing units will be fully debated.

I am writing this open letter to all Town Meeting members in an attempt to focus this debate on the importance of these votes, and the successful beginning of Winchester meeting its housing needs for many of Winchester's own residents.

The issues at hand, specifically, is the creation of "scattered site," affordable housing for families. As a member of the Winchester Housing Authority's Citizens Advisory Committee, I have looked at this issue closely for a number of months. Through a series of open hearings, and with the encouragement of the WHA, the selectmen and the planning board, a general consensus has developed within the town.

The need for scattered site housing is generally recognized and agreed to as a goal. No one neighborhood should be asked to be the sole location for meeting the entire town's commitment. Further, any housing constructed should conform to the character of the town and should not be so concentrated as to "create a neighborhood unto itself."

Over two years ago, Winchester signed an agreement with the state to create a total of seven units of family housing. Every city and town in the Commonwealth has been required to address this statewide need.

In no way has Winchester been singled out for State attention. In fact, many communities, including Wellesley, Lexington, Newton, Arlington, Acton and Concord, have already either begun or completed their required housing units. Winchester has yet to begin.

In exchange for Winchester agreeing to meet this housing need within its own borders, the state agreed to continue to consider and issue financial grants to Winchester. The funding for the downtown revitalization is probably the best known example of this funding.

During the past two years state funds have continued to flow to the town as a result of the ongoing efforts of the various town boards and committees to shape an approach to meeting this housing need. While no housing has been created, an impartial observer would have to note that while progress may be slow, Winchester has been discussing this need in an open, sometimes spirited, manner.

There can be few residents who have not heard about, read about, or attended hearings which have dealt with the housing issue during the last two years.

Warrant articles which will come before you request the use of town owned land. The most impartial observer quickly realizes that to obtain open land in Winchester in the current real estate market would be financially prohibitive for the town. For this reason, town owned lands have been reviewed.

One argument against using such lands is that this land "is not free." I agree with this statement. It is not free, it has real value. Reasonable men may quarrel as to how, or at what level, to value these parcels in real dollar terms. Nobody can honestly state that using these lands is without some "cost" to the town.

Having stated this land is not "free", I would strongly argue that the cost of not building the housing we agreed to build two years ago will be extremely high.

If the state grants which could be lost as a result of inaction, or negative Town Meeting action, were computed and applied to these parcels their value would be extraordinarily high. Further, the loss of such funding would require certain projects to be shelved, or would require Winchester taxpayers to pay higher fees and or taxes to make up for the loss.

Given the financial implications of such a funding loss, it is all the more imperative for Town Meeting to consider and approve some, if not all, of the Warrants which relate to housing.

I am sure every Town Meeting member has been approached, by mail or in person, by fellow residents who oppose one or all of the suggested sites. I would frankly be surprised if there was no opposition. I doubt any site in as densely populated a community as Winchester would not stir opposition.

However, I urge you to understand that these sites are the end result of a long and open process, they have not been frivolously suggested.

I have deliberately not argued here for or against any given site. I served on the Citizens Advisory Committee which helped select these sites. Candidly, I prefer some sites over others. Certainly, there are sites which I had wished would be put before you, but were voted down along the way. The point to be made at this late hour is Winchester must now act.

We have talked, we have argued, we have held public hearing after public hearing, and the time to act is now at hand. Considering the recognized need, the exhaustive public process, and the financial strings which attach to these votes, I urge you to approve some or all of these warrant articles when they come before you.

'The Ride' Comes To Winchester

State Senator Richard Kraus has announced expansion of "The Ride," the MBTA's door-to-door paratransit program, to Winchester under a six-month demonstration contract with Share-a-Ride, Inc. of Lexington.

Other communities to be served for the first time include Woburn, Burlington and Lexington.

Begun by the MBTA in 1977, The Ride program provides lift-equipped, door-to-door transportation to qualified handicapped and elderly residents in 14 cities and towns.

"Ever since The Ride came to Arlington a couple of years ago, I have worked closely with the MBTA to increase the availability of transportation for citizens with special needs," Kraus said. "This program enables citizens with special needs to take full advantage of social, educational and vocational opportunities."

Eligible residents can take advantage of the ride Monday through Friday from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. Service will be provided within the new towns as well as to such designated transfer spots as Alewife Station (red line) and Arlington Heights for transfer to mainline MBTA service or existing Ride services into Boston.

In addition, users will be able to transfer to lift-equipped MBTA buses on any existing bus route in the towns served by The Ride.

All eligible residents of Winchester should complete an application form and register through the MBTA's office of special needs.

Eligibility is granted to persons who, because of physical or mental disability, are unable to use existing transportation. Reservation, scheduling, and dispatching of vehicles will be carried out through Share-a-Ride, Inc. of Lexington. The Fare will be 75 cents for each one-way trip.

REAL ESTATE AND YOU

The Bixby & Porter Co. Realtors

THE CONDO ALTERNATIVE

If you feel priced out of the market for a single family home, a condominium may be a good alternative. Condos come in all shapes and sizes, and their prices can often be very friendly to first-time buyers.

When you purchase a condo, it can be located in a large building, townhouse or garden apartment project. You own the unit in which you live and a proportional share of the "common elements," such as roof, grounds, hallways, and recreational facilities. In addition to your mortgage, you also pay a monthly fee to cover your share of the project's upkeep. You and your neighbors form an owners' association and elect a board of directors to oversee the project's maintenance.

In most areas, condo buyers have a chance to examine the bylaws, budget and other important documents before finalizing the sale. It's a good idea to understand any restrictions that may be placed on residents. Can you have pets? Are there restrictions on owners' ability to rent their units should they decide to move? Your Realtor can give you information on the range of condos available in your area, and help you match price and life style to your needs!

If you're planning a move, call the professionals at Bixby & Porter Co. Realtors. Our number is 729-7000 or just drop by our offices at 33 Thompson St., Winchester. We're happy to serve all your real estate needs.

School Committee Still Without A Chairman

By MAUREEN QUINLAN

School Committee members will face Town Meeting tonight without a full-time elected chairman.

Members again came up empty-handed Tuesday night after failing to agree about who should fill the chairman's seat.

Member Alice McCarter nominated member William Jervy and member Donna Brandt Landry seconded the motion. Member Steven Powers nominated member Michael Ronayne and Edward F. O'Connell seconded it.

The vote was split down the middle again with McCarter, Jervy and Landry supporting Jervy and Ronayne, Powers and O'Connell supporting Ronayne.

In other action, board members listened to a report about the Winchester High School task force on arts. Assistant principal Karen Koon

Baker, chairman of the task force, addressed the members. She and her committee made suggestions to enhance the current curriculum with art and music.

Members also heard a report about the high school's transition program led by John Pirani and Margaret Sullivan.

The program, in its first year, is designed specifically for students who need extra guidance with organizing their school work, completing homework assignments, and effective ways to study and take tests.

About 20 students are enrolled in the program and meet with Pirani and Sullivan daily.

Superintendent Charles Mitsakos told the committee the lottery for Lynch School all-day kindergarten class will be at 10 a.m. Wednesday, May 21, at the Lynch School. There are 21 openings.

Teresa Dozier of Columbia, S.C., national teacher of the year, will visit Winchester High School Monday, May 19.

All public schools will close for the summer Friday, June 20.

Mitsakos commended and congratulated:

•Kevin Cassidy for winning first prize in a North East Solid Waste Community Contest.

•Dennis Clarke for receiving the honor of scholar-athlete of the National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame.

Judith Hessin for receiving the Fulbright Fellowship to Israel.

Wilbur J. Johnson Jr. for receiving the National Endowment for the Humanities Grant to study drama at Columbia.

Irene Michelson for receiving a grant to study Freud at Occidental College.

•Margaret Sullivan for receiving the opportunity from the National Science Foundation to study science at the Museum of Science in Boston.

Winchester Is Home For Radiation Testing

By GEORGE DERRINGER

Food contaminated by radiation from the Chernobyl nuclear power plant in the Ukraine is coming to Winchester every day.

Winchester has the nation's only U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) laboratories capable of radiation testing. The good news is that the lab off Cross st. is finding very little contamination in most samples.

Paul C. Bolin, director of the FDA labs at the Winchester Engineering and Analytical Center, said contamination of food checked at the lab is relatively minimal.

About 10 people are assigned to radiation testing for the FDA and half of them work on pharmaceuticals, Bolin said.

Those people test samples picked up by FDA investigators to be sure the radioactive drugs go to the right organ and are pure," Bolin explained.

Another five scientists work on radiation in food. Their work has gained much attention in the past few weeks.

Radiation testing of food is hardly new, however. Bolin said the project began in the 1950s and continues with the world's only "total diet samples" today.

The FDA tests 238 different products twice each year to determine just what quantity of pesticides, chemicals, heavy metals and radiation is consumed each year by the average American," Bolin said.

Various tests are done in various places; radiation testing is Winchester's responsibility.

Unusual events put the Winchester lab in high gear.

For six months after the radiation release at the Three Mile Island nuclear plant in Pennsylvania, the lab ran 24 hours a day. The facility has also done testing from nuclear waste dumping in the ocean.

Commercial nuclear power plants are also a routine responsibility. "We test samples of the environment around selected nuclear plants every year," Bolin said.

In addition, the Winchester lab works with the federal Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) a great deal. The EPA tests for radiation levels in Montgomery, Ala., but does not test food at all.

"The radiation testing personnel form a fairly small group. We all know each other by our first names," Bolin said.

Chernobyl Testing

Testing of imported food items after the Chernobyl accident began

The first samples were Norwegian salmon and other fish from Scandinavia. Eventually, the lab will test imported foods from Austria, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Norway, Poland, the Soviet Union, East and West Germany, Finland, Hungary, Sweden, Japan and Italy for effects of Chernobyl radiation.

last week.

"Our district offices were set up to collect four samples a day at each of 23 sites," Bolin explained.

Unfortunately, the lab's equipment can test only 60 samples a day. Bolin said the facility he directs is gearing up for 24-hour operation as more food from Europe comes in.

"So far, we've gotten samples only through air freight," Bolin said. "It hasn't been long enough since the accident for food to arrive on ships."

The first samples arrived May 8. "The countries that were affected were mostly cool countries, with climates very much like ours," Bolin said. "Fruits and vegetables from those countries are not yet available."

Therefore, the first samples were Norwegian salmon and other fish from Scandinavia. Eventually, the lab will test imported foods from Austria, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Norway, Poland, the Soviet Union, East and West Germany, Finland, Hungary, Sweden, Japan and Italy for effects of Chernobyl radiation.

Tested will be fresh dairy products, fresh fruits, fresh vegetables, fresh fish and frozen fish.

Milk, which is most susceptible to contamination from the radioactive isotope iodine-131, is tested by the EPA. Iodine-131 enters the human body either through breathing or eating. That isotope, however, has a "half-life" of only eight days, which means that half of the radioactivity decays away every week.

"In other words, almost three-quarters of the iodine-131 released by Chernobyl has already disappeared," Bolin said. "Five weeks after the accident, we won't be able to detect any at all."

Of longer consequence, however, are two other radioactive isotopes released by the nuclear accident: Cesium-137 and Strontium-90. Those elements enter the food chain through the earth and come up into plant growth.

"Higher levels of those elements won't be showing up in food supplies for a while," Bolin said. "But they have much longer half-lives. Cesium-137 about 30 years and Strontium-90 about 30,000 years."

Bolin listed the results of the first 23 tests of imported food done at Winchester through Tuesday this week. Among 18 samples of salmon, one had a quantifiable amount of radiation while four others had a "detectable" but unmeasurable amount of less than 10 picocuries per kilogram.

"We're excited about being able to study the effect of the accident on the food supply," Bolin said. "But we really don't expect to find anything too significant."

Bolin said the FDA's work "can pretty well assure the American public that the food products coming into this country are okay. Long before there was any danger, we'd be able to see a trend of increasing radiation levels."

Work on the results of the Soviet disaster is only beginning. The EPA was able to begin studies of milk almost immediately after radiation was found on the West Coast and the Winchester FDA facility is working on imported foods.

Later, Winchester scientists will test food arriving by boat and, still later, food grown in the American West. "I really don't think there will be a significant impact on the food supply," Bolin said.

Every substance, including every human being, contains some radioactive particles. Levels in imported food tested so far, however, are so low that it takes 50 minutes in a five-ton steel box to quantify them. "What we get is not that significant since it takes 50 minutes of counting to separate the emissions from background radiation," Bolin said.

"If we had something that was really hot, more highly radioactive, we could complete a test in 10 minutes or so," Bolin said.

Testing is done by placing the material to be tested in a refrigerator-shaped box surrounded by lead and steel. Radioactive emissions are counted for the next 30 minutes and the radioactive substances responsible are determined by scientists, including Winchester resident Ed Baratta.

Background radiation, always present in the atmosphere, is partly natural and partly man-made. "Cesium-137 and Strontium-90 are man-made elements and most of what is in the atmosphere comes from the above-ground tests of nuclear weapons," Bolin said. "I don't expect much change in the levels of those elements because of Chernobyl."

Winchester's facility does many kinds of radiation studies, Bolin explained, in addition to food. "This is the lab that did the studies of video terminals to determine there is not a problem with them in terms of radiation, although there may be in terms of ergonomics."

The Winchester facility also tests other consumer products for radiation levels. They include microwave ovens, sun lamps, ultra-sonic therapy devices, x-ray machines including dental x-rays, pacemakers and syringes.

About 75 people work at the FDA facility in Winchester, about 45 of them in analysis and 30 in various supporting roles.

Unfortunately, the lab's equipment can test only 60 samples a day. Bolin said the facility he directs is gearing up for 24-hour operation as more food from Europe comes in.

ABC (A Better Chance) House sent some folks to The Star last week to collect cans from our lunch room, which is a pretty good place to find them.

ABC will have its big bottle and can drive in June, when a collection depot will be in operation. If you have lots of cans and bottles, ABC would appreciate it if you'd save them until then.

By the way, company lunchrooms could also help out quite painlessly by saving bottles and cans for ABC.

Clarence Borggaard of 22 Franklin rd., well known through many years of Town Meetings, was in his garden Sunday afternoon when he spied a pink balloon.

Attached to the balloon was a postcard and a message from Mary Sutcliffe, a resident of the Broadway Nursing Home in Methuen, about 25 miles due north.

"My balloon has been sent into the air on Mother's Day 1986," the message said, adding instruction for its return.

"The winds probably blew it out to sea and back to Winchester, all in one day," Borggaard surmised.

The Star has gotten a dozen phone calls so far from members of Winchester High School Classes of 1936, 1941, 1946, 1951 and so on. "Are we having a class reunion?" ask callers from Arizona, Florida, California, Medford and many places in between.

Unfortunately, the high school doesn't keep track or answer the callers' questions. We would appreciate it very much if classes planning reunions this year, either this summer or in the fall, would let us know right away.

We're keeping the callers' names here and can supply reunion organizers with some names and addresses of long-lost classmates.

Newspaper Error Can Be Funny

By GEORGE DERRINGER

As amply demonstrated last week, when I wrongly identified the speaker from the board of health at the Town Meeting, newspapers are hardly free of errors.

Despite hooting and hollering from the Right (which says newspapers are all "liberal media types") and the Left (which says newspapers are the guardians of big business), anyone who has been around newsrooms a while knows errors are almost always unintentional.

We also know they could have been avoided. For last week's error, I apologize. It should have been avoided.

But the incident got me thinking about errors in newspapers in general. Perhaps you'd enjoy some of them.

My first newspaper outraged a proud mother when a wedding story reported that the bride's mother wore a gown "trimmed in milk." The next day we printed a correction. It said her gown was "trimmed in hink." We gave up. There were no more corrections of that story.

My dad worked at a newspaper for 30 years. Its best boo-boo of all times came during the Korean War.

Mrs. John Smith and her six-month-old son, Charles, traveled to Hawaii last week to visit their husband and father, Capt. John Smith. Mrs. Smith had not seen her husband in two years.

Down in Maine, one of our neighborhood correspondents from a place called West Warren wrote both of these gems:

(1) "We had a bird in our living room last week but Harry opened the window and he flew out."

(2) "It was good to see Elmer Little again at the Seafoods Festival. I remember him as a little girl."

The first of those was printed; the second was not.

A Maine Rotary Club presented an award to the publisher of my paper for contributing waste paper to the club's recycling truck. The Rotary press release, however, wrote it this way:

"The club wants to honor those who assist its community projects and therefore gave an award to Sam Roberts, a Rotary object."

They meant such honors were "a Rotary objective" but that's not what they said and not what was printed.

Fortunately, I was not working at that Maine paper when any of those were printed. But I have the clippings in my file cabinet.

Some day I'll also have a colossal mistake similar to those above in my file cabinet. Once and for all, I'll have to face what everyone knows already: nobody's perfect and I'm not even close.

But headlines are the best place of all for unintentional mistakes. Columbia Journalism Review, a trade magazine, collects such errors. Here are two favorites, from the Orange County (Calif.) Register and the New York Times respectively:

Too Much Talk, Not Enough Communication In World Today

By TERRY MAROTTA

The whole trouble with the world is there's too much talk in it and not enough communication.

Everywhere you go today, talk spills over you, filling your ears and running down your shoulders. You hear talk on the radio, talk on TV, talk in the supermarket: "How are you, and how are you?" and the weather and the rain and that dear little dress, and is that right, the carburetor, uh uh, you're tellin' me, those Red Sox, har har, don't take any wooden nickels, and ain't it the truth..."

There's a lot to be said for speaking little in this life: people respect the quiet type.

Take the man I married. He believes it's better to keep silent and be thought a fool than to open one's mouth and remove all doubt.

He maintains a prudent silence in many social situations, and people think he's next door to Jesus as a result.

Sitting Bull was a man like my husband in this regard.

The famous Sioux chief had little English himself, and he liked it that way. He saw no reason to converse at length with a paleface.

According to all reports, he confined his remarks in our tongue to a handful of terse phrases.

He could say "Seeda Boo," his pronunciation in English of his own name; "hello, hello," "You bet!"; and "How 'ma ter?" which could mean either "How much?" "How are you?" or "Can I borrow a match?"

He was of course, fluent in the tongue of his own people, as well as in the mystical vocabularies of smoke and hand signal. And nobody misunderstood him when he spoke with the whistling arrow to General

Custer's surprised and doomed men.

Actions speak louder than words, then.

And what are words anyway, but small burps of sounds wrapped up in fancy rhythm? People rarely say just what they mean in the first place.

I know a few, in fact, who say just the opposite. One will tell venture tentatively, after a morning of watching your kids, that "they were very good, really," which means, CONSIDERING THEY'RE SUCH ANIMALS.

Another will come up to someone and purr, "You've lost weight, haven't you, dear?" which means, YOU'RE STILL A REAL SOW, THOUGH.

These people are dying to say the nasty thing, just for the keen piercing pleasure of it, but due to the dictates of good manners, they hide their malice in doubletalk.

To be fair, though, most of us do try to express ourselves truly. And if we don't all say what we mean at times, maybe it's because we don't know what we mean.

I grew up in a family of lawyers and schoolteachers; our idea of normal conversation revolved around the effort to get people to say what they meant.

We specialized in verbal arm-wrestling and the splitting of hairs.

One would say, "Have a nice day," and another would reply, "What do you mean by 'nice'?" What do you mean by 'have'?" A third would chime in then with, "What do you mean by 'What do you mean'?"

We liked to pin a person down in those days. We liked to get him to go on the record. We used to call my mom the District Attorney back when my sister and I began dating; she could take a boy that showed up at the front door and grill him like a Swiss cheese on rye before he knew he was even on trial.

Most of us aren't like that though. I realize myself now that communication between humans is a flawed thing at best.

I make my living in the field; and though I do try hard to express myself honestly, I find that some people are bound to misconstrue me.

They say, "I gather by your column that you practice witchcraft," or "How nice to see that you too support Handguns for Pets."

I used to try to set the record straight on scores like these. I used to roll up my sleeve and get ready to arm-wrestle with the folks who so mistook me.

But now I just smile. I think of old Sitting Bull. "Hello, hello," I tell them with a smile. "You bet, you bet."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Thanks For Band Support!

TO THE EDITOR:

On behalf of the Gator Bowl committee, and the students in the Winchester High School Bands, I would like to thank you and The Star for the special consideration you gave in running the four articles leading up to the band's recent Pops Concert.

The concert was a great success from several standpoints, including attendance, and I know that your featuring the pre-concert articles helped to make that possible.

The band has quite a way to go before they have enough money to go to the Gator Bowl Festival, but with the impression they made at the Pops Concert, I know this town will find a way to send them.

Once again, thank you.

Sincerely yours,
Richard L. Pharo

Feuss Thanks Senior Committee

TO THE EDITOR:

We are so happy to thank all who attended the Winchester Senior Association Brunch on Sunday, May 4.

Thanks to Helen Hodgdon and her committee of volunteers who prepared an elegant brunch.

Our many thanks to the Winchester Women's Republican Club and the Republican Town Committee who assisted with serving, and to all who donated the delicious breads.

The crafts displayed were made by members of Jane Norberg's class and the paintings were created by the art class.

Again our many thanks to all.

Very truly yours,
Anne Feuss,

Pops Concert Was Special

TO THE EDITOR:

Saturday evening, May 9, over 300 people were treated to a very special Pops Concert, performed by the Winchester High School Concert Band and the Stage Band. For those accustomed to the usual semi-annual band performances at the high school, let us assure you this Pops concert was dramatically different. It was a striking success.

Comments following the concert from many many people confirmed our impression that this performance was the best concert the bands have given within the memory of the people there.

The young musicians who put in the extra effort and committed the additional time to make this concert happen are to be especially commended. They were determined to demonstrate to the Town just what they could do for a special cause, and they truly came through. This exceptional concert was the result of exceptional effort by the members of the Bands.

The musical best of the students was brought out by the band director, Ms. Priscilla Miller, who undertook this musical endeavor as an added effort in the otherwise very busy schedule of the bands for other events at the school and throughout the Town. It was her confidence in the abilities of the students that made the magic happen.

Other students (including some eighth grade band members, and some members of the Flag and Rifle Corps) associated with the marching band, but not part of the concert or stage band, also worked hard to help set up the gymnasium at McCall and handle program distribution and refreshments at the concert.

Many band parents, and some non-parents as well, helped with tickets, advertising, refreshments, decorations, programs, set-up, and clean-up. Rather than risk excluding someone, we will only note that the esprit shown by all these hard workers was commendable.

Finally, the overall support of the Town in seeing to it that this concert was a success was notable. Merchants, school custodians, guests at the concert, and all who participated in one area or another said in their own way, "We believe in these young people."

On behalf of the Gator Bowl Committee, we want to thank all of these people for their efforts. You helped to demonstrate once again that in Winchester there exists town-wide enthusiasm and commitment for exceptional performance.

BEACON HILL ROLL CALL

The House, "Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local representatives' votes on 13 roll calls from the week of May 5 - 9.

High Schools Grads (H 1261)-House 90-57, rejected a bill establishing requirements, effective in 1991, which high school students must meet in order to graduate. Requirements include a passing grade for four years of English, two each of math, social studies and science, one of fine arts or humanities, and one half of computer science or business.

Supporters said the bill will strengthen the system and insure students have a decent minimum education.

Opponents, noting most communities in the state already comply in these areas, said the local communities should retain the power to set these standards.

A "Yea" vote is for the bill. A "Nay" vote is against it.

Representative Sherman Saltmarsh voted yes.

Regents' Diploma (H 1713)-House 76-70, rejected a bill establishing a voluntary statewide exam for graduating high school seniors and awarding a Regent's Diploma to those students scoring at least 80 percent. The bill also allows students scoring in the top ten or the top 1000 students, whichever is less, to attend any state school tuition free providing they are accepted by the school and then maintain a 3.0 average.

Supporters said the $5 million proposal would be a real incentive to students.

Opponents said the bill is flawed because it offers substantial financial assistance based on a single test.

A "Yea" vote is for the bill. A "Nay" vote is against it.

Supporters said the bill was a major step in a solution to this pressing problem.

A "Yea" vote is for the bill.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

Mail Registration (H 1000)-House 93-56, rejected an initiative petition providing a system of voter registration by mail.

Supporters, noting the bill included many safeguards, said the system has worked well in other states and will increase registration among many groups.

Opponents said it will result in abuse and fraud and noted current laws provided for late night and weekend registration sessions for anyone who cannot register during regular hours.

A "Yea" vote is for the bill. A "Nay" vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted no.

Tax Limit (H 1001)-House 93-49, rejected a complex initiative petition sponsored by Citizens for Limited Taxation, limiting state tax revenue growth to the level of growth in state wages and salaries and requiring any revenues raised above the limit to be returned to taxpayers.

Supporters said the measure will finally limit the state's revenues and noted that if in effect this year the bill would have returned $450 million to taxpayers.

Opponents said the bill is too restrictive and noted they supported alternative measures.

A "Yea" vote is for the bill. A "Nay" vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

School Breakfast (S 1677)-House 92-48, gave initial approval to a bill requiring several more Massachusetts communities to provide a school breakfast program giving free or low cost breakfasts to needy students. The House earlier had rejected 32-62, an amendment allowing school committees to vote annually not to participate in the program.

Bill supporters, noting the program is reimbursed by the federal government, said it will provide breakfasts to another 40,000 needy kids.

Bill opponents said the bill violates Proposition 2½ and claimed the decision should be left up to local communities. Both roll calls are listed.

The first is on passage of the bill 92-48. A "Yea" vote is for the bill. A "Nay" vote is against it.

The second is on defeat of the local option amendment 32-62. A "Yea" vote is for the amendment. A "Nay" vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted no on the first roll call.

Saltmarsh voted yes on the second.

Jails (H 5607)-House 126-15, gave initial approval to a bill providing for the takeover of county jails by the state. The package provides $35 million in funding and includes upgrading of prisons and construction of new facilities.

Supporters said the bill will lift a financial burden from counties and create a more efficient prison system.

Opponents said the takeover will result in mismanagement and increased costs.

A "Yea" vote is for the bill. A "Nay" vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

Jail Jobs (H 5607)-House 106-41, rejected an amendment making the hiring of certain jail employees subject to civil service requirements.

Amendment supporters said this is the only way to insure hiring of competent people and elimination of patronage.

Opponents said the bill already protects against patronage and contains provisions requiring that strict guidelines be followed in hiring practices.

A "Yea" vote is for the amendment. A "Nay" vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

Malpractice (H 5612)-House 133-3, gave initial approval to a medical malpractice reform bill including a controversial provision placing a $500,000 cap on pain and suffering awards in medical malpractice cases.

Supporters said the bill begins to address the many problems in the system and argued it was fair to all sides and will help stop the soaring costs of insurance which has driven doctors out of the state.

Opponents said the bill contains many flaws and cited the wide range of reasons for their opposition.

A "Yea" vote is for the bill. A "Nay" vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

Cap (H 5612)-House 92-57, rejected a $250,000 cap on pain and suffering awards in medical malpractice cases and then 36-62, approved a $500,000 cap.

Cap supporters said a cap is necessary to make the bill effective and noted it would save money in premium costs and help jurists select reasonable damages.

Opponents said a cap was too restrictive and is unfair to victims.

Two roll calls are listed. The first is on the 92-57 vote against the $250,000 cap. The second is on the 36-62 vote for the $500,000 cap.

On both rolls, a "Yea" vote is for the cap. A "Nay" vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted yes on the first roll call.

Saltmarsh voted yes on the second.

Obstetricians (H 5612)-House 73-63, approved an amendment eliminating a complicated section of the malpractice bill which allows an insurer to make an "early tender offer" to a damaged party who was treated by an obstetrician.

Amendment supporters said the section is unfair, anti-woman and unconstitutional. They said it requires a woman to accept an offer which is based on unfair conditions, does not allow for damages for pain and suffering and noted it results in this group of patients being treated differently than others.

Opponents, noting many obstetricians are vulnerable and have left the state, said the section is reasonable and noted the offer is subject to certain conditions which are fair. They said it usually takes years for these cases to get to court, claimed that doctors usually win and argued this will save litigation costs.

A "Yea" vote is against obstetrician section. A "Nay" vote is for it.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

The Senate, "Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local senators' votes on two roll calls from the week of May 5 - 9.

Campaign Contributions (S 1328)-Senate 27-10, suspended rules to allow a bill to be considered immediately by the Senate. The bill would raise the amount of a contribution which must be individually reported by candidates for legislative, county and statewide offices from $15 to $50. The measure also clarifies a state law by requiring candidates to keep records of all contributions under $50.

Supporters of rule suspension said the bill tightens up the laws and noted the increase to $50 reflects a changing economy and puts Massachusetts in line with other states.

Opponents said the hike to $50 will encourage mischief and actually weakens the laws.

A "Yea" vote is rule suspension. A "Nay" vote is against it.

Senator Richard Kraus voted yes.

Nurses (S 1398)-Senate 27-10, refused to table a bill allowing certain nurses including nurse practitioners, nurse midwives and psychiatric nurses to order certain diagnostic tests and prescribe drugs for patients.

Supporters, noting the nurses could only do these things under a doctor's supervision, said the bill will reduce costs and improve access without sacrificing quality medical care.

Opponents said the bill grants a dangerous extension of authority and emphasized that the "supervision" does not require the presence of a doctor. They argued the measure reduces the quality of medical care and destroys safeguards.

A "Yea" vote is for tabling the bill. A "Nay" vote is against tabling.

Kraus voted yes.

National Teacher Of The Year Visits Winchester High

By JIM WOODWORTH
National Teacher of the Year Therese "Terry" K. Dozier will visit Winchester High School Monday, May 19, with a press conference there scheduled at 9 a.m. before several visits to classrooms.
Dozier will be in the Greater Boston area for three days and will visit 12 high schools.
A 10th grade world history teacher at Irmo High School in Columbia, S.C., since 1979, Dozier beat finalists from every state for the award.
The National Teacher of the Year program is sponsored by the Council of Chief State School Officers in conjunction with Good Housekeeping magazine and Encyclopedia Britannica.
As National Teacher of the Year, Dozier has spoken to numerous groups of professional educators and policymakers across the country.
During her visit to Winchester, Dozier will discuss the challenges of teaching as a career with the students.

"From a very early age, I have been personally aware of history's impact on people's lives," Dozier said recently. "Since my life has been directly influenced by historic events, it seems quite fitting that I am now teaching world history."
Dozier's father, a colonel in Hitler's Waffen Secret Service, fled from Germany in the closing days of World War II before he could be brought to trial. He was accepted into the French Foreign Legion and sent to French Indo-China, where he met Dozier's mother, a Vietnamese woman.
After the untimely death of her mother, Dozier and her younger brother were sold to a Chinese businessman, who gave the children to a Chinese woman living on a sampan in the Saigon River.
Authorities discovered the children there and turned them over to a French orphanage.
Dozier and her brother were adopted by an American serviceman, an act that required a special act of Congress.
"My brother and I became the first Vietnamese children to be adopted by an American couple," Dozier said. "Thus, the American involvement in Vietnam proved, at least for me, to be most fortunate."
Dozier's family settled in Punta Gorda, Fla., when her father retired from the Army in 1959. Dozier graduated from Charlotte High School as valedictorian in 1970 and entered the University of Florida, where she graduated as the school's Outstanding Four-year Scholar in 1974.
Dozier's first teaching position was at Lincoln Middle School in Gainesville, Fla., where she taught social studies, math and English from 1974-76.

She then taught fifth through eighth grade math at Miami Edison Middle School for one year before moving on to Irmo High.
"I feel very fortunate to teach at Irmo because I consider it to be one of the finest schools in South Carolina. The professional level of the staff and the quality of the students have greatly enhanced my professional development," Dozier said.
Dozier's awards include the 1985 Fulbright Scholar to China, the 1985 South Carolinian of the Year, the John K. Cauthen Leadership Award (shared with South Carolina Gov. Richard W. Riley) and the 1985 University of Florida Distinguished Alumnus Award.
She was also a 1985 state alternate for the NASA Teacher In Space Project and the 1985 South Carolina Teacher of the Year.
"I have never regretted my decision to teach," Dozier said. "I count myself as extremely fortunate to have found a profession that I truly love."

Mortensen, Spencer To Spend Summer Abroad

The American Field Service (AFS) has accepted two Winchester students, Eric Mortensen and Lisa Spencer, for summer programs abroad.
Mortensen will fly to Kuala Lumpur and be placed with a family in Malaysia. "Malaysia was my first choice," he says. "It's a growing culture, very different from ours." A sophomore, Mortensen has been active in drama, music, and sports at Winchester High School.
Spencer, a junior, was selected for the AFS Language Study Program. She will live with a family in Germany, attend language classes five hours each week, and enjoy many activities planned especially for AFS students in the area.
According to Spencer, "The language department at the high school is great." She is taking Spanish, German, and Italian now, and hopes to study Russian and Japanese in college.
Mortensen and Spencer applied for AFS programs last fall, and were interviewed by the student selection committee of the newly formed Winchester Chapter of AFS. The national American Field Service Organization made the final selection.
Information about AFS will be available at Town Day, or contact Cathy Alexander of Grassmere ave. or Kaye Nash of Olde Lyme rd.

Jake Horn Square Will Be Dedicated Saturday, May 24

The John T. "Jake" Horn Square at the corner of Main and Thompson streets will be dedicated in formal ceremonies at 2 p.m. Saturday, May 24, when a plaque will be placed in the sidewalk in Horn's memory.
Town Meeting authorized the square in November 1984 and funds were raised to complete the project.
"We will dedicate a suitable memorial plaque so all who pass by will know that this town chose to honor this man — our friends, co-worker and leader of veterans' organizations," said Warren T. Bolivar.
Bolivar said Horn "was a hometown boy at heart. Though he entered the service as a young man in World War II, his only thought at war's end was to return to Winchester."
For the next 35 years, Horn was employed by the town's department of public works.
"Others may have thought they were running the town but Jake, in his quiet and dependable way, made sure the town kept running," Bolivar said.
Horn was involved in other activities at the end of the work day. "For decades he was an indefatigable champion for American veterans and was active on the local scene as Commander of Veterans of Foreign Wars (VFW) Post No. 3719.
Horn served as marshal of the Memorial Day parade for many years and worked behind the scenes to insure continuance of the parade.

Even failing health failed to keep Horn away from the parade in his final year, Bolivar recalled.
In addition, Horn served as the town's caretaker of veterans' graves for 25 years as he and his wife, Dawn, placed flowers at the grave of every known Winchester veteran buried in the area.
"It was a labor but a labor of love and passionate loyalty for Jake," Bolivar said. "Now we have the opportunity to show our appreciation for that loyalty by making sure a permanent decoration marks the square designated as a tribute to Jake's selfless service."
Bolivar and other members of the Jake Horn Memorial Committee said Horn "was a quiet man and, by most economic indicators, would not have been considered rich. But he was rich in spirit, rich in friends, rich in his love of his community, and rich in his genuine patriotism. He was a man of the people."
Dedication of the Jake Horn Memorial will take place two days before Memorial Day. Veterans will attend the Crawford Memorial Methodist Church at 10:30 a.m. Sunday.
The Memorial Day parade is scheduled at 9-15 a.m. Monday, May 26, Memorial Day.

Sidewalk repairs and replacements will account for $25,000 of the lump sum.

A further $20,000 was approved for reconstruction of the high school's rear parking lot and electrical service repair of entrance ramps, the courtyard area of the auditorium and tennis courts.

A sum of $120,000 was appropriated for water cleaning and line and $85,000 for infiltration inflow improvement.

Town Meeting voted to spend $106,300 for Department of Public Works vehicles and equipment; $32,400 for the purchase of two new

WINCHESTER STAR

Young Piptas, Child Actor 11 Going On 30

By MAUREEN QUINLAN

Not many 11-year-olds get on stage. Even fewer get to portray someone like themselves for an audience.

But Lincoln School student Christopher Piptas is the exception. He played an elf, Junot, in the Boston Children's Theatre production of "Cinderella." Christopher describes his character as "sophisticated and serious. He's the one who makes judgements and answers questions."

Junot is a "well-wisher." He grants wishes to people. But Christopher insists, "I don't see myself as an elfish type of person."

Christopher says he's often been told he acts a lot older than 11. "When I'm around adults I'm intellectual without realizing it. I can relate to them on their level and I think I can relate to my friends pretty well," he says.

It might sound like a juggling act, but Christopher seems to flawlessly handle himself in either situation.

Christopher has been taking acting classes at the Children's Theatre for two seasons. "Cinderella" was his first stage performance in the company.

Christopher took center stage dressed in a white ruffled shirt, a flashy green sequined double-breasted vest, blue and green tie-dyed tights and huge ears "that go boing!"

Tie-dyed ballet shoes and bright green tights don't make the most comfortable costume, but Christopher managed.

"I feel so foolish in them, but when I'm surrounded by all the other characters, I'm not so shy." He laughs and gestures toward his face. "During my first performance my face was red through the whole thing."

But Christopher says he never had difficulty staying in character.

"A costume like that—it's got to keep you in character," he says.

By the time the show was over, "I felt so accustomed I could walk down Madison Avenue dressed in costume."

"No matter how well you know your lines, you must bring your script everywhere you go."

Christopher's says his interest in acting is understandable.

"My whole family is arts-oriented," he said.

His father is an architect, his grandfather was an artist, his mother still dabbles in acting and dancing, and his sister is pursuing acting, dancing and singing.

Even at 11, Christopher says he's sensitive to women. For several years he has been living just with his mother. A lawyer, "she works long and hard hours," Christopher says.

Even though his mother isn't there when he gets home from school, Christopher doesn't feel cheated in any way because he understands his mother's commitment to her career.

"I respect that," says Christopher. "I've gotten a better sense of responsibility without my mother waiting on me hand and foot. But there is always the human element; I miss my mom because she's away a lot," he declared.

But, like his mother, Christopher is a realist. "I wouldn't like to make a living out of it (acting). I have a passion for cars, old and new," he says.

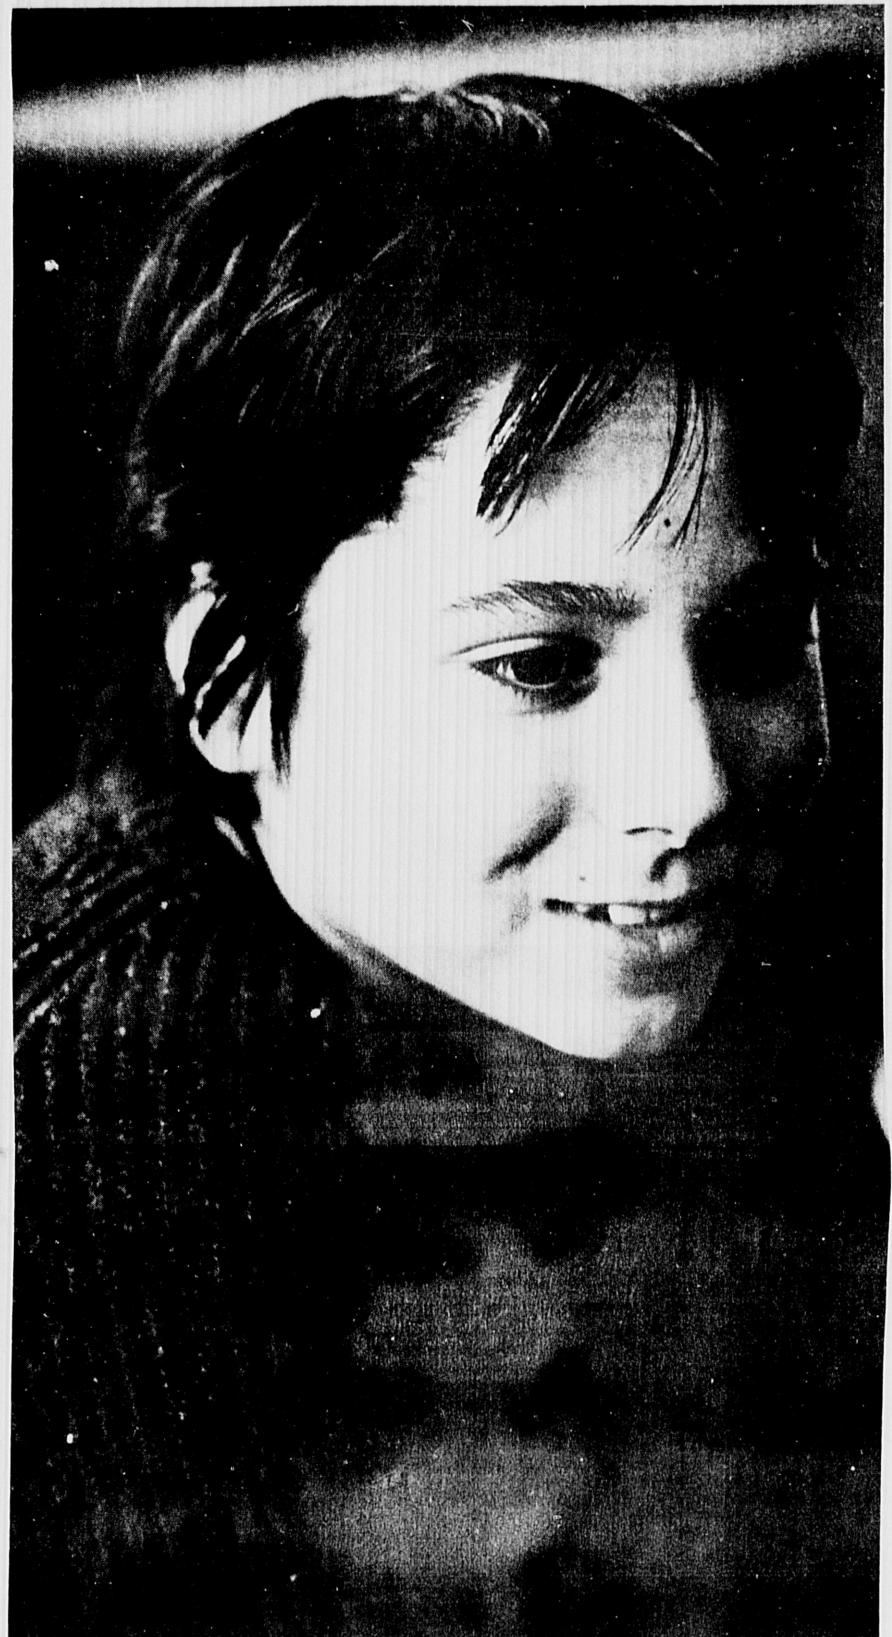

Christopher already has visions of the car of the future: practical and economical, but still appealing to the driver.

The walls of his room are covered with pictures of automobiles from copies of Road and Track magazine.

Ten or 15 years down the line Christopher expects he'll be dabbling in acting, but concentrating on excelling in auto design.

"Right now, I think that's what I'll be best suited for," he said.

"When I'm around adults I'm intellectual without realizing it. I can relate to them on their level and I think I can relate to my friends on my level," says Christopher.

CLUB NOTES

Members of the Winchester Home and Garden Club have been active recently in both Winchester and Boston events. Three members were responsible for special arrangements to complement works of art at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts "Art in Bloom" days April 29 to May 1.

Louise Kell, assisted by Polly Keppler, used delphinium, larkspur, roses and carnations to pick up Monet's colors in his "Cathedral at Rouen." Lucille Grassi was also assigned to work in the special Monet to Matisse Collection and had a spectacular arrangement using muted tones to reflect the darker colors of Manet's "Madame Brunet."

In the Asian Gallery, Edythe Salter's design of roses and peonies in an antique embossed Indian pitcher reflected the tones of a seventeenth century Indian tapestry entitled "Roseblossoms."

Locally, members were responsible for the lovely floral arrangements in evidence in the homes selected by the Winchester Historical Society for their May 10 Winchester Historic Homes Tour. Led by Rita Harms, those participating included Ruth De Sanctis, Polly Keppler, Marilyn Buckley, Deborah Broadhurst, Florence Gosselin, and Joan Maio.

Girls' Tennis Teams Advance

Winchester's Karen McCall and the Sachemettes doubles teams of Lulu Kermond/Kelly O'Callahan, and Kristin Rothmann/Kathy Gray fought hard last weekend to earn places in the quarterfinals of the MIAA North Individual Tennis Tournament in Billerica this weekend.

McCall crushed Andover's Erin Crossman 6-1, 6-1 and Manchester's Erin Sullivan 6-2, 6-1, before falling behind 1-5 to Reading's Gail Grasella in her final match of the afternoon.

McCall stormed back, however, to take the set 7-5, and the next set 6-1.

Winchester's first doubles tandem of Kermond and O'Callahan won easily before a tough final match they won 3-6, 6-1, 6-2.

Winchester's second doubles team of Rothmann and Gray defeated Methuen by default, Swampscott 6-3, 6-2, and finally Andover 6-2, 3-6, 6-4.

The Sachemettes were 3-0 during the regular season.

Boys' Tennis Teams Shine

Sachem singles aces Shawn Herlihy and Joe Palumbo, joined by the doubles teams of Hank Lynch/Chris Terpko, and Chris Aronson/Elliott Foley, rolled over the competition as they advanced to the quarterfinals of the MIAA North Individual tournament.

Herlihy defeated St. John Prep's Dave Perkins 6-0, 6-3 to advance to this weekend's competition in Billerica. Palumbo earned his quarterfinal berth by defeating teammate Gavin Barton 6-2, 6-2.

In doubles, Lynch and Terpko beat Prep's Newman and Osborne 6-2, 6-2, while Aronson and Foley had little trouble handling Lynnfield's Rotenberg and Sim 6-2, 6-0.

Sachems Lacrosse Winners

The Sachems came up winners and losers in lacrosse action last week, losing 7-1 to Lincoln Sudbury Tuesday, then beating Framingham North 8-0 Friday.

Two-day losses came with no lack of shot by Winchester, particularly in the second half, when Sachem attackers and muddies harassed the Warriors' net to no avail. Winchester's sure shots just could not find net.

On the other hand, the Sachems' defense continues to improve, making the critical transition from defense to attack an increasingly effective weapon for Winchester.

Friday, Winchester had to overcome two first-period goals by North to achieve a 4-3 standoff at halftime. After North scored early in the third period, Sachem John Ward took snappy assists from George Nowell for two goals within 15 seconds, putting Winchester in front 4-4.

In the fourth period, attacker James Campo scored off a Peterl Murray feed, and Rob Arcari followed with another goal.

Arcari had three goals, Ward and Campo each had two goals and one assist, while Murray pitched in with a goal and two assists.

Sachems Record Is Now 7-3

The Winchester High baseball team improved its record to 7-3 Friday with an easy 4-2 victory over the 14 Marauders of Belmont High.

The game was never as close as the score. Tim Budrewicz, pitching for the Sachems, kept Belmont hitless into the fifth inning and allowed only two hits through seven innings of play.

The Marauders' two runs came, in fact, off a sacrifice squeeze bunt in the first inning and a Sachem error late in the final inning.

In between, Winchester got runs from Peter Delvecchio, Dan Costello, who had singled earlier, and Mike White and Kenton with one run each.

Fitzpatrick In AAU Competition

Sarah Fitzpatrick of Winchester has qualified for the Amateur Athletic Union (AAU) championship gymnastics meet May 18 at East Longmeadow.

Fitzpatrick, who competes for the Montvale School of Gymnastics, qualified with an all-around score of 29.0 points.

Haddad Earns Bowdoin Letter

Laura Haddad of 19 Ardley rd, Winchester, has earned a varsity letter in skiing at Bowdoin College in Brunswick, Maine.

A member of Bowdoin's Class of 1988, she is a graduate of Winchester High School.

WHS Sailing Team Is Second In Nationals

The Winchester High School Sailing team competed in the two-day National High School Championship Sailing regatta May 3-4 at the U.S. Naval Academy in Annapolis, Md.

Competing with the top 23 qualifying schools from all regions of the U.S. who had been invited to compete for the Mallory trophy, Winchester's combined A and B divisions sailed in to an incredible second place, the best performance ever by a public school team.

The first day of tough competitive racing in heavy wind saw Winchester move steadily from 10th position to third place. Following the second day, Winchester had moved ahead to second place and had closed the gap to seven points.

Skipper Jim Bowers placed fourth in the individual A division and B division skipper Mike Bowers held a third place. Crewing for the A division was Dan O'Grady with Allison Price as alternate and crew for the B division was Heather Price.

The following teams finished in the top half of the regatta:

1. Tabor Academy, Mass., 109, 2
- Winchester H.S., 116, 3
- Bishop Hendricken, R.I., 126, 4
- Darien H.S., Conn., 137
- Rockwall, Texas, 140
- Woodrow Wilson H.S., Conn., 147
- Portsmouth Abbey, R.I., 161
- Annapolis H.S., Md., 179
- Corona del Mar, Calif., 189
- Hotchkiss School, Conn., 200
- St. George's School, R.I., 201

Sailing Team Turns Tide

Winchester High captured its first New England sailing championship at a meet at the United States Coast Guard Academy.

The team of skippers Jim Bowers, Bob Driscoll, and Mike Bowers and crew members Wendy Boerner, Heather Price, and Jane Williamson avenged its loss to Tabor Academy in the nationals and outdistanced a field of 17 other teams to clinch the title.

What was expected to be a heavily contested regatta evolved into a head-to-head battle between the Sachem sailors and Tabor. Most teams were unable to master the shifting winds and rough water.

Sachemettes Top Belmont

The Winchester High girls softball team beat Belmont High 7-5 Friday, but it was a whole new ball game from the Sachemettes' 30-8 stampede earlier this spring.

Winchester took the lead early in the game when Danielle Dulong's sacrifice fly brought in Alyssa Parker and Debbie Peritano scored on a Sara Porrell fielder's choice.

After three innings, however, Belmont had slugged its way back and into the lead 4-2. By the start of the fifth inning, both teams had scored once again — Belmont for the last time.

Winchester made its move in the fifth and sixth innings.

Porrell, who walked, stole second, and went to third on passed ball, scored off a Heidi Worthen hit, and Worthen scored herself.

Parker also scored again for Winchester.

HEALTH

Free Health Exam Scheduled

This year's free health checkups will be held at New England Memorial Hospital in Stoneham, Sunday, May 18, from 1 to 6 p.m.

In recent years, health fairs were cosponsored by Healthworks Inc. in various communities, but that agency's grant money has been cut off.

New England Memorial Hospital advertises this year's event as "A Family Health Fair" and offers a variety of free services to individuals as well as families — lung function, hearing and speech, vision and glaucoma tests, plus checks of blood pressure and height and weight norms.

For children, free lead screening and eye tests are available, plus developmental progress checks such as speech and hearing, age height/weight, development evaluations, pulse, blood pressure and temperature tests, eye tests, and scoliosis (spine alignment) check.

For new mothers, there are presentations on Prenatal Exercise at 2 p.m., Infant Feeding at 2:30 p.m., a general session called "All About Babies" at 3 p.m. and Prenatal Relaxation at 3:30 p.m.

A segment called "Questions Answered" offers free information about maternity, sports medicine, heart and diet, diabetes, breast self-exam, and stress management.

Only one of the services requires a fee — $8 for the special blood chemistry profile. Twenty-three separate analyses are provided from one small blood sample. People planning to take advantage of the blood chemistry analysis should not consume food or drink for 12 hours prior to the test.

New England Memorial Hospital is located on Woodland rd. overlooking Spot Pond, about a mile south of the Stone Zoo in Stoneham. Parking is free.

For more information, call 665-1740, Ext. 426.

Blood Drive

At St. Eulalia's

On Monday May 19, a Red Cross Bloodmobile will be at St. Eulalia's Church, 50 Ridge St., from 2 to 3 p.m.

Anyone 18 years or older, weighing at least 110 pounds and in good health, is eligible to donate. It is recommended that a donor eat at least two hours or less before giving blood.

Please call the Winchester Red Cross at 729-2300 if you plan to attend.

Winchester High School students learned to identify dangerous drugs with the help of Winchester Police Department officers, including Det. Daniel McGee, left, at the school's recent Adolescent Health Fair. The fair was sponsored by Winchester Hospital to help students learn to develop healthy lifestyles.

Hospital Hosts Health Fair For High Schoolers

Winchester High School students got a chance to check their fitness levels while learning how to maintain healthy lifestyles during the school's recent Adolescent Health Fair sponsored by Winchester Hospital.

Several local businesses and community groups joined hospital staff members at the fair's exhibit and health screenings.

Exhibits focused on preventative medicine for the students with the American Cancer Society, American Lung Association and the American Heart Association featuring displays on the effects of smoking and other health risks.

Winchester Police Department members demonstrated how a breathalyzer computes blood alcohol levels and held a drug display to help students identify dangerous drugs.

Nutrition information on eating disorders common in adolescents was coordinated by hospital dietitians while high school home economics instructors told students of the importance of good eating habits.

A film, "Faces in Crashes," sponsored by the Seat Belt Coalition, stressed why students should obey the seat belt law. Other exhibits on sports medicine and skin care were also available.

Health screenings on anemia, skin fold testing, podiatry and oral health were popular with the students.

Several dentists and podiatrists from the Winchester Hospital staff volunteered their time and support at the fair.

Students learned how to take a blood pressure and had their height and weight checked by volunteers. Hearing tests were performed by the Solo-Park Hearing Aid Center.

Winton Club members joined the hospital staff with many of the exhibits and screenings. The high school Parent Faculty Association treated workers to lunch from Sabitino's during the two-day event while volunteers were supplied with fresh donuts from Dunkin' Donuts in Woburn.

"A satisfied customer comes back," explains Don Ward, owner and proprietor of Ward's Gift Shop in Medford since just after World War II.

And, for the past 43 years, Ward's reputation for good service, reasonable prices, and standing behind his merchandise has kept them coming back.

Many of Ward's longtime customers have moved away but they still call to have china, crystal, or figurines shipped to as far away as Florida or California. He will ship to any part of the U.S.

Located at 24 High St. in Medford Square, Ward's carries one of the largest selections of Waterford crystal in the Boston area, along with 300 patterns of china including such well-known names as Royal Doulton, Minton, Pickard, Wedgwood, and Noritake.

Ward's also features a wide selection of limited edition plates, figurines, and collector's dolls. Among the 15,000-20,000 items in the store is one of the New England area's largest selection of figurines including such names as Lladro, Hummel, Royal Doulton, Anri, Kaiser, Sebastian, Francis Hook, and Precious Moments.

Ward's has an appropriate gift for any occasion and ready to assist customers in finding that "something special" is Dorothy, the shop's manager for the past 27 years.

Dorothy, and all the staff at Ward's strive to maintain "a personal touch atmosphere" which has been one of the trademarks of Ward's since it opened its doors. Dorothy and the crew at Ward's are on a first-name basis with most of their customers.

Although he has seen Medford Square change "like all squares change over the years," Ward and his employees have earned and maintained a reputation for personal service, quality, and low prices. "In fact," says Ward, "Word of mouth is our best selling point."

Sodality Group Ends Season

St. Mary's Blessed Virgin Sodality recently closed its season with a Mass in Mary Chapel officiated by the Rev. Paul G. Kelley.

A communion supper followed the service in the school hall. Mary Patricia Walsh and Margaret Torres were responsible for the flower arrangements.

After dinner the Sodality members were entertained with songs by the Rev. George Butera and the Rev. William Cummings performing with Jim Moritz at the piano. They received a standing ovation.

Officers for the 1986-87 season are: Prefect, Barbara Graves; Assistant Prefect, Patricia Struthers; Treasurer, Genevieve Stevenson; Liturgy, Sister Catharine Martin, O.P.; and Altar, Marion Manoli.

Charles Gulino

Gulino To Lead National Fishery Group

Charles Gulino of Viking Seafoods Inc. of Malden, has been elected president of the National Fisheries Institute.

Gulino, a Winchester resident, was introduced to the seafood industry at an early age when he worked as a lobster fisherman on his grandfather's boat in Massachusetts. This early exposure to the seafood industry started an admiration and respect for the hard working men that made their living from the sea. Later Gulino worked on the Boston Fish Pier during his undergraduate days at Boston College where he later went on to receive his law degree.

In 1959 Gulino was offered a partnership in Viking Seafoods where he had previously held various part-time administrative positions since 1956. This opportunity opened a tremendous future for him.

During the years Gulino was involved with Viking Seafoods, he assumed many responsibilities on behalf of the industry. He held many positions in the Boston Fisheries Association and became an active member of NFL, serving as a director and a vice president of one of its regions.

In 1982 he was elected to his first national office and has since held the position of treasurer, secretary and vice president.

What does Gulino envision for the seafood industry? He believes that the years ahead will be most challenging and rewarding.

"We are facing years in which views on health and diet will be modified by the findings of medical science," he says. Evidence is proving a direct relationship exists between good health and seafood consumption. Emerging scientific data indicates that the cholesterol buildup in the blood is actually reduced by the type of fats found in fish and shellfish.

"Only if the consumer is satisfied with the quality and value of seafoods will this evidence, favorable to our industry, affect consumption in a positive way. It becomes the burden of our industry to ensure high quality standards and attractive value for the consumer."

The National Fisheries Institute, founded in 1945, is the largest trade association serving the United States commercial seafood industry. It consists of 1,100 domestic and international companies engaged in all aspects of the seafood business and allied industries.

Rose Walsh Honored On 85th Birthday

Among birthday greetings received by Aberjona Nursing Center resident Rose Walsh were congratulations sent by President and Mrs. Reagan.

Another recent birthday honor was the Rose Ball, held April 26 at the Colonnade Hotel in Boston. A benefit for the Carroll Center for the Blind in Newton, the Rose Ball is named in honor of Rose Walsh, former Boston Herald society editor.

Walsh covered Boston society for more than 50 years, most of that time for the Herald or its predecessors. She reported the Jacqueline Bouvier-John F. Kennedy wedding and maintained close friendship with the whole family.

When she retired from the Herald three years ago, she had become more famous than many of the people she wrote about.

A longtime friend wanted to see her name perpetuated in the city she covered for so many years. The Colonnade Hotel administration agreed to sponsor a benefit and tribute. Ms. Walsh herself suggested that the Carroll Center should be the beneficiary of the Rose Walsh Fund.

Although she and her sister Christina were unable to travel to the benefit evening from the Aberjona, an old friend kept them up-to-date about the Ball.

Christina spoke to the friend prior to the event and told him she was praying for good weather. Her prayers were answered! An early rainstorm stopped in time for the party goers to arrive dry to enjoy a marvelous evening in honor of a respected and admired newspaperwoman.

HEALTH

Maternity Ward To Be Upgraded

Winchester Hospital received approval for the renovation and expansion of the hospital's maternity unit by a unanimous vote of the Massachusetts Public Health Council.

"The approval really represents a vote of confidence in Winchester Hospital as a major area obstetrical center, as well as for the hospital as a whole," said hospital vice president Lise Federman.

The modernization plans for the maternity wing include development of a new delivery suite.

The project will entail substantial improvement for the post-partum (mother and baby) area which is over 30 years old.

The staff is developing a special nursing concept called "couplet care" which helps the bonding of the mother and baby from birth throughout the hospital stay.

The hospital's most exciting development is the growth of its special care nursery for sick infants. The hospital has been working with the Harvard Joint Program in neonatology, which includes Children's Hospital, Beth Israel Hospital, and Brigham and Women's Hospital.

Hospital obstetrical services will remain fully operational during construction which is expected to be completed within the year.

Ostomy Support Group To Meet

Joan Halpin, R.N., M.S., E.T., enterostomal clinical specialist at Choate-Symmes Hospitals, will be the featured speaker at the May 21 meeting of the Northwest Ostomy Support Group.

She will discuss the anatomy and physiology of the gastro-intestinal system and urinary system.

Symmes Hospital in Arlington will host an afternoon meeting from 2 to 4 p.m. and Choate Hospital in Woburn will host an evening meeting from 7 to 9 p.m. Time will be allowed for questions and mutual support as well as to see a display of ostomy products.

Hospital Starts New Blood Storage Service

Patients undergoing elective surgery at Winchester Hospital now can donate their own blood prior to the surgery for storage in case a transfusion is later needed.

The new autologous donation service is available to patients with concerns about transfusion-associated diseases, allergic reactions and other complications, according to Patricia Scanlon of the hospital Blood Bank.

Scanlon emphasized that patients should not be concerned about the safety of the current Blood Bank supply. The autologous service will serve as a supplemental option to patients who prefer to receive their own blood.

Not all patients qualify for the autologous donation. Scanlon said. A candidate must be older than 17, have no evidence of anemia and have a stable blood pressure and pulse.

The program is not appropriate for all types of surgery and the self-donation can only be performed at the written request of the patient's physician. The storage period of the blood is limited to 35 days and the autologous donations are approved only if an upcoming surgery is scheduled.

Arrangements for the self-donation program are made through the patient's physician and the hospital Blood Bank.

For more information, call the hospital Blood Bank at 729-9000, ext. 3266.

Housing Decision Due

if housing is not approved include funds for downtown improvements, sewer and water system improvements, conservation land and maintenance of the Mystic Lakes system.

"Compliance with the Section 705 low- and moderate-income plan is also required for expansion of the elderly housing program," Maurer said.

A new factor in the mixture is the discovery that the state will not allow Woburn Loop land to be used for housing. The Housing Authority proposed to build a duplex there.

Several speakers also detailed Winchester's commitments to provide Section 705 housing. Agreements signed since 1982, each with deadlines to be met, have been violated by the town each time.

During the meeting, it became apparent that most of the 55 people in attendance opposed using any publicly-owned land for Section 705 housing. Far more popular was a suggestion to buy existing housing.

Town officials pointed out that the state would reimburse the town only $78,000 per housing unit but admitted the town could spend its own money to buy housing and rehabilitate it to state standards.

Housing Authority chairman Mary Meader said the state prefers new construction and also prefers duplexes.

She also said the authority would move to "indefinitely postpone" Article 16, which deals with plans for a duplex on Palmer st. to be built on land already owned by the authority.

It also became apparent that several residents are unfamiliar with the jargon of Town Meeting. To "indefinitely postpone" action on a warrant article does not mean to postpone construction of housing but only to have the Town Meeting not vote on a question.

A vote of Town Meeting is not required for Palmer st. because the housing authority owns the land. Instead, the authority's proper role through the maze of permits is to obtain permission from the zoning board of appeals.

Other speakers vehemently attacked plans for a single-family structure on a corner of the Mullen playground at the corner of Ridge st. and Lockeland rd. They said the parcel in question is to be a parking lot when the park is fully developed.

The area is currently filled with junk, some of it put there by town crews, speakers asserted.

Bill McCarthy of the housing authority showed slides of Section 705 housing in several other towns, including Nahant, Lynn, Easton, Halifax, Holbrook, Natick, Athol, Springfield and Northboro. All were built within the past three years.

Unimpressed, those at the hearing immediately began talking about the site of the former Girl Scout camp in the Middlesex Fells Reservation. The site is owned by the Metropolitan District Commission, however, and would require action by the state legislature to be used for housing.

Welch told last week's meeting it was always possible the Transportation Secretary could change his mind but he had assured Welch he would approve only passive uses for the Woburn Loop.

"Passive uses" include parks, playgrounds, bike trails and parking lots.

McCarthy and Welch disagreed about how the state's refusal to allow housing on the Woburn Loop property became public knowledge.

"The housing authority was not aware of this restriction until two or three days ago when I heard you talking to the press about it," McCarthy said.

By order of the state transportation commissioner, former railroad right-of-ways like the Woburn Loop can not be used for permanent structures

"I was talking to the press about something different," Welch answered, "when you confronted me about this while the press was there."

State Sen. Richard Kraus attended the hearing last week. Kraus said he was called in late 1984 by selectman Mark Lombardi, who asked for help.

Kraus and Rep. Sherman Saltmarsh brought state and town officials together. Kraus said, and "bought some time."

"Could more time be bought?" "We've already traded Whip's experience and my contacts for time. We've run out of political capital," Kraus said. "I think we've bought what we can."

The clear sense of the meeting was that fewer people would have favored purchase of the Loop property if they had known about restrictions on its use.

Jerry Keefe, administrator for the housing authority, warned that "the state won't walk away from Winchester in the event the seven units don't sail at Town Meeting."

He said Section 705 rules now require towns to provide projects of 12 units on a single site.

Asked how he would vote, Welch said he would oppose the Canal-Hemingway site but would support the Lockeland rd. site. He also said he could support buying existing units.

However, the EOCID has written to the town, stating that all seven units must be approved by the end of May or funding for any will be terminated.

Kraus pointed out that the letter of agreement between the state and town does not specifically require "new construction."

"New construction is not required," he said.

Students Attend Model Congress

Twenty-seven Winchester High School students participated in the sixth annual Livingston Model Congress in Livingston, N.J.

The Model Congress, organized and run by Livingston High School students, provided students the opportunity to gain knowledge of the legislative process.

Bills submitted by each school were debated in committees prior to action and debate before the full House and Senate.

The Model Congress regarded the quality of debate as the most important criterion for success.

The Winchester High School delegation, under the guidance of Randee Martin of the social studies department, received the "Best Delegation Award" from among 150 participating high schools.

High schools in New Jersey, New York and Massachusetts were delegates to this, the sixth year of the conference.

Many individual honors were received by Winchester students with senior Derek Rutherford, WHS Student Union Parliamentarian, receiving the Best Speaker Award for the House.

Winchester students also received five of the 10 "Best Speaker" awards for their committees. These awards went to Jay Gosselin, grade 11; Nick Haber, 12; Michael McKnight, 12; Derek Rutherford, 12; and Jon Sudbury, 10.

In addition, honorable mention awards were given to Heather Barlow, Michael Chen, Wen Wen Chen, Andreas Coppi, Peter Pezaris, Laura Rutherford, Larry Vernaglia and Ann Walsh.

LIP READING

How does a person learn to lip read?
Most people with any degree of hearing loss learn to lip read without being conscious that they're doing so. When hearing starts to diminish, they automatically overcompensate by watching the speaker's mouth more closely to catch what their ears are missing.

Actually, only about one-third of all speech sounds are clearly visible on the lips. When used in conjunction with hearing aid amplification and an awareness of body language — gestures, facial expressions, movements — lip reading helps a hearing impaired person's communication a great deal. Specially trained teachers can help the hearing-impaired person develop and improve lip reading skills. The Boston Guild for the Hard of Hearing offers this training; phone 267-4730.

'Brown Bag Opera' To Visit Schools

The Community Schools Association's "Brown Bag Opera" will be doing 15 opera performances in elementary schools in May.

For the younger children, Humperdinck's "Hansel and Gretel" will be performed, and for the older children, "Carmen."

Unencumbered by scenery, "Brown Bag Opera" performs the music and the audience's imagination supplies the rest, thanks to the talents of Susan Stone who acts, sings and tells the stories accompanied by violin, cello and piano.

These performances are provided by the C.S.A. Enrichment fund with monies contributed by the P.T.O. in each school and also by a partial grant from the Institute for the Arts, funded by the Mass. Council for the Arts and Humanities, and by an EnKa Society grant.

What To Do

Encountering Marriage: The Whys And The Wherefores

By Gary Pfitzer

When David and Ann Smith drove to New Hampshire for their first Marriage Encounter Weekend, they did so in angry silence, anxious about what to expect and unable to communicate effectively with each other after five years of marriage.

They returned from the Marriage Encounter Weekend with a new closeness.

"We were closer at the end of that weekend than we were on our honeymoon... We never knew how to communicate. We knew how to chit-chat, but we didn't really know how to communicate, and the weekend gave us that," says Ann Smith.

"It was the most important weekend of our married life... The growth that we had during those 44 hours was just incredible. We came back from that weekend flying," says David Smith.

The Smiths, currently a state promotions couple for Marriage Encounter, are quick to point out that the experience is different for each couple but that for most some growth and closeness does occur.

What exactly is Marriage Encounter?

David Smith describes it as a 44-hour crash course on communicating, which teaches a tool, or technique, that you can take home with you, use in any relationship - husband/wife, father/child, partnerships, work, even friendships.

The program is for married couples of all ages, who spend the weekend, from Friday evening until Sunday evening, away from home and children, either in hotels or retreat houses.

A team of three trained couples, in addition to a pastoral couple, make presentations throughout the weekend.

After each presentation, couples go back to their private rooms to practice communication techniques that they have been taught.

The weekend is intensive and highly-structured.

"You are busy the entire time," says Ann Smith.

It is perhaps easier to describe what the Marriage Encounter Weekend is not.

The weekend is not a vacation, although people are encouraged to dress comfortably.

"It is a work weekend. You don't come and bring your bathing suit or tennis racket or golf clubs," says David Smith.

The weekend is not a group sensitivity session, but very private instead. A person interacts only with his or her spouse, not with the encounter leaders and only informally with other couples at mealtimes.

Ann Smith says, "One of the biggest questions that's asked is, 'Am I going to have to talk in front of the group?'...No, it's very non-threatening because you only share with your spouse...You're there to focus on your marriage relationship and to focus on your spouse."

Marriage Encounter Weekend is also not a religious retreat, despite its original development by a Catholic priest in Spain and its sponsorship by different religious faiths.

Specific denominations, or "expressions," of the Marriage Encounter in this area include the United Church of Christ, Catholic, Jewish, and Episcopal.

The UCC and Episcopal expressions use hotels for their weekends while the Catholic expression uses retreat houses.

While there is one section of the weekend devoted to a couple's relationship in the church, Ann Smith says, "How much you hear religion-wise is going to depend on the couples that are there and where you are religiously in your life."

"During our first weekend, especially for David, the religion wasn't a part of it at all because he wasn't into religion. So he just didn't even hear it; it just went right over... It certainly isn't the focus of the weekend.

"The focus is your relationship as a couple," says Ann Smith.

The Smiths advise, however, that a couple participate in programs representative of their own religion or, in the case of mixed marriages, the religion in which one of them is strongest.

The Smiths stress that Marriage Encounter is not designed to be a problem-solving weekend for troubled marriages, although problem-solving may be a by-product.

"It may not save the marriage, but the couple is bound to get something out of it," Ann Smith says.

While the Marriage Encounter experience is unique for each couple, many husbands and wives seem to derive a closeness, improved communication, and a re-ignition of the spark between them.

For the Smiths, the weekend resulted in a highly satisfying sharing process.

David Smith says, "For us... it was being able to talk about anything, things that we'd had fears or reservations of talking to the other about... and being able to grow from them even though some of them may have been negative. We were able to turn it positive even though there were some negative issues."

One young couple, upon returning from an Encounter Weekend, writes, "We had an okay marriage, said hi and good-bye, how was your day?, what's for dinner?, what's going on with work?, what are our debts?, etc., and thought that was the way all marriages were supposed to be."

"Today we can sit and talk things out on a rational basis, feeling the hurt when something disappointing happens, feeling the joy of seeing our son ride his new bicycle. We never shared these feelings before; we only stated them," the couple writes.

While it is difficult perhaps to quantify the results of a Marriage

What To Expect

Participants in the Marriage Encounter Weekend can expect to address and develop skills in these areas:

1. Listening
2. Understanding and accepting feelings.
3. Sharing feelings and ideas.
4. Nonverbal communication.
6. Increasing commitment to the marriage relationship.

'It is a work weekend. You don't come and bring your bathing suit or a tennis racket or golf clubs,' says David Smith.

Encounter Weekend, the Smiths say that family and friends have mentioned seeing positive changes in their relationship since their involvement in the program.

Cost for a weekend includes a $25 registration fee.

All other payments are made in the form of a donation. Average costs for food, lodging, and supplies are explained to couples, who at the end of the weekend, make an anonymous free will offering in a blank envelope.

"If at the end of the weekend, you can't afford a thing or don't want to put anything in or think it wasn't worth anything, you don't put anything in," David Smith says.

No one is denied the opportunity to participate in Marriage Encounter because of a lack of funds.

Marriage Encounter also attempts to accommodate to the medical, physical, or dietary restrictions of participants.

Marriage Encounter offers a concrete structure for couples to improve their marriages, in a society where, David Smith says, such opportunities are limited.

The communication dialogue, techniques learned during the weekend can be practiced on a daily basis.

Three million couples in over 30 countries have participated in the Marriage Encounter Weekend.

In the Massachusetts area, three weekends are held each year. Most weekends range in size from 15 to 25 couples.

The next weekend is scheduled for June 20-22 in West Springfield, with a registration deadline of May 30.

For those interested in enrolling, the closest contacts are Ann and Tom Bailey at 369-1941 (Concord). Or call Ann and David Smith for more information at 545-5982 (Scituate).

The Smiths are available to talk with church groups or groups of people in their homes.

It may be worthwhile to see what a weekend with no kids, no phone calls, no interruptions — with only the opportunity to focus on the relationship between husband and wife — can do to enrich a marriage.

What To See

Gibson House: A Living Valentine

By Anne-Marie Seltzer

The neat rows of brownstones that comprise Boston's Back Bay are mainly private homes and college buildings.

However, there is a notable exception: the Gibson House Museum, a Victorian town house that was opened to the public in 1957.

If you have yet to tour this period home, put it on your agenda because the pleasure of your company is requested here.

Leave your elegant finery at home, though, and wear comfortable shoes. There aren't any elevators in the Gibson House and the tour includes a basement and three floors.

If you wish to leave a business card, you may do so in the entrance hall. Calling card holders flank the door.

The Gibson House was built in 1859, one year after landfill began in the Back Bay. According to Rebecca Guild, who manages the Gibson House with her husband, the property at 137 Beacon St. is one of the earliest homes in the area, since it is close to the Public Gardens. Newer homes were closer to Kenmore Square.

Three generations of Gibsons lived in the house, beginning with Catherine Hammond Gibson who built the house and lived there with her son, Charles Hammond Gibson. (Her husband, John Gardiner Gibson, died in 1838.)

In 1871, Charles married Rosamond Warren, daughter of Dr. Jonathan Mason Warren and Annie Crowninshield Warren. (Rosamond's ancestors included famous Boston physicians General Joseph Warren, John Warren, and Dr. Collins Warren, who performed the first operation under ether. They have been memorialized with a building at the Massachusetts General Hospital.)

The Gibsons had two daughters and one son, Charles Jr., the only offspring to take an interest in the home. A writer and lecturer, he never married.

Described by Guild as "a forward thinking man," he realized that one day a Victorian home would interest the public.

Although he conceived his museum idea in the 1930s and set up a trust, the house was not opened until 1957, three years after his death. The house now belongs to the Gibson Society.

Admission to the house costs $2 per person and includes the services of a friendly and knowledgeable guide who encourages questions.

Tours are conducted at 2, 3, and 4 p.m., Tuesday through Sunday from May 1 through Oct. 31. During the rest of the year, tours are limited to weekends only. The house is closed on major holidays.

Visitors enter through a center doorway, a design detail specifically requested by Catherine Gibson who wanted an open entrance hall and a sweeping staircase on the left. Most homes had entrances on the left or right side.

The dark decor and "clutter" that characterized the Victorian period are evident as soon as you enter.

According to the guide, most of the house has remained untouched since the family lived there, making it an outstanding example of a regular residence.

Approximately 95 percent of the home furnishings belonged to the Gibson family. A few period pieces were donated by individuals as gifts.

The house, which was built with hot and cold running water, has five floors and a basement. The fourth and fifth floors, which are not open to the public, were the children's rooms and the servant's quarters.

Coal heated the house and gas powered the lights until 1890, when electricity was put in.

The Gibson family only used the house in the fall, winter, and spring. They spent summers in Nahant.

The first floor, where the tour begins, features the entrance hall with its main staircase of rich black walnut, lavatory, dining room, and butler's pantry with dumb waiter.

A back staircase leads from the pantry to the basement kitchen.

In furnishing the house, the family put most of their money into rooms that would be on public view.

This was especially true of the entrance hall which has wallpaper designed to simulate tooled quilted leather. An impressive design, it was put up in the late 1800s.

The dining room, which is situated at the back of the first floor, is beautifully set with a Rockingham dinner service, damask table cloth, ruby Bohemian glass decanter and wine glasses, and English Regency chairs.

The large-paned windows are hung with needlework curtains. For privacy and warmth, drapes are also hung at the entrance to each room.

The decorative screens near the entrance to the butler's pantry allowed servants to discreetly observe the progress of the meal.

Food was transported from the basement kitchen to the pantry by the mechanized dumb waiter while a speaking tube in the pantry ensured effective communication between the pantry and kitchen staff.

The pantry's copper sink was used for washing the china.

The basement, which contained the servants' entrance, housed the laundry room, drying room, storage areas, kitchen, and pantry with its molds, bread pans, canning jars, scale, and coffee mill.

Fans of the Masterpiece Theatre series, Upstairs, Downstairs, will recognize the servant call bells, and hooded coal range.

According to a survey taken in the 1880s, seven servants, all of whom could read and write, and six family members lived in the house.

Five servants were Irish, one was Canadian, and one was American. The highest paid servant was the cook. At the Gibson House, this meant a salary of $4 a week.

The second floor contained the library and the music room.

A light well, which can be seen from the hallway, runs from the second floor to the roof, allowing additional light to filter into the rooms.

The library, which was the typical relaxation room for the men after dinner, is filled with family portraits, books, and interesting artifacts.

The hand-embroidered fireplace screens throughout the house were decorative and functional. A showcase for a woman's needlework skills, it also prevented her face from becoming flush with color.

The decor of the Music Room is a bit lighter than the rest of the house, reflecting Rosamond Warren Gibson's changing taste.

The mantle of the white marble fireplace holds a classical bisque statue, obelisks, and vases.

The room also contains a square grand piano that was manufactured in Boston, and a victrola.

According to the tour guide, the whole family was musical. Mrs. Gibson and her girls played the piano while Charles and his son played the flute and the violin.

While they played, the pampered family cat could rest comfortably in the pet pagoda.

Since the third floor contained the private areas, the woodwork and furnishings are less elaborate.

Here one can see the bedrooms of Charles, Sr., which is now a sitting room, and Rosamond. His dressing room and the bathroom they shared are also open.

A very unusual bedroom set decorates the rear bedroom. A gift to Mrs. Gibson from her parents, the set resembles bamboo even though it is crafted of bird's eye maple. It is a unique example of period furnishings.

As interest in Victorian restoration increases, Guild expects more people to take an interest in the museum.

"Besides letting people see how a true Victorian family lived, we can also give them ideas for their own homes. Visitors are especially interested in lighting and accessories," says Guild.

Reservations are not required to visit the Gibson House but a call ahead is requested for group tours. Call 267-6338.

The Gibson House is easily accessible by MBTA. Take the Red Line to Charles Street or the Green Line to the Arlington Station. The house is situated between Arlington and Berkeley Sts. Persons who bring a car can park in the Boston Common Parking Garage.

The second-floor Music Room of the Gibson House features Edwardian wallpaper and a white marble fireplace. Other beautiful pieces in the room include Sheraton pole screens, Chinese and French porcelains. Rosamond Warren Gibson's dressing table resembles bamboo even though it is crafted of bird's-eye maple. Period accessories, including a ring tree, hair receiver and loose-powder jar rest on top.

Caputo Stars At Hub Comedy Club

You don't have to be Italian to like Pasquale Caputo!

As a matter of fact, Rabbi Shapiro and Princess Cosmonopoulos screamed uncontrollably recently at one of his Las Vegas stints.

A former bricklayer/cement mixer (his family trade, which began in Bari, Italy), Caputo's big break came in 1963 when Jackie Gleason said to him, "How sweet you are!", and booked him on the highly-rated TV show.

Caputo has appeared on virtually every major TV talk show and joined major performers including everyone from Frank Sinatra to Sammy Davis, Jr.

Performances are slated for 8:30 p.m. on Thursday, May 15, 8 and 10 p.m. on Friday and Saturday, May 16 and 17, and 9 p.m. on Sunday, May 18. Ticket prices range from $10 to $18. The box office number is 482-0930.

On The Verge Ends Huntington's Season

They emerge gleefully from the underbrush to discover the sumptuous suburban delights of 1955 at Nicky's Peligrosa Paradise Bar and Grill.

On The Verge will feature Roberta Maxwell as Mary. Maxwell trained at the Stratford Festival Theatre, and has starred in many Broadway and Off-Broadway works. Maxwell has received two Obies, a Drama Desk Award, and a Villager Award for her appearances in New York. She has also appeared at most of America's major repertory theatres.

Rags will have its world premiere at Boston's Shubert Theatre, June 16 to July 19, prior to Broadway.

In Rags Stratas will play Rebecca, a young woman who comes to America looking for safety for herself and her young son. What she finds is a city, a country and a culture shaping itself to the rhythm of the ragtime beat. The dangers, delights and temptations are all part of Rebecca's new life.

By Dann Kosow

And Musicals Season

Opera diva Teresa Stratas stars in a new, Broadway-bound musical, Rags, which has its world premiere in June at Boston's Shubert Theatre.

Stratas has performed over 25 roles at the Metropolitan Opera, including the title role in Lulu, Cio-Cio-San in Madama Butterfly, Desdemona in Otello, The Composer in Ariadne Auf Naxos, Nedda in Pagliacci, Jenny in Mahagonney, Marenka in The Bartered Bride and Mimi in La Boheme. The latter four were featured in television broadcasts, Live From The Met.

Rags, with book by Tony Award winner Joseph Stein (Fiddler on the Roof, Zorba), music by Tony Award winner Charles Strouse (Annie, Bye Bye Birdie, Applause), and lyrics by Grammy Award winner Stephen Schwartz (Pippin, Godspell), will have its official Boston opening at the Shubert Theatre on June 21.

Joan Micklin Silver makes her Broadway directorial debut with Rags, following great success in films (Hester Street) and off-Broadway (A... My Name Is Alice). The Broadway opening will be August 7 at New York's Mark Hellinger Theatre.

The Boston performance schedule for Rags at the Shubert Theatre is as follows: 8 p.m. Monday through Saturday evenings, 2 p.m. matinees Wednesday and Saturday. (There will be no matinees on Wednesday, June 18 and June 25.) To order tickets by phone and for groups, call TeleCharge: 1-800-233-3123. gossip item in Cindy Adams' column hinting that Rosen has already been placed with a commercial producer.

Locally, Horovitz's Gloucester-based play, Park Your Car In Harvard Yard, will open on May 8th for a 5-week run at The Gloucester Stage Company, The Blackburn Tavern, 2 Main Street, Gloucester, MA, 01930. For ticket information please call 281-4099.

Park Your Car In Harvard Yard kicks off the company's seventh summer season which will include John Guare's Bosoms and Neglect; Athol Fugard's Master Harold And The Boys; Lee Kalchier's Friends; and a new Horovitz play (still in progress), North Shore Fish.

Add to all of this the announcement in the N.Y. Times "Broadway" column last week that Kathleen Turner has signed to play the lead in Horovitz's The Widow's Blind Date; in addition to the birth of Horovitz's twins, Hannah and Oliver, in Gloucester, 12 weeks ago, and Horovitz's "successful year" seems full enough to fill a decade of glad tidings.

Goodspeed Opera Launches Season

The Box Office at the Goodspeed Opera House in East Haddam (Conn.) is now open for 1986 Season ticket sales. Performances begin April 16.

Michael P. Price, Executive Director, has announced a season of rare vintage musicals with a French flavor: Irma La Douce, Fanny and Carnival!

Irma La Douce, heady as French champagne, is a delightful and irreverent story with a disarming heroine, whirlwind dancing and a highly praised score.

Fanny, an emotionally charged, bittersweet story written by S.N. Behrman and Joshua Logan, is a richly textured story of life on the Marseilles waterfront.

Composer/lyricist Harold Rome created an expansive, melodious score for Fanny that heightens the impact of the script and captures the realism and poignancy of the French folk tale.

Carnival! is by Bob Merrill, who composed Take Me Along and collaborated with Jule Styne on Funny Girl, and Michael Stewart, librettist of Hello, Dolly!, Barnum and Bye Bye Birdie and co-author of 42ND Street.

Carnival! won the Drama Critics award for best musical in 1961, and, frequently referred to as "the perfect musical" is based on the popular film Lili.

For subscriptions, call the Goodspeed Opera House Box Office in East Haddam (Conn.) at (203)873-8668. The Box Office is open daily from 9 to 6 and Sundays from 10 to 5.

Horovitz Trilogy Triumphs In The Big Apple

Israel Horovitz, who is known locally as producer and artistic director of The Gloucester Stage Company, is having a highly successful year at home and abroad.

Last week, Horovitz's newest play, A Rosen By Any Other Name, opened to rave reviews at The American Jewish Theatre.

Clive Barnes, drama critic for the N.Y. Post, wrote "Rosen is the best thing I have seen yet from Horovitz, a triumphant affirmation of his early promise."

Mel Gussow of the N.Y. Times concurred: "Rosen is a play with strength of character and charm. Move over Star Wars. This is a trilogy with dimension."

The trilogy to which Gussow refers is a three-play cycle, of which A Rosen By Any Other Name is part two.

The first part, Today I Am A Fountain Pen, opened in New York in February, to equally impressive critical acclaim.

Part three, The Chopin Playoffs, is scheduled to open for the press in New York in early May at The American Jewish Theatre which is located in the 92nd St. YMHA on Lexington Avenue in Manhattan.

Fountain Pen is scheduled to reopen, commercially, in May; and the N.Y. Daily News has run a small

What About Art? By Meredith Fife Day

Big, pointy foreground shapes, energetic line and a below-eye-level vantage point lend a powerful and menacing quality to Susan Schmidt's Snowplows.

Drawings Are Big, Bold

"I look for certain kinds of urban spaces — complex, crowded, offering unusual perspective and close views of massive forms," says Susan Paterson Schmidt of her charcoal drawings on display at the Chapel Gallery in Newton.

"I keep trying to find out what it is about these spaces that intrigues me and offers possibilities for drawing."

Schmidt's works are based on the machinery forms and spaces of sites such as the Charlestown Navy Yard, Charles River Museum, the field maintenance building at Logan Airport and the physical plant at Wellesley College.

Pumps, pipes, knobs, spokes and nameless machinery parts appear in these bold works. But the parts themselves are subordinate to their formal, physical and emotional wallop.

Aided by their large size and dramatic vantage point, the shapes and spaces of the drawings have an evocative range from eerie, to menacing, to otherworldly.

A big, open triangular structure in the middle of Chain Forge Building, Charlestown Navy Yard - Five, might take on the arcane associations of some icon of another world. Its dark form is suspended in a dark space filled with the fast and powerful lines that characterize most of Schmidt's work, both describing the space around her big forms and giving the picture's surface a richly layered pattern and network of values.

Schmidt's handling of line and value is confident and self-assured. Having received a master of fine arts degree in printmaking from Pennsylvania State University, her skills with linear description and expression and her ability to control and manipulate middle to lower range values are well-honed.

Several prints are on display in the gallery. Etchings of landscapes and houses are handsomely architectural with tense, slanted verticals locking into diagonal shapes, and again, beautiful expressive line quality that builds warm, resonant darks.

The lithographs are less angular. Big linear swoops give an escalator or coolant pump the lyrical exuberance of calligraphy and the nervous energy of graffiti.

Impressive as they are, though, the prints do not always have the excitement and conviction of Schmidt's big charcoal drawings.

The best and most rousing of the drawings are also the most strategically placed in the gallery's exhibition space.

Hung on the well-lighted continuous back wall, the series of works entitled Unused Machine One, Two, and Three, form a lively triptych that confronts and beacons the viewer upon entering the gallery.

These three works separate themselves from the other charcoal drawings by a bolder use of the 48"x50" paper's white ground. The heavy and forceful black lines are used here more to contain shapes and push out the massive forms than to describe the dark and atmospheric space in most other drawings — notably those of the Charlestown Navy Yard, of snowplows and coolant pumps.

The darks are present, but are massed and harnessed by boundaries that give the shapes form and sculptural definition.

Closed as opposed to open shapes and blunter, less angular and scratchy lines give these drawings not only a sense of more sculptural mass, but allow shapes to take on distinctive individual personality and animation while simultaneously contributing to the whole of the drawing and the triptych.

The result is a vigorous conglomeration of tubes, hubs, wheels, handles, shapes seen through shapes and collaged over, that are evocative of both real, slightly scary machines and of clunky eccentric Rube Goldberg inventions.

In these, and all of Schmidt's drawings, the artist's involvement and participation in her imagery is clear.

"As the drawings unfolded, the urban forms that I looked at began to assume animated and mysterious qualities. Over a period of weeks I grew familiar with the space, and my experience there became part of the drawings."

"The resulting drawings reveal spaces as containers of emotion — certainty, anxiety, doubt, and humor. Massive size, and my solitary presence there, are evoked in the work," explains Schmidt.

The drawings and prints of Susan Schmidt will remain on view at the Chapel Gallery through May 25. The gallery is open Thursday through Sunday 1 to 4, and by appointment. Call 332-7782 or 244-4039.

About Chapel Gallery:

Located at The Second Church in Newton, 60 Highland St., West Newton, the gallery is one block up the hill and across the Turnpike from Washington St. (Rte. 16) in the main business district of West Newton. Highland St. begins opposite the Newton Police Station.

The spire of Second Church is a prominent landmark about 3 blocks east of the West Newton exit (16) of the Mass. Turnpike.

There is no admission charge to the gallery and parking is free and available.

Chapel Gallery is run by a small volunteer committee formed in 1980. It sees itself as neither a commercial gallery nor a public institution but somewhere in between — a needed alternative exhibit space in the Greater Boston area.

Chosen Best Suburban Gallery in 1984 by Boston Magazine, Chapel Gallery handles each exhibit as a cooperative venture with expenses, effort and income from sales being shared to varying extents between itself and the artists.

The gallery states as its purpose: "to provide space and encouragement to artists with unique talent, drive and individuality whose work whether or not currently 'in style' is distinctly their own and carries with it thought, insight and intellectual concern."

What's Healthy?

Problem Pancreas

By Dr. ROBERT NORMAN

What is cancer of the pancreas? Let's begin the discussion of pancreatic cancer by describing the pancreas and what it does.

The pancreas is a gland which lies beneath the stomach.

Its function is to produce two important fluids which aid in digestion and uptake of nutrients. These fluids are called insulin and pancreatic juice.

The pancreatic juice contains enzymes which help break down foods.

Insulin acts to regulate the amount of glucose, or sugar, in the bloodstream.

One of the first signs of pancreatic cancer can be a sudden increase or decrease in either of these two substances.

The pancreas works in concert with the gallbladder, which produces bile.

The pancreatic juices and bile flow out of the same common tube into the stomach.

Pancreatic tumors sometimes block this duct, causing a buildup of bile.

The victim's eyes and skin then turn yellow, resulting in a condition called jaundice.

The most common sign of pancreatic cancer is a vague pain in the abdomen. Also nausea, loss of appetite, weight loss and a generally tired feeling are symptoms of this condition.

These are all caused by the abnormal functioning of the diseased pancreas.

Pancreatic cancer is best treated through surgery. Radiation therapy does little to help it. Chemotherapy is sometimes used along with surgery, but it is not as effective alone as surgery.

Doctors don't really know what causes this particular kind of cancer. Like most cancers, there can be many different types affecting the same organ.

However, studies have shown that cancer of the pancreas afflicts men more frequently than women, and smokers more than non-smokers.

Also some very recent research suggests that people who drink many cups of coffee per day may have a greater chance of contracting pancreatic cancer than people who do not drink much coffee.

As with all research, these claims must be substantiated by repeated experiments.

However, until the facts are in, these initial findings provide another good reason to cut down on coffee and cigarettes.

Dr. Norman is a Winchester resident who is a family practitioner in Arlington. He is associated with Symmes Hospital. Questions can be addressed to him at 22 Mill st., Suite 109, Arlington, 02174.

Pregnancy Info

In 1890, one out of 20 American women worked outside the home. In 1990, two out of every three will work outside the home. Besides contributing to the work force, women will continue to marry and raise families.

In addition, many women will continue to work at jobs while they are pregnant. To most women, working during pregnancy seems fairly natural. Yet women and their employers need to know the answers to several important questions: Is it safe for a pregnant woman to work? Will stress affect the pregnancy?

Pregnancy and the Working Woman attempts to answer these and other questions. This fold-out flyer begins the discussion that every working pregnant woman should have with her physician.

Directions: Send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope. Ask For: Pregnancy and the Working Woman.

Mail To: Pregnancy and the Working Woman Resource Center, American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, 600 Maryland Ave., SW, Washington, DC 20024.

Breast Exams

This year approximately 114,000 women in this country will learn they have breast cancer. If their physicians detect the disease early, the cancer may be arrested and surgery for tumor removal may be minimal. Early detection and treatment also will prevent the cancer from spreading to other parts of the body.

Breast Exams: What Every Woman Should Know is a valuable booklet that every woman should read. Although breast cancer does occur in younger women, two-thirds of all breast cancer strikes women over age 50.

The booklet outlines the simple steps you can take to stay on the safe side of breast cancer. The booklet shows you in detail how to perform a monthly self-exam, and it encourages you to have a yearly breast exam by a physician. It also includes a discussion about mammography (breast X-ray), which it recommends for women at high risk for breast cancer.

If you have questions that the booklet or your doctor doesn't answer, call the Cancer Information Service's toll-free hot line, 1-800-4-CANCER.

Directions: Send a postcard. Ask For: Breast Exam booklet. Mail to: Office of Cancer Communications, National Cancer Institute, Building 31, Room 10A18, Bethesda, Md. 20892.

PRICE IT RIGHT

Human nature is predictable and there is a better than even chance that you'll put the wrong selling price on your home if you set the price on the property yourself. You may price it far above its fair market value because of sentimental attachment, expenditures you have made, or heeding a well-meaning friend's advice. A home remaining on the market for months due to overpricing frequently becomes a white elephant. It eventually sells for a much lower figure than it would have brought originally, had it been priced realistically. On the other hand, you might under-price it because of your unfamiliarity with the local market. That would be financial folly. Your safest bet is to list your home with a realtor who will help you price it correctly from the start and sell it for the highest and best price with the least amount of inconvenience to you and your family.

Blackpowder Shooters

IF YOU think putting holes in paper is about as exciting as watching the traffic lights change, consider team shooting at breakable targets against a stopwatch. The 10th Massachusetts Battery is looking for more people. We are part of the North South Skirmish Association, a 4,000 member competitive shooting organization where the shortest elapsed time wins. Units take their names in honor of actual Civil War regiments and members shoot original or reproduction weapons of the 1861-65 period. The 10th Battery competes with 58 cal. rifled muskets, caplock breechloading carbines, and an 1,800 lb full size 3-inch rifled muzzleloading cannon. Yes, there's some paper punching too for those interested, but the real excitement is in the rapid fire team events where you shoot at flower pots, hanging water-filled coffee cups, ceramic tiles and 32 clay pigeons on a $88 cardboard backer at 30 yds. We welcome all shooters regardless of experience. Our team members live all over - from Maine to Rhode Island to New York - but more are from eastern Massachusetts. Prayer To Holy Spirit

O Holy Spirit, thou who art all knowing, who brightens every path that I may reach my idea, thou who givest me this divine gift of forgiving and forgetting wrongs done unto me and who in every instant of my life art with me, I'd like in this short dialogue to affirm my gratitude for all your blessings and reaffirm once again that I never want to part from thee though the illusion of material things about. My desire is to be with thee and all my loved ones in perpetual grace. Thank you for your mercy on me and mine. (Person should pray 3 consecutive days without revealing petition. Within three days, grace will be attained regardless of how difficult the petition may be.) Publish this prayer once grace attained. Grateful for grace attained. B.G. 5/8/5/22g

The majority of our used cars have been on Full Maintenance Lease Agreements.
They are better maintained than the average private car. We have been in the business of leasing vehicles (Cars and Trucks) for Twenty Seven (27) years. We believe in "Customer Goodwill All-ways". Check our vehicles and prices before you make a decision to buy. You won't be disappointed - I guarantee it.

Housing Town Meeting Approves One Site, Will Consider More

By GEORGE DERRINGER

Emotional arguments were ineffective Monday night as Town Meeting members took their first serious action to construct Section 705 housing in Winchester.

The meeting voted to build one single-family home on the north-eastern corner of the Mullen Park property.

Town Meeting needed two nights of debate and direct intervention by Moderator John Sullivan to reach its first decision to build Section 705 low- and moderate-income housing in town.

State officials made it clear that Winchester must either provide for seven units of Section 705 housing by the end of Town Meeting or face a cut-off in state "discretionary" funding, worth millions to town coffers.

But confusion was the order of the night last Thursday, when various town boards seemed to hedge their bets about timing the number of units to be built and whether the state would actually approve certain sites and kinds of buildings.

Afterward, Sullivan called the boards together and essentially ordered them to make firm, definite recommendations to Monday's session.

His strategy worked. Members of the board of selectmen, the planning board and the Winchester Housing Authority met Monday night in the band room at the high school and emerged with a list of four sites for Section 705 "affordable" housing.

Recommendations

The recommendations are:

• A single-family home on the north-eastern corner of the Mullen Park, facing Lockland rd.

• A two-family "duplex" on the Woburn Loop near Cross st. The boards recommend asking the state to allow construction of the homes on the abandoned railroad right-of-way, despite statements by the secretary of transportation opposing such construction.

• A three-unit structure on the east side of the current Ambrose School property on Cambridge st. The land must be declared "excess" by the school committee before Town Meeting can use it for housing. All three boards asked the school committee to reconsider its 5-1 vote against the "excess" declaration.

• A three-unit structure on land already owned by the housing authority next to the Mary Murphy Apartments on Palmer st. Town Meeting approval is not necessary, although approval by the Zoning Board of Appeals is.

Palmer Street

Last week, Town Meeting agreed not to consider an article dealing with the Palmer-st. site and to let the matter be handled by the board of appeals.

The remainder of the meeting, which ended with Sullivan ruling himself out of order after allowing discussion of a motion to adjourn, proved confusing to all.

Finally the motion to adjourn "to give the boards time to get their act together" was approved 71-63. Sullivan at first declared the motion to have failed.

West Side Residents Protest Loss of Mullen Park Land

By GEORGE DERRINGER

Three speakers from the Mullen Park and Playground neighborhood on the west side could not deter more than two-thirds of Monday's Town Meeting from building a low- and moderate-income house there.

"I tell my own son to work harder. Right now, he can't afford to live in Winchester either," Wyler said.

'Work Harder'

"We had to work harder. We didn't go to the state and say we didn't have enough money, but please put me in a nice community anyway," Wyler declared.

"I tell my own son to work harder. Right now, he can't afford to live in Winchester either," Wyler said.

Wyler said he once asked Joe Riga, a former chairman of the Winchester Housing Authority, why the town proposed to put Section 705 housing on conservation and other town-owned land.

"He said it was because it was cheap," Wyler said. "I didn't come here because the town was cheap. Don't take land from our future."

Vernice Heath of 11 Plymouth rd. criticized the lengthy process of providing public housing in Winchester.

"Every time I go to another meeting, everything changes," she said.

'Moral Issue'

Declaring the proposal to take 20,000 square feet from the north-eastern corner of the park property facing Lockland rd., Heath called the question "a moral issue." She also contended several people had assured her the state would not fund a single-family unit of Section 705 "affordable" housing.

"We need this playground. Don't take away the laughter," she pleaded. Dr. Robert Croft Wilson of 33 Lockland rd. said the issue was not housing but saving parkland. Nobody has the right to take it from us."

Wilson said the town does have "a social responsibility" for housing "but taking parks and playgrounds is socially irresponsible."

He criticized the housing authority for not checking with the recreation (Please see MULLEN, page four)

EnKa Fair Delights All

By SUSAN CURTIS

By noon Sunday, it had all but vanished.

Manchester Field showed hardly a trace of the previous two days. The grass was perhaps flatter than usual, but nothing more.

A few dogs paced their owners for runs around the track and several adults enjoyed a game of soccer.

Yet for hundreds and hundreds of fair goers, the EnKa Fair, held Friday evening and all day Saturday, transformed the field into a fantasy playground of adventure, feast and fun.

This year's fair, the 51st in the past 52 years, dished up all the ingredients — dancing lights, cotton candy, — dancing lights, cotton candy that stayed on faces and fingers for hours, open-mouthed toddlers with proud, weary parents, doctored teens, and ticket lines that seemed to weave forever.

Smells tempted already-stuffed appetites — the fried dough, hot dogs, lobster rolls, french fries and gigantic fried onion rings.

Rides, swirled overhead, whirled with intensity, or snaked along tiny tracks. Bumper cars bashed one another as drivers howled.

The piercing screams of the Flying Bobs, a ride touted by youngsters, teens and even some hearty adult folk as "totally awesome," cleared the night air with five-minute blasts.

My adrenalin is still flowing," said Phyllis Johansen, one of the three co-chairmen of the entire operation. "You work all year long and you just can't believe it's over."

Most fair goers, enveloped in the excitement of these 17 action-packed hours, were probably unaware of the weekend's true magic, which involved thousands of hours and hundreds of dedicated volunteers.

Four ticket booths were stationed on the fair ground. Two people manned each booth for shifts of two hours. Sixty-four people were required to run this operation alone.

And that's just the beginning.

Altogether, Johansen estimates the involvement of about 500 people in this grand production.

Consider the 10 games, 11 rides, the food booths, the Longaug Box and book sale at McCall Junior High School, and the complement of other committees.

Johansen reports a year-long working committee of 22 directors, counting herself and co-chairs Joyce Cummings and Nancy Clarke.

Another 23 people were responsible for managing and staffing 26 events and committees.

The operation moved like clockwork as volunteer teams changed silently every two hours.

"We had no problems whatsoever," reported Johansen. This year's EnKa Fair, she said, was lauded by many as "the best one yet."

Financial reports confirm the compliment. "It's a banner fair," said Johansen, which has "broken any past records."

This year's theme, the American Beauties, was selected to recognize members of the EnKa Society. "I feel the EnKa girls are the American beauties," said Johansen, referring to the countless number of hours contributed by the group's volunteers.

The fair, heralded by a parade through town Saturday morning, is the organization's major fundraiser.

"Parades make my blood stir and tell me I'm alive!" stated one elderly spectator.

And what a parade it was. Brownies, baseball and soccer players, musicians, dramatists, ballerinas, clowns, and cheerleaders were joined by the Winton Club float, antique cars, and fire engines.

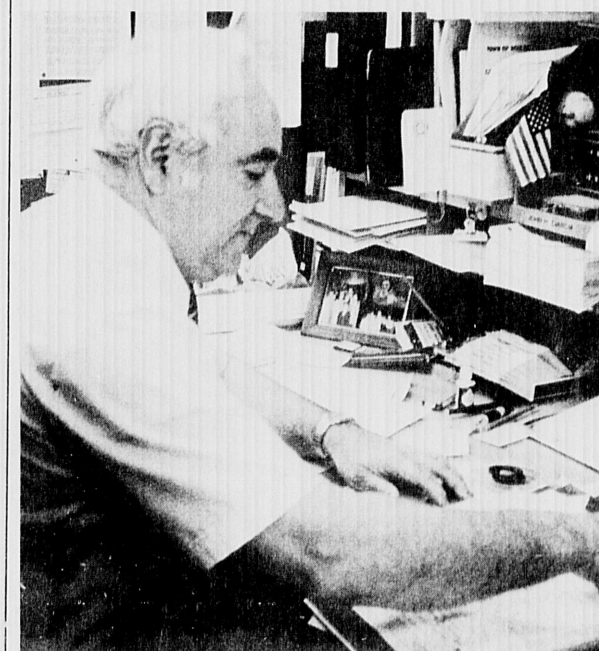

"I think there are more people in the parade than watching it," said one young mother with three little ones in tow.

Spectators dashed from corner to corner, street to street, as the parade, glorified by the music of the high school and the all elementary school bands, marched through town, ending up with a flag ceremony at Manchester Field.

Two $50 prizes were awarded to parade participants. The Winchester Scholarship Fund was cited as best representation of the fair's theme, American Beauties, and the Winton Club gained recognition for its representation as an organization.

Approximately 25 local groups received financial support from EnKa each year, including the Girl Scouts, the Boy Scouts, Winchester Hospital. (Please see ENKA, page 22)

Jake Ciarcia, Man Of The Year, Keeps Watch On Town

Jake Ciarcia

Amid the clutter of engineering plans and reports in Jake Ciarcia's office hangs a plant with special sentimental value.

Ciarcia, Winchester's town engineer, reclines in his chair and carefully picks a sprig from the plant.

The sprig belonged to his wife Terry's wedding bouquet nearly 29 years ago. Jake's 33-year commitment to his job as town engineer and the emphasis he places on his family shine through his smiles and his words.

Ciarcia was chosen this year's outstanding citizen by the board of directors of the Winchester Chamber of Commerce. He is the sixth recipient of the award.

According to Catherine S. Alexander, director of the Chamber, the board bases its choice on an individual's contribution to the improvement of the business community and the overall quality of life in Winchester.

Receiving the award, Ciarcia said, was a total shock. "I never expected it," he said.

Ciarcia has been town engineer and planning board engineer since 1970. Prior to that, he had been an engineer for the town since 1953.

He describes his work as "time consuming but very interesting." There are times "when work cuts in to other things you want to do," he says matter-of-factly. "Everybody wishes they could spend more time with their children."

He smiles and leans back in his chair. "I have four great kids, ranging from 16 to 27. They are here when you need them, they have never given me problems and all of them still live at home."

"I'm an easy going father," Ciarcia says, but the glint in his eye suggests a hint of discipline in his ways of parenting. (Please see CIARCIA, page 11) food intake.

Murray will address the special nutritional needs of women including increased requirements of iron and calcium during childbearing years and at menopause.

Pre-registration is required. A $5 charge will cover all materials. To register, call 933-6700, ext. 377 for Woburn and for Symmes, call 646-1500, ext. 2291.

First Aid, CPR Courses

For those concerned about summer safety, the Winchester Hospital Community Health Education Department will offer a June First Aid course.

The eight-hour course, scheduled from 7 to 11 p.m. Mondays, June 16 and 23, will teach participants to deal with minor burns, cuts and breaks. Participants will also learn life-saving techniques for more serious problems such as the Heimlich maneuver for victims of choking.

ADD-ON OR SELL?

Oops! Your home is getting too small for your family. You need extra bedrooms. The kitchen has to be enlarged or updated. It's about time you had a garage large enough to handle your cars. It's strange how homes seem to shrink in size as families increase in number and children grow from toddlers to teenagers. The next obvious question is—should you add on a dormer, a new bedroom, garage or renovate your kitchen—or should you sell your present home and buy one that fits your family's needs?

Advice: get estimates from contractors (then for safety's sake increase the cost and time estimate by 50%). Don't forget to crank in the stress factor that goes with remodeling.

With this information in hand, our office will be happy to sit down with you and discuss the value of your present home and show you a range of new and existing homes for sale which are already in move-in condition to fit your family's needs.

Remember—renovating a home does not always increase its resale value.

Winchester Hospital To Be 'A Survivor,' President Says

An education about how the structure and staff of Winchester Hospital operate was the focus of the first orientation program held for new hospital corporation members May 13.

"The meeting was designed to introduce new corporators to the hospital so they can work more effectively with other members of the hospital and better meet the challenges ahead of them," said Margaret Schleicher of the hospital corporation education committee.

As part of that introduction, Winchester Hospital President Eugene Loubier gave the new members a slide presentation featuring an overview of the hospital services, technology and management structure.

Loubier commented on the increasing competition community hospitals face because of fiscal restraints and government regulation.

"We will be a survivor," because of the excellent facilities, staff, services and technology available at Winchester Hospital," he said.

Loubier described the hospital as "a major community asset" valued at $30 million with a staff of 900 employees servicing 223 licensed beds. Last year more than 8,000 patients were treated at Winchester Hospital with the care of the patients coming from Winchester, Reading and Woburn, as well as other surrounding communities.

The breadth of services and the readily available technology at the hospital are what helps distinguish Winchester from other community hospitals," Loubier continued.

The growth of the emergency, oncology, surgery and obstetrical departments were highlighted, as was the use of hospital's new bone densitometer, CT scanner, ultrasound and mammography equipment.

Joining Loubier were several department heads and organizational leaders who explained the purpose of their individual groups to Winchester Hospital as a whole.

The role of the auxiliaries and volunteers at the hospital was addressed by Marie Johnson of the Volunteers' Office, who told new corporators that volunteer help is a significant source of unseen hospital funds.

In the last year, nearly 700 volunteers accounted for over 41,000 hours of free service to the hospital, she said.

The responsibilities and philosophy of the Winchester Hospital nursing staff were discussed by Vice President for Nursing Services Barbara Pikel, who stressed that quality nursing care involves both personal commitment and professional dedication.

"Continuing the preventative, curative and restorative components of care while ensuring the rights of patients are just some of the challenges of modern nursing," she said.

The financial health of the hospital was reviewed by hospital Vice President Stephen Lavery for the new corporators while the president of the medical and dental staff, Thomas J.

Mulvaney, M.D., gave an update on physician and dental services.

The meeting ended with an outline of the organization and the responsibilities of the hospital board of directors by Chairman D. Reid Weedon Jr., who promised to work closely with new corporation members.

AT&T Will Require More Dialing In Winchester Area

AT&T customers in Winchester, those with phone numbers beginning with 721, 729, 933, 935 and 938, will soon have to dial "00" to reach an AT&T operator instead of just "0," AT&T has announced.

Effective May 23, telephone customers wishing to contact an AT&T operator for help related to long distance calling will dial "00." This new dialing procedure affects only those callers who need to talk to an operator for long distance dialing assistance, credit for misdialed calls and rate and area code information.

Most calling procedures remain the same, however, because the majority of customers will continue to dial "0" plus area code and phone number to reach AT&T operators for assistance with AT&T card calls, collect, person-to-person, and third-number billing calls.

"We expect the effect on callers to be minimal since most customers already dial 0 + area code + number for their operator assisted calls," said Kay Lochiatto, operator services manager in Peabody. "Like every other change, this one will take a little time to get used to."

For example, Winchester callers who want to know the cost of a five-minute call to Springfield or how to dial direct to Paris, France, dial "0" today and reach an AT&T operator. Beginning May 23, callers will dial "00."

AT&T operators will continue to assist Eastern Massachusetts customers with long distance calls to the 413 area code, other states and foreign countries. Local telephone company operators will handle only calls within the 617 area code.

Since the breakup of the Bell System, AT&T has been handling local operator assistance calls under a contractual arrangement with the local telephone company. The divestiture agreement permits the local phone company to request the return of operator services once equipment modifications are made.

Implementation of the new two operator system will be introduced progressively throughout the rest of the New England Telephone area over the next two years.

Mullen Park Residents Protest Housing Plans

department to see if it had plans for the proposed housing lot. He also said the neighborhood had repeatedly been assured Mullen Park would be completed.

"It hasn't been. The town dumps there," he said, referring to the housing lot now filled with rubble. A master plan for Winchester playfields shows the area in question as a future parking lot.

Future Parking Lot

Noting heavy use of the field, he said recreation provides young people an alternative to drug use. Finally, Wilson hinted the Town Meeting decision might not be final.

"We saw on TV news, five minutes of the story, how Dearborn, Mich., defended the rights of its people to use their parks for the town's own residents. They took it to the high courts and won," he said.

Echoing the sentiments of the three speakers, Clarence Borggaard likened appropriation of the land to "taking a bite out of an apple."

Roger Berman, chairman of the Fair Housing Committee, presented an impassioned speech in favor of the Lockland rd. housing site.

"It's offensive to me when anyone talks about 'these people' or 'those people.' We have different backgrounds and income levels among Winchester people," he said. "So I worked hard and bought a house here. Bully for me!"

Berman asked how many of Winchester's own policemen and firemen make their homes here. And he declared firmly that Concord no longer rents homes for families in other communities.

Berman granted some of the opposition's points. "The land is not free. I agree. When it's gone, it's gone, as Mr. Borggaard so regularly reminds us," Berman said.

Berman also said Winchester could indeed vote against fulfillment of its housing commitment and lose state funds. "But if you advocate that, you should tell us what fees and taxes you are going to raise instead," Berman said.

Finally, Berman said it might be true that the housing authority did not

"With every location we consider, somebody suggests adding another unit to the Palmer st. site," Blair said.

contact the recreation department directly about its plans for Mullen Park. But various town boards have "talked endlessly" about the issue and media coverage has been extensive, he said.

George Blair of 60 Lake st. offered an observation.

"With each location we consider, somebody suggests adding another unit to the Palmer st. site," Blair said. "I'd simply ask what happened to the scattered-site concept. If that's by the boards, it opens a lot of possibilities (for multi-unit projects)."

Heavy Traffic

Blair was unconvinced Palmer st. is an ideal site. He cited heavy traffic and poor sight lines on the street as a deterrent to family housing.

"Some Town Meeting members feel the town can go out and buy existing property," Blair concluded.

Don Heath of 11 Plymouth rd. presented a petition to Moderator John Sullivan, saying it contained more than 450 signatures of residents opposed to the Mullen Park site.

Town Meeting member Robert Frank responded in support of the site. "There is a clear, demonstrated need for low-cost housing," he said. "All we are asked to contribute is one-tenth of one percent of all the dwelling units in town and one-twentieth of the buildings. The need vastly exceeds what we are asked to do."

'Eyes Wide Open'

Frank further hinted that anti-state attitudes were a bit late. "We received and used state money with our eyes wide open," Frank said. "There is no such thing as a free lunch and none of us thought differently."

Frank explained the options if Winchester does not provide seven units of Section 705 "affordable housing."

SETTLEMENT DATES

The final settlement date is usually an important item in negotiating a purchase agreement on a home. This is the day that the buyers get their ownership papers and the sellers get their money. It's important to remember, however, that most standard contracts don't pinpoint a specific date, and many settlements are delayed, usually due to factors beyond the buyer's control.

Typically, the settlement will be set for a specific date, or as soon after that as the title search and lender's paper work can be completed. If anything even slightly out of the ordinary happens, your settlement schedule can be upset. A question can arise about liens that may have been paid, but not properly recorded. The buyers may find that something on their credit history must be cleared up or explained. These situations rarely cause the transaction to fall apart, but they can wreak havoc with your schedule for moving, or if you're the seller, closing on your new home. Your Realtor will keep you up to date on the progress of your settlement to help avoid delays or minimize the inconvenience if one does occur.

If you're planning a move, Bixby & Porter Co. Realtors employs full service professionals who can get your home sold and help you find a new one. Stop by our office at 33 Thompson St., Winchester, or give us a call at 729-7000.

Jake Horn Square To Be Dedicated In Saturday Event

Dedication ceremonies for the John T. "Jake" Horn Square in Winchester will be at 2 p.m. Saturday.

The square is located at the corner of Main and Thompson streets and was officially approved by a 1984 Town Meeting. All funds needed to mark the square, however, have been raised from individuals, businesses and civic and fraternal organizations.

The Winchester High School band, under the direction of Priscilla Miller, will play for the ceremony. Ed O'Connell will be the master of ceremonies and Rep. Sherman "Whip" Saltmarsh will deliver the dedication address.

Wade Welch, chairman of the board of selectmen, will provide a municipal tribute while the Rev. John J. Bishop, pastor of the Church of the Epiphany, will bring the invocation and benediction.

At the conclusion of the ceremony, Mrs. John T. Horn will join Warren T. Bolivar and Norman Doucette, both from Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 3719, to unveil the plaque.

The late "Jake" Horn is the subject of a tribute by O'Connell in the official program for Saturday's ceremony. An employee of the Dept. of Public Works for 35 years, Horn was involved in many other civic, fraternal and veterans organizations for the betterment of Winchester.

Following the ceremony, a reception is planned at the VFW Post home at 30 River st. All who attend the dedication are welcome.

Members of the Jake Horn Memorial Committee, which raised funds and planned Saturday's tribute, include Bolivar as chairman, William Carroll, Louis Castriotta, Howard E. Chase Jr., Doucette, Ralph Fiore, Creighton L. Horn, Randolph Kazanian, O'Connell, Michael D. Saraco Sr., Saltmarsh, John Sullivan and Charles Tseckares.

Terry Dozier, national teacher of the year, made a plea to Winchester High School students on Monday to seriously consider teaching as a potential career choice.

Before her Boston visit, Dozier traveled from state to state spending the majority of her time with fellow educators — not with students.

Dozier welcomed the opportunity to "sell" her profession in person to Winchester High School students earlier this week.

"I'm so concerned about the teacher shortage," said Dozier.

She told them, "I have never regretted my decision to teach. I count myself as extremely fortunate to have found a profession I truly love."

According to the Education Collaborative for Greater Boston (edco), less than 2 percent of college-bound high school graduates indicate any interest in teaching.

Thus, Dozier's focus as national teacher of the year, she said, has been to encourage students to consider teaching as a profession.

"I think perhaps a few seeds were planted today at Winchester High," she said.

But when she polled about 150 Winchester high school students asking who wants to be a teacher, one student raised his hand affirmatively and another half-heartedly acknowledged an interest.

"That is less than 1 percent," she said, visibly distressed.

"I don't think there is any other profession where a person can change people's lives in a positive manner and shape the future," said Dozier emphatically.

During her talk to classes, Dozier, a 10th grade teacher at Irmo High School in Columbia, S.C., asked students to picture themselves in 20 or 30 years and to ask, "What did I do that made a difference?"

Lele Graduates

At U. Vermont

Martin P. Lele was awarded the bachelor of arts degree in political science during the 182nd commencement ceremonies May 24 at the University of Vermont.

A resident of Winchester, he is the son of Dr. And Mrs. Padmakar Lele of Winchester.

About 2,000 students were awarded undergraduate, graduate, and medical degrees during commencement ceremonies.

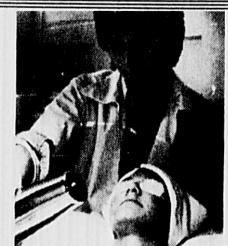

Lele was captain of the cycling team, director of the bicycling housing unit, in the Living and Learning Center at the University of Vermont.

Top Teacher On Recruiting Crusade

National teacher of the year Therese Dozier, second from the left, visited Winchester High School this week to talk to students about teaching as a career. Massachusetts teacher of the year Donna Viveiros, left, senior class student Debbie Daugherty and English teacher Judy Hession talk about the benefits of teaching. (Maureen Quinlan Photo)

She emphasized a teacher's chance to have a positive and strong impact on his or her students.

"The message needs to be loud and clear — we're confronting a crisis," she exclaimed.

If the lack of interest continues, said Dozier, 10 years from now communities like Winchester could face a shortage of crisis proportion.

How does Terry spark community interest and action? One approach is to visit schools and speak directly with students. Students tend to listen more to an outsider than their own teacher, she said.

Several factors contribute to the impending teacher shortage. First, she says within the next couple of years, teacher retirements will escalate. Dozier said many of the nation's teachers started working right after World War II. The end of the war marked the time when women's careers were limited.

"A woman was either a teacher or a nurse," explained Dozier. Now job opportunities are so much more diverse, women are looking elsewhere.

Low salaries also play a role in the lack of interest, according to Dozier. High school and college students, in keeping with the modes and mores of society today, measure success in dollar signs, said Dozier.

Another reason, she said, is the lack of publicity. "How often do high schools host career days minus a booth for teaching?" she asks.

wonder why there is such a lack of interest," she said.

Finally, Dozier said the media emphasize problems and ignore the praises. Dozier used the example of competency tests recently given to all Texas teachers: 97.3 percent passed the test.

However, Dozier said, the media drew conclusions about the minority of incompetent teachers.

Donna Viveiros, Massachusetts Teacher of the Year, who accompanied Dozier at Winchester High School and to schools across the Commonwealth said, "I don't see what a test like that would accomplish. It's difficult to test whether a teacher is effective or not."

Dozier said the presence of a few incompetent teachers is translated by the media into "all teachers are incompetent."

Dozier has channeled her concern for a "dying profession" through her work on an advisory board of a national public service advertising campaign to recruit young people to teaching.

The purpose of the campaign is to focus on students who might be persuaded to consider teaching. The program will start in September 1986 and continue for three or four years.

Dozier is driven to inform and enlighten the general public. "I don't think the public realizes how critical the situation is," she said.

Anyone needing information regarding Town Day '86 can contact the Chamber of Commerce.

Woman Designs System For Space Shuttle

Special To The Star

When the last flight of the Space Shuttle Challenger ended in a sudden spectacle of flame, smoke and debris Jan. 28, a shadow was cast upon the future of the U.S. space program.

Among those who mourned that morning were nearly 50 students at Worcester Polytechnic Institute (WPI) who are designing experiments they hope will fly into orbit a few years from now aboard a space shuttle.

One of those students was Margaret E. Fallon, a senior at WPI and daughter of James M. Fallon of Winchester. A graduate of Winchester High School, Fallon is part of a student team working on a device that will study the environment inside the canister that will hold the WPI experiments.

According to William Durgin, director of WPI's aeronautical engineering program and lead advisor for the WPI Space Shuttle Project team, the Challenger disaster has, if anything, strengthened the resolve of the students, several of whom hope to join the shuttle program someday as astronauts.

"I have not heard anybody express doubts about continuing," Durgin said.

WPI's Space Shuttle program has progressed with the help of MITRE, a not-for-profit corporation in Bedford which performs sophisticated electronics research. MITRE has purchased two special canisters from NASA and donated them to WPI. The canisters, known as "GASCANs" because they are part of NASA's Get Away Special program, offer colleges and corporations an affordable way to fly small, self-contained experiments into orbit.

Five experiments, four built by WPI students and one a joint project of a WPI professor and a seventh-grade student from Worcester, were set to go into orbit this year. Their status is now uncertain, though they will probably go aloft soon after the shuttle program resumes, Durgin said.

Six other experiments are now in the works and may be included in what has been dubbed "GASCAN II." Only a few of the six -- those which prove the most "spaceworthy" -- will actually fly, Durgin said.

One of these is the environmental data acquisition system Fallon's team is designing. It will record the temperature, pressure, sound, light and acceleration inside of the WPI/MITRE canister throughout the flight and also record data from the other experiments.

This monitor is being designed to use considerably less power than a similar unit which will fly in first GASCAN. Power consumption is critical, as all of the systems in the canister must be powered by the same, finite battery system.

The low-power data acquisition system has been under development for about one year. Fallon's team has completed a prototype, a set of sophisticated circuitry which will record and store the data, as well as computer software to operate the system. Other student teams will further refine the design and then build and test the final experiment over the next few years.

Fallon, an electrical engineering major at WPI, is working on the experiment as part of her Major Qualifying Project or MQP. Each undergraduate at WPI, the nation's third oldest college of science, technology and management, must complete four major degree requirements, two of which are projects. The MQP must explore some technical aspect of the student's major field of study.

Among the other experiments being developed as MQP's for possible inclusion in GASCAN II are devices which will study how certain materials burn in zero gravity, watch lightning strikes on earth, observe the way vortices -- or whirlpools -- form in liquids under increased or reduced gravity and examine the critical point, the combination of temperature and pressure at which a liquid and its vapor have the same density.

Each project team works with a WPI faculty member and with an engineer from MITRE. According to Fred J. Looft, associate professor of electrical engineering at WPI and major advisor for the first GASCAN, this team reflects the goal of the WPI/MITRE project, creating an environment in which students can work on challenging projects that have real scientific and technical significance. The projects are also good introductions to real scientific research, Looft said.

"You have to meet schedules; you have to honor cost constraints; you have to make very formal presentations and you have to carefully document the progress and results of your work, as you would in the corporate or academic world," Looft said.

Professor Durgin added that by participating in the GASCAN projects, students learn to work within limits -- GASCAN has only 5 cubic feet of space and can weigh no more than 200 pounds -- and to meet the challenge of designing a device that must work in the extreme conditions of space.

Must, he said, is a key word, for there will be no opportunity to fix an experiment once it is in space. This means that students must spend many hours testing and perfecting their designs to make them as fail-proof as possible.

In addition to the rewards that come from overcoming real-life challenges and participating in something as exciting as space research, there are other benefits students derive from working on the space shuttle experiments. One of the most important is the chance to interact with the corporations which have offered support -- in the form of money, equipment and technical advice -- to the program.

"It opens up career opportunities that students may not have been aware of before," Looft said.

With the shock of the Challenger disaster still fresh in their minds, Fallon and the rest of the WPI Space Shuttle team are completing work on their projects, still hopeful that, in the not too distant future, their work will sit in a shuttle cargo bay.

"I think that these students believe, and I agree with them," Durgin said, "that pushing ahead, with renewed enthusiasm and excitement, is the best tribute we can pay to the Challenger crew."

WEARING TWO HEARING AIDS

Two working ears are important not only for balanced sound reception, but for spatial orientation as well. With binocular hearing, a hearing aid in each ear, it is easy to gauge where a speaker is standing. It is also easy to sense the direction of an approaching car even before it is seen, or follow conversations in a group as people move about a room.

Binocular hearing gives you the balanced hearing advantages offered by stereo and headsets. Most times, people with a hearing loss in both ears will buy an aid for the better ear, but they could benefit more by wearing one in each ear. The human hearing system is designed to provide spatial orientation, which is why nature gave us two ears instead of one. Occasionally a person will not gain any benefit from two aids but the only way to know is to wear them for several weeks.

COMMENT

Winchester
Kernels

It's hard to believe the Winchester school committee still doesn't have a chairman or chairwoman.

After many votes, all 3-3 ties, the school committee has clearly demonstrated the problems of having an even number of people on any board composed of adults.

If there is some substantive issue involved, school committee members have not discussed it in public. And if they haven't discussed an issue in public, they're breaking the law.

Since school committee members must be presumed to set good examples for those whose education they supervise, their 3-3 votes must be the result of ego.

On a much lighter note, we have to add our voices congratulating the EnKa Society for yet another successful fair.

The fair is one of the highlights of the spring and summer for both young and old. Endless hours of volunteer work are involved and all workers deserve thanks and praise.

Could it be that Winchester's very own Terry Marotta will be chosen as the first journalist in space?

It could. Terry was one of the last 100 semifinalists among 1,600 applicants from newspapers, radio, TV and assorted other media. Then last week she was chosen as one of 40 finalists.

The space shuttle won't be launched again until at least mid-1987. Nobody is yet sure which flight will have a journalist on board.

But it could be Terry Marotta when the time comes.

Plans for Town Day '86, the next major civic event in town, are coming along nicely. A story in this issue describes some of the events for which pre-registration is required (road races, fishing derby and so forth) but a special section of The Star next week will have details and schedules of all the events.

Most folks will especially want to check the schedule of people to be watered at the Rotary Dunk Tank.

Midwest-Bound, Like Dorothy
For Oz: A Shuttle Finalist

By TERRY MAROTTA

"Unusual travel suggestions are dancing lessons from God," says a character in one of Kurt Vonnegut's novels.

I had a lesson of this sort myself last week when I flew to Iowa to participate in interviews for the Journalist-in-Space Project.

Last month, when I was first named a semi-finalist in this competition, the Project called and said there'd been some scheduling difficulties for one of the other candidates: could I oblige them by taking his slot in the Midwest and travelling out there for the interviews that would determine the next cut?

I said that I'd be happy to; that flexibility was my middle name; that the school nurse called routinely and reorganized my day by shipping home to me one or another of my suddenly fevered, pocked or otherwise languishing offspring.

So I packed my suitcase last week and boarded a plane, which after several stops and changes, landed me at last in the heartland.

There, together with other semi-finalists, I was videotaped, photographed, prodded and grilled by a team of judges whose task it was to select those of us best able to demonstrate poise before the glare of floodlights and the bristle of mikes.

I emerged from these proceedings feeling the way you're supposed to feel after any good exam: like I'd learned something, and been asked to stretch a few muscles that hadn't been used in a while.

But if my mind experienced a stretching and an airing-out there, so too did my spirit. I'd never visited this part of the country before, and I felt, flying across it, like Dorothy bound for Oz.

I pressed my nose against the windows of our plane, and read the long epic poem of a country spreading west.

Here by this coast there are hills. Out toward the other there are mountains. In the middle, though, it looks as though God took his two hands, pushed back the earth to create those bumps on either coast, cleared a wide space on the smooth flat belly of the land and said, "Here will I do my best work."

You can almost see things grow on the Great Plains, even from five miles up. The soil looks fresh and dark, moist and just combed by the plows of spring planting. Silos and neat white houses dot the landscape. Trees in their new greenery garnish it like springs of fresh parsley.

And the people are wonderful. The teaching assistant who met me at the airport, the journalism student who escorted me from building to building, even the personnel at the airport ticket counters were warm and helpful.

A man I met after leaving Cedar Rapids was the nicest of all. We found ourselves walking the same way in the Chicago airport, and he said, "Hey, hi! We were on the same flight just now!"

We chatted a bit as we walked, and exchanged accounts of what had brought us both to this crossroads. Then he ducked into a shop and I kept on walking.

Five minutes later he caught up with me again, an inflatable toy model of the Shuttle Columbia in his hand.

"This is for you," he told me. "Thank you," I said. "You shouldn't," I said. "You'll never get anywhere in life buying presents for strangers," I said.

"So where's to get?" he answered with a grin.

Back home? Into space? But his meaning lay on another level.

I made the cut, I learned later last week: I'm a finalist now for a ride on that shuttle.

But the question that this young man put to me has stayed in my mind. It seems to sum up one of the great paradoxes life presents us with: travel far to learn your destiny; seek it in the stars. Stay at home to learn your fate; seek it in the heart.

I journeyed to Iowa last week and came back with more than souvenirs packed in my luggage.

It was an unusual travel suggestion, this that sent me far to bring me home again. It was a dancing lesson of the finest kind.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

A Fence
Or Ambulance?

TO THE EDITOR:

"...Better put a strong fence round the top of the cliff than an ambulance down in the valley."

Joseph Malins
How frequent are the distressing sounds of squealing brakes, metallic crunch and earth-shaking impact of two cars, followed by sirens approaching from all corners of Winchester to converge on the mangled scene at the intersection at Washington and Cross st.

The police log shows that here collisions are too common an occurrence, but even more frequent are the sounds of screeching brakes and skidding cars, a near-collision avoided thanks to some alert defensive driver.

Why is this such a high risk intersection?

Perhaps you can appreciate the frustration of drivers on Cross st. trying to get home at 5 p.m., or drivers on Washington st. trying to turn left onto Cross st. at rush hour.

Oncoming traffic seems unending and little chance appears to facilitate safe penetration of the oncoming stream of cars.

An added burden on this intersection is the pedestrian traffic due to Leonard Park, which attracts baseball teams, tennis players, bikers, swimmers, and sociable children. To require children to cross this major thoroughfare without the aid of a "walk" light, or even a traffic signal, seems to be inviting catastrophe.

In the past two days, there have been two accidents at this intersection. Each time the sirens arrive, my children run out with morbid fascination to see if anyone has been killed this time.

How long will it be until we "build a fence," rather than trust the ambulance to cure the results of our negligence? Let's not wait too long.

Thanks For Fire Department

We would like to express our thanks and appreciation to the Winchester Fire Department for their fast and courteous service when our house caught fire recently. Their prompt and efficient service resulted in minimal damage to our house.

EnKa Thanks
All Supporters

TO THE EDITOR:

The EnKa Society gratefully acknowledges the many people who helped us prepare and operate the 1986 "American Beauty's" Fair.

It is so gratifying to have the townspeople and the town departments working with us to provide an enjoyable, safe and profitable fair. Because of this help we are able to continue to supply and aid charitable groups and individuals who make requests to the EnKa Society.

Our thanks to the Winchester Savings Bank and the employees who gave their time through the weekend counting the proceeds. It is a tremendous job and their services are invaluable to EnKa.

We extend thanks to McCall Junior High School's principal and staff for the use of the school and grounds, and for their patience with our many requests and their untiring help.

Our warmest thank-you to numerous friends and neighbors, who so cheerfully helped staff rides, games and booths; to our EnKa members and their families and to all who patronized the "American Beauty's" Fair to help make it a success.

The winner of the beautiful handmade quilt by the EnKa ladies was Eke Alesi of Winchester and the winner of the basket of gourmet foods from our Pot Pourri was Barbara Canavan of Winchester.

Every fair is a "special fair" and our heartfelt thanks to all who again helped make this one special.

Sincerely,
Phyllis H. Johansen, Chairman
1986 "American Beauty's" Fair

Thanks For Senior Day!

TO THE EDITOR:

The Winchester Seniors Association and the Council on Aging extend sincere gratitude to every person who helped to make the first Senior Day in Winchester a complete success.

Town and state officials, the High School Band, owners of parade cars, businesses, organizations, seniors and representatives from church choirs throughout the town all did a tremendous job to make this occasion a "history in the making" day.

More than 50 members of the High School Band volunteered their leisure time for the benefit of seniors, although the band was already scheduled for two more parades in the town.

Special appreciation is extended to Miss Priscilla Miller, other instructors in the High School Music Department, and to all band members for their great service May 10.

The Festival Chorus of over 50 singers presented its concert on the patio overlooking Judkins Pond. This was a thrilling experience for a large audience who joined enthusiastically in the singing of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," "This Is My Country," "Let There Be Peace on Earth," "America the Beautiful," and "God Bless America."

Special appreciation goes to Mr. James Moritz, choir director at St. Mary's Church, Dr. Robert White, choir director at First Congregational Church, and Dr. Paul Taylor, director of music at First Baptist Church.

To the members of the Senior Day Committee, to the staff at Jenks Senior Center, to the Building Expansion Committee, to the Fund Raising Committee, and to the Advisory Committee — our hearty thanks are sincerely given. We include the many other unsung heroes in our expression of appreciation.

Sincerely,
Leon M. Rich
President of the Winchester Seniors Association

BEACON HILL ROLL CALL

The House, "Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local representatives' votes on 8 roll calls from the week of May 12 - 16.

Financial Disclosure (H 1678) - House 88-55, gave initial approval to a bill setting up new and higher categories under which many state and county officials must disclose outside earnings under the state's financial disclosure laws. The current system has $100,000 or more as the highest category while the bill sets the highest category at $300,000 or more.

Supporters said the economy has changed so much that the $100,000 limit is not meaningful when many people earn more than that.

Opponents said the bill is another intrusion in the life of public officials and will continue to discourage people from serving in office.

Representative Sherman

Saltmarsh voted yes. Dual Office (H 5348) - House 119-25, rejected a bill prohibiting any person who holds an elective state or county office from holding any elective office in the city of Pittsfield unless he or she resigns from the state or county office. The bill also places the bill on the ballot in Pittsfield for voter consideration.

Supporters said the bill, approved by the city council, is simply a home rule one which will be decided by voters.

Opponents, claiming the bill is aimed at one person, said the legislature should not get involved.

Saltmarsh voted no.

The next six roll calls deal with amendments to the controversial medical malpractice reform bill. The House gave near final approval to the bill last week on a voice vote and sent it over to the Senate.

Legal Fees (H 5612) - House 132-19, rejected an amendment decreasing the amount of money an attorney may collect from the plaintiff in a successful malpractice suit. Changes include reducing the attorney's share of the first $150,000 from 40 percent to 33 percent and the second $150,000 from 33 percent to 30 percent.

Amendment supporters said this will help the consumer and still entitle lawyers to a profit.

Opponents said lawyers are generally paid only if the case is won and argued the higher limits are necessary to help them recoup losses.

Saltmarsh voted no.

Premiums (H 5612) - House first approved 74-70 and then approved again 71-69, an amendment freezing medical malpractice insurance premiums until June 1987 and forgiving rate increases from 1983-1986.

Amendment supporters said the Joint Underwriting Association (JUA) has a $300 million reserve and argued it is unfair to make doctors pay retroactive hikes.

Opponents said the amendment will cost $60 million in already due premiums and argued it is an unconstitutional amendment which will cause the JUA financial problems.

Saltmarsh voted yes on the first and second roll call.

Reject Tender (H 5612) - House 81-68, approved an amendment allowing plaintiffs to reject "early tender" offers made by orthopedic surgeons in malpractice cases.

Amendment supporters said that without the amendment, plaintiffs would be required to accept a surgeon's offer which would not include damages for pain and suffering and noted the plaintiff would have little or no recourse in court.

Opponents said the amendment kills the entire "early tender" provision which is a good one designed to save litigation costs, lower premiums and still be fair to both sides.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

Fair Market (H 5612) - House 136-7, approved an amendment requiring a medical service corporation to pay doctors a fair market rate for their services to subscribers.

Amendment supporters said this insures that doctors are adequately paid by Blue Cross which has not been reimbursing at a fair rate.

Opponents offered no arguments.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

Waiver (H 5612) - House 129-18, rejected an amendment providing that a doctor's license be revoked for one year if it is determined that he or she made a patient sign a waiver of liability for the doctor's negligence or malpractice.

Amendment supporters said this will protect patients who are being pressured by doctors.

Opponents said it is already illegal for doctors to require such a waiver. Saltmarsh voted no.

The Senate, "Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local senators' votes on 7 roll calls from the week of May 12 - 16.

Libraries (S 1746) - Senate 36-0, gave near final approval and sent to the House a bill providing for a $35 million bond authorization to set up a program under which the state will provide funds for city and town libraries.

Supporters said libraries have suffered as a result of the restraints of Proposition 2½, and noted the package would help with improvements.

Senator Richard Kraus voted yes.

Prescriptions (S 501 and S 1398) - Senate 26-10 rejected an amendment to order certain diagnostic tests and prescribe drugs and then 26-9 rejected a similar amendment to a bill allowing certain nurses to do the same. The amendments would delay the legislation until completion of a review of a 1983 law giving physicians assistants these powers in only long-term care facilities.

Many amendment supporters opposed the bill, said it weakens the health care system and urged a study of the effects of the 1983 law.

Opponents said the bill includes many safeguards and will reduce costs and improve access without sacrificing quality medical care.

Both roll calls are listed below. In both roll calls Kraus voted no.

Salaries (H 5382) - Senate 22-7, rejected an amendment to a bill raising salaries of persons in state management positions. The amendment would prohibit any of the salaries from exceeding the Governor's pay which is currently $75,000.

Amendment supporters said a $75,000 cap is reasonable.

Opponents said the cap was restrictive and noted some state positions already pay more than $75,000.

A Yea vote is for the amendment. A Nay vote is against it.

Kraus voted no.

Product Liability (S 830) - Senate 20-7 refused to reconsider its earlier defeat of a bill limiting the statute of limitations on product liability cases to ten years.

Supporters of the bill said a ten year limit is sufficient time to bring suit for a defective product and noted some manufacturers are being sued by second and third owners of products which are altered by one of the owners.

Opponents said there are many machines that have a life of up to 40 years and claimed the bill is anti-consumer and would prevent legitimate law suits.

A Yea vote is for reconsidering defeat of the bill. A Nay vote is against the bill. Kraus did not vote.

Jake Ciarcia

(Maureen Quinlan Photo)

Jake Ciarcia Honored As Man Of The Year

"Family is very important to me, close and extended," he says. He feels fortunate his siblings and his mother are nearby.

However, living and working in the community where he was born clearly has both advantages and disadvantages, Ciarcia admits. But he says the advantages clearly outweigh the disadvantages.

He explains one advantage. "I'm not only doing it (my job) because of professional ethics or position, I have stronger feelings because it's the town I have lived in all my life."

He admits there are times when he has trouble leaving his job behind on the weekends. "I like to garden. It is good therapy." Ciarcia also enjoys playing softball on the town hall team.

Ciarcia describes himself as a doer at work. "I'm low key, enjoy humor and relish a group attacking a problem and solving it."

"Some issues I feel so strong about, I jump right in," he says, but notes other times he prefers to listen to ideas from colleagues.

He claims listening is an important philosophy of his. "People should listen to each other more often. I don't like to think I push my ideas on people," he gestures.

But, he says, "I like to have the opportunity to express them. I don't like to be a mushroom," he chuckles. "I like to be a part of what's going on."

Ciarcia has a grasp for more than the engineering aspect of Winchester. Before Chadwick Maurer was hired as town manager last year, Ciarcia filled in as acting town manager from October 1984 to April 1985. He also was responsible for preparing the town budget that year for town meeting.

Past Winners

The honor has been awarded for the past five years.

1980, the Honorable Harris Chadwick.

1981, State Rep. Sherman W. Saltmarsh.

1982, Robert Nickerson, the Chamber's first president.

1983, Gustav Kaufmann, a doctor at Winchester Hospital for 35 years.

1984, John J. Sullivan, town moderator.

1985, Clarence Borggaard.

"I have four great kids, ranging from 16 to 27. They are there when you need them, they have never given me problems and all of them still live at home."

He reclines in his chair and folds his hands. "There were some frustrating moments," he says, but "it was an education for me and I enjoyed doing it. I'm lucky to have survived it," he laughs.

About seven years ago, when the town started to consider the major task of upgrading downtown Winchester, Ciarcia became engrossed in planning and executing the project. "Up until that time only studies were done and quickly put away on the shelf," he said.

Ciarcia became a member of an informal committee, the economic development committee.

After several meetings, he said, "the general feeling was — let's implement some of these projects."

With help from the Chamber of Commerce and the private sector, some money was raised to begin renovations. And subsequently grants for hundreds of thousands of dollars were awarded to Winchester by the state.

Wednesday night, Ciarcia was scheduled to be honored as the town's outstanding citizen of the year during a Chamber of Commerce banquet at the Knights of Columbus Hall.

Jake describes the town as unique. The efficiency and effectiveness of town departments is analogous to "a well-oiled machine that always moves together," he says.

AFS Creates International Family

By CARLY JANE WATSON

Since 1947, AFS International/Intercultural programs have been at the forefront of nonprofit international exchange activities.

Rewards to the communities, schools, and families come in friendships, personal insights, and a crosscultural sensitivity and understanding otherwise found only by living abroad.

This year Jane Robbins and Bob Boslego became AFS parents to AFS student/daughter Ender Ozdemir of Turkey. Jane and Bob by nature have an open/international approach to living. They believe strongly in the AFS experience and what it can do for everyone involved. Their own circle of friends is international, and until recently, their immediate Winchester neighbors were from Kuwait.

Jane's New Jersey high school always sponsored AFS students. She recalls the excitement each year when the AFS club found out who the new exchange student would be and the fun they had getting to know these students. Her family hosted students during the summer program. The most memorable students that stayed with them were from the Philippines and Brazil.

Bob also has wonderful recollections of friends from foreign countries. His best friend in high school was from Austria, and in college his closest friend was from Iran.

Two years ago Bob's sister in Virginia sponsored an AFS student, and he and Jane began to consider the possibility of doing the same, although Winchester did not have an AFS chapter.

Ground work was laid for an AFS chapter, an application was filed in April 1985, and Ender arrived in July.

Jane and Bob weren't sure how their lives would change. They have no children and both worked 60 to 80 hours a week. Intellectually they knew there was more to life, and they were willing to make space for it. Looking back, they find it hard to remember what it was like before Ender came.

The experience has been more rewarding than either expected, and an extended American/Turkish family has been created. Ender is not a guest, as students on shorter exchanges are, but a member of the family, and she has been able to see what life is really like in this bit of America.

What impressed Jane and Bob most is how well educated and capable Ender is. She has a remarkable knowledge of issues and a creative intellect. They know now that there are many other students like her in Turkey. They are "very proud parents."

Jane and Bob have also learned indirectly about Turkish culture and lifestyle. Ender has spoken to groups in Winchester about Turkey, and will address social studies students at the high school during the Model United Nations program in May.

Students and staff will all learn that Turkey has a highly developed culture and that modern Turkey is western in nature. In addition, the present government is progressive and is very concerned about creating positive ties with the West.

Ties between the two countries will always be stronger because of this new international family. Jane will always keep in touch with Ender and perhaps someday Ender's younger Turkish sister will come to stay with them too.

Because Winchester is special and has so much to give, and because an entire family and community can in exchange gain so much from the AFS program, Bob and Jane want to see the Winchester AFS chapter thrive.

Kathy Alexander is president of the Winchester AFS Chapter and is looking for a family to sponsor the next AFS exchange student and for financial support for that sponsorship. Call her at 729-0224 or Bob Boslego at 729-7989 for more information.

Harvard Museums Available To Residents

By CHRIS RUST

Harvard University's museums have just become available to Winchester residents through the Winchester Public Library.

The library has purchased memberships to the Harvard University Art Museums and to the Harvard University Museums of Natural History. Free admission cards circulate for one day at a time and may be reserved in person or by phone at the library's reference desk.

Library patrons using the Harvard Art Museums passes have access to three different museums, the Fogg Art Museum, the Busch-Reisinger Museum and the Arthur M. Sackler Museum, all located in Cambridge.

The Fogg Museum, whose two floors of galleries surround an Italian Renaissance courtyard, is the home of Harvard's masterpieces of Western painting and sculpture, drawings and prints. Rubens, Van Gogh, Cezanne and Pollack are among the artists whose works hang in the Fogg.

The Busch-Reisinger is home to an extensive collection of central and northern European art, including medieval, Renaissance, and Baroque sculpture, 16th century painting, and 18th century porcelain. However, 20th-century German, Swiss, Russian and Scandinavian works are its major strength.

The Arthur M. Sackler Museum, home of Harvard's Oriental, Ancient and Islamic art collections, is the Boston area's newest museum. It contains the world's finest collection of ancient Chinese jades and Chinese cave reliefs, as well as collections of Chinese bronzes, Japanese wood block prints, Roman sculpture, Greek vases and Persian miniatures and calligraphy.

The four museums making up the Harvard University Museums of Natural History, the Botanical Museum, the Museum of Comparative Zoology, the Peabody Museum of Archaeology and Ethnology, and the Mineralogical and Geological Museums, are wonderful places for everyone; but children especially love these collections.

Highlights of the Peabody Museum collections are the Hall of American Indians, the Central American Hall and the African art exhibit. The public exhibit of minerals, gems and meteorites found in the Mineralogical and Geological Museums is unusually comprehensive.

The Botanical Museum features a unique "Garden in Glass" comprised of true to life models of over 700 plant species created by Leopold and Rudolf Blaschke in Dresden, Germany, during the last century.

Animals, how they evolved, where they live, their similarities and differences, are the focus of the exhibits of the Museum of Comparative Zoology. Displays include the largest turtle shell ever found, complete whale skeletons, extinct species such as the great auk, and the passenger pigeon, and the world's oldest reptile egg.

The Harvard Museum passes join those to 11 other area museums available on loan to Winchester residents. For more information about the passes, check with the reference staff at the library, or call 721-7171.

Spring Fever Strikes Vinson-Owen

With the arrival of warm weather Vinson-Owen's grade 2/3 has taken on the "look of spring." In science class, the children have observed the life stages of the caterpillar, as it matures into a beautiful butterfly. It was very exciting to return from April vacation to find these fluttering beauties.

During spring, many children enjoy flying kites. Grade 2/3 has created a bulletin board entitled "Fly High with Ideas," using haiku, a form of Japanese poetry. The children wrote poems with spring as a theme. They copied their poetic works on paper shaped like kites. They then mounted this paper onto a miniature kite, made with construction paper.

As an extended language activity, grade 2/3 worked on spring stories and spring pictures using the computer.

NOTES FROM THE BLACKBOARD

Elementary Drug And Alcohol Awareness

Sixth grade students are participating in a Drug and Alcohol Awareness Program sponsored by Winchester High School. The program is based on "peer teaching" with high school juniors and seniors presenting information and leading discussions under the leadership of social studies teacher Thomas Walsh.

Music School Registration

The Winchester Community Music School is registering students for the fall. Lessons are offered in band and orchestra instruments, guitar, electric guitar and electric bass, banjo, voice, recorder, organ, and special needs. Small ensembles are also available. A weekly jazz workshop is offered for high school students, in addition to music theory classes.

After School Enrichment

Catherine Alexander is interested in establishing an after school program for elementary school children to provide a variety of activities of high quality. She is looking for instructors. Anyone with an interest, hobby, or talent that can be designed for grades 1-3, 4-6, or 1-6 is needed for an eight week, one day per week class starting in September. Anyone interested in teaching or children interested in attending should contact her.

Ambrose Field Day

High energy crossed the Ambrose Field faster than the wind Friday, May 9, when Ambrose held its annual field day. Students in kindergarten through grade six displayed skill and teamwork in relays, wheelbarrow and three-legged races, and the "traditional" intermediate tug-of-war.

A large crowd of parents, siblings and friends joined students and teachers to enjoy a picnic lunch prior to the day's athletic events. In addition to the customary first, second and third place badges, participant ribbons were awarded to all competitors.

Winning Solutions

The sixth grade at Ambrose recently participated in the nationwide "Future Problem Solving Program." The primary focus was actual problem-solving. Students studied and presented solutions to problems concerning endangered species and artificial intelligence.

Secondary activities in the competition were scenario writing and visual arts. In both activities, students were required to use the same topics as the theme for their projects.

Ambrose students scored a first and second place in the junior division of the visual arts competition this year. They also earned a plaque of recognition for Ambrose School.

First place team winners were Sarah O'Grady, Meri Caci and Julie Struthers. Second place team winners were Melissa Ehlert, Erin Pullen and Emily Banks. The faculty coach for the competition was Mrs. Martha Whitney.

Sciences Alive And Well At Lincoln

Kindergarten classes learned about bees and beekeeping. The children try on beekeeping clothing, study beekeeping tools and examine a beehive. Third graders visited Smith Pond and Locke Farm where guided by a representative of Winchester Trails, they fished with streamers, discovered pond life and were taught to recognize birds, plants and flowers.

Educators from Rhode Island and Malden visited Sally Walter's second grade at Lincoln class to observe the teaching of process science. Their interest in the class came from the recent National Science Award given to the excellent science program.

Businesses Contacted

As part of a language arts/social studies project, students in grade four at Lincoln School are receiving answers to business letters they sent to individuals and companies in the United States, Canada and Europe.

Replies have been received from such companies as Reebok, Parker Brothers, Chrysler Corporation, Apple Computer and NASA. Each student will present a follow-up to his or her class, using materials obtained from the reply.

Comings And Goings

Carl Schwartzman of Schwartzman Financial Services spoke to Jane Sughrue's seventh grade Advanced Pre-Algebra class April 1 about investing in the stock market. Students enjoyed this informative and timely talk since they are in the middle of "investing" as part of a project on the New York Stock Exchange.

McCall hosted a meeting of Greater Boston Earth Science Teachers Thursday, April 17. Teachers came to use the six stream tables set up for the McCall students to perform stream erosion and deposition experiments.

Eighth grade A-Team teachers Walter Lewis and Susan White took their students on a field trip May 2 to the General Motors Assembly Plant in Framingham. The trip was educational and enjoyable.

Poetry Sharing

Some interested Muraco students will attend a Poems "R" Us workshop at the Winchester High School English Department. Along with high school students and English teachers, children will hear an introduction to poetry by poet Elizabeth McKim. Later, in small groups, there will be an opportunity for poetry sharing and discussions of the poetry experience.

Celebrating The Seashore

The Lynch library is "Celebrating the Seashore" during the month of May. Mrs. Johnson's kindergarten class created a large mural of sea creatures to decorate one wall. Students may enter a shell identification contest and all correct entries have a chance to be among the three lucky winners.

Mrs. Aubrey Killion, a Lynch parent and library volunteer, has been invited to visit several grades to show and discuss her extensive collection of Cape Cod shells.

ly and will soon publish another edition of the "Fourth Gazette" newspaper, using their word processor. Their interests lie in nature as well as they plan a field trip to Long Pond as an extension of their science curriculum.

As part of their social studies, they will view a program on Native American lore presented by Richard Conway, a teacher at Winchester High School, and after studying our native Woodland Indians, they will write their own booklets.

Lowell Factory Days

Marcia Perlmutter presented her program, "Three Mill Girls," to the McCall seventh grade May 16. She portrayed three immigrant women from early factory days in Lowell. She has a unique way of working with an audience and interacts throughout the program with the students.

Her skillful use of props, her superb acting ability and the pertinent historical perspective of her show have made her a very popular figure in schools.

McCall Book Fair

More than 400 primary grade students visited McCall Book Fair April 29-May 1. For the past several months, students in English classes have been writing children's books. Recently they read their stories to elementary students. Students in both age groups enjoyed themselves immensely. At the end of each reading period, McCall students served refreshments to their young guests.

Visiting Author

Muraco intermediate students were fortunate recently to have a visit from Lois Lowry, a well-known local children's author. She spoke about her books and how she goes about choosing characters and plots, many based on her own experiences as the mother of four. Students prepared for this exciting event by reading many of Lowry's books and learning about her life.

European Feast

Leslie Eggeling's second graders at Muraco School have completed a unit about Europe. After studying the culture, famous people, music, history and geography of the countries, a feast was held to sample typical foods from the various parts of Europe.

Children rotated from table to table, dressing in regional garb and taking the roles of famous people in history. One child reported she enjoyed Brussels sprouts and being Winston Churchill best of all.

Messages From 1986

As Halley's Comet traveled through the skies this winter, Muraco School children wrote "Messages from 1986" to the students of the year 2061. They told their favorite games, toys, books, television shows, and other pertinent information so children of the future could know about life today.

A representative from the Winchester Archives came to Muraco to receive the letters, which will be kept in the Archives to be opened by school children when Halley's Comet comes again in 2061.

Sixth Grade Activities

Vinson-Owen sixth graders are putting together a newspaper. Separate staffs for editorials, sports, hard news and so forth are writing stories to be printed on the computer, using the program "Newsroom."

They also attended the Boston Symphony Orchestra program entitled "Singing with the B.S.O." at Symphony Hall. The program featured Jayne West and James Kleys singing excerpts from the opera "Don Giovanni" by Wolfgang Mozart. The John Oliver Chorale also sang several selections.

"Shadow For A Day"

The Winchester Chamber of Commerce and the business education department at the high school are enthusiastic about the third year of the "Shadow for a Day" program. The program is designed to introduce high school business students to the world of work.

It is arranged for a student to spend time with a professional person observing his or her day-to-day activities. Students learn first-hand about a field in which they already have an interest.

Computer Imaging

Kenneth Crocker of Imaging Technology, Inc., lectured to the electronics students at the high school about "Computer Imaging Technology." It was an interesting experience for the staff and students and was arranged through the LAWW Partnership Program.

French Students Initiated

On May 21, 37 French students were initiated into the Winchester High School chapter of the Societe honoraire de francais. The honor society is an affiliate of the American Association of Teachers of French and is sponsored by teachers Alfred Duhamel and Leslie Hastings.

Depression Workshop

Peer teachers from the 11th and 12th grades are preparing to hold discussions in 10th grade English classes on the topic of depression and stress. The peer teachers, together with guidance counselors, present information on depression, its signs and symptoms, its causes, why adolescents are vulnerable to depression, and how to deal with it.

Warning signs of suicide are also presented and the students talk about how to get help for someone who is seriously depressed or a possible suicide risk.

Intramurals

Another successful program of intramural sports is drawing to a close at Lincoln School. Fifth and sixth grade students, supervised by teachers, have met weekly to play a variety of sports. Teachers involved have recovered from all strains sustained by long dormant muscles with all participants now in better shape than when they started.

The Winchester Star

ASK THE EDUCATOR

Jack Kelly, co-advisor
High School Math Club

Question: Winchester joined another math league this year. Why and how did both teams do?

This is the first year that we have participated in two leagues. We have been members of the Greater Boston Math League for quite some time. That league consists of 35 schools divided into four divisions.

Winchester is classed as a medium-sized school because we have less than 900 students in grades 10 through 12, and we play in the North Division. Each division meets four times, each division uses the same questions. Then the top ten teams in the division meet for a playoff.

Winchester's overall standing after the four games were: First place for medium-sized schools and third place overall.

We were invited to the Division One Playoffs. Winchester and Canton were co-winners of the Division One Playoffs, and Winchester was then invited to the Massachusetts State Playoffs, where we placed second for a medium-sized school.

We were then invited to play in the New England Math Tournament. The three top-placed teams in each of the three different School-size categories compete for a total of nine teams from each of six states.

I am very happy to report that Winchester placed second in the New England Tournament.

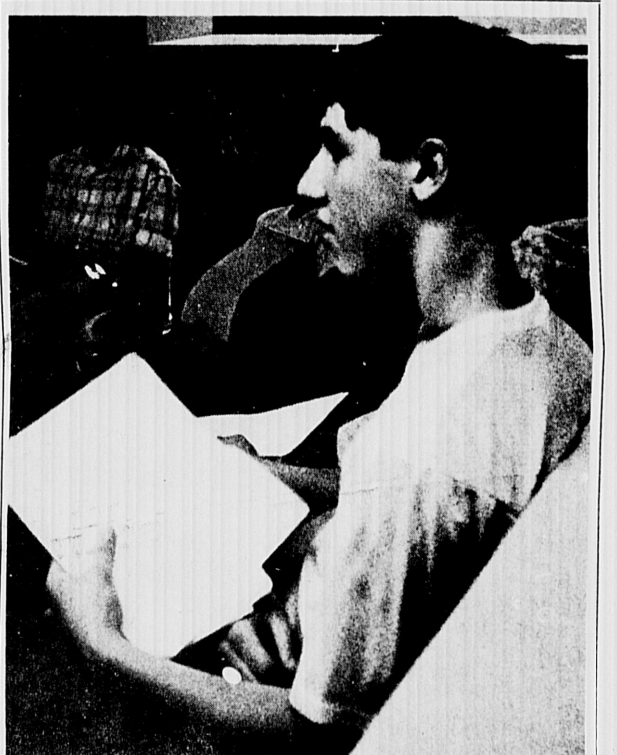

But Winchester has had a problem. At the division level, teams are made up of five players and at the state and regional level, teams are of six. Winchester has 15 to 20 students interested and able to play. So this year, we joined the Massachusetts State League.

In this league, there are 40 teams in four divisions. Winchester is in the Merrimack Valley Division, with 10 students to a team.

In our first year of competition, after five games, we had placed third or fourth each game. We were invited to the Division Two Playoffs and we won! So both teams won their divisional playoffs.

Playing in two leagues is a very good solution to what was a problem. We can now give our younger students competition experience, we can encourage not only individual but team-based talent, and we can meet the interests and abilities of a greater number of our students.

Mary Mirka, the other co-advisor to the Math Club, and I are really proud and pleased by the efforts of our students this year as should be all of Winchester.

Students Share Original Poetry

Poetry in the high school English area and Shakespeare in the auditorium were the menu for an "Arts Happening" on May 16.

Students from elementary, junior high, and senior high schools, teachers and parents shared original poetry.

In the auditorium students who had performed at the Shakespearean Festival at Woodstock, Vermont earlier in May presented an original short play based on a composite of five Shakespearean plays.

The poetry session, which opened with poetry set to music by Mr. Gerald Skinder and Mr. Wilbur Johnson, and an original poem read by principal Vincent Larocco, provided an opportunity for students to talk about their poetry and learn from each other. The session closed with a poetry reading by Elizabeth McKim.

brought to Winchester by the enrichment committees for week-long visits as a poet in residence in the Lincoln and Vinson-Owen elementary schools and McCall Junior High School.

Earlier McKim had provided a poetry workshop for teachers that was so enthusiastically received that high school teachers asked for an opportunity to present her to high school students.

In the auditorium, "Love's Labor," a composite of Much Ado About Nothing, Taming of the Shrew, Richard II, As You Like It, and Two Gentlemen of Verona, was enjoyed by students not participating in the poetry festival.

Members of the Shakespearean cast included seniors Terry Clements, Marialice Curran, Ben Keller, David Lewis, Martha Redding, sophomores Adam Laats, Christopher Leydon, Eric Mortensen, Lauren Murray, Stephen Reeve, and freshmen Lydia Cooper, John Segota and Aaron Stevens. Two seniors, Kathy Maney and Rachel Cooper, helped with costuming and music.

The "Arts Happening" culminated with lunch and visiting at the end of the day. Judith Hession chaired the poetry festival while Cheryl Howard chaired the Shakespearean performances. Over 650 students, teachers, and parents participated in the "Arts Happening."

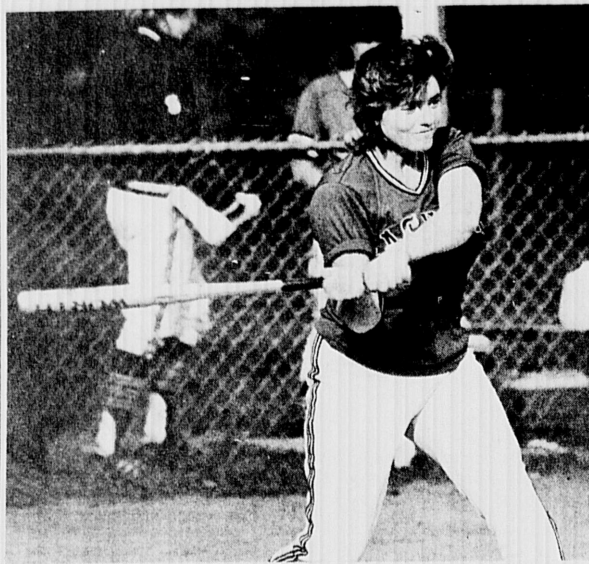

Literary Night At Vinson-Owen

Vinson-Owen School recently had a very successful fifth grade production known as "Literary Night." It was written, produced, and performed by fifth graders and featured characterizations, creative writing, a TV commercial and billboard ad, original poetry, two historical skits, a puppet show, an interview, two letters from history, descriptive paragraphs, and creative writing on the mystery of Harris Burdick.

Special thanks went to John Russo, Justin Simcone, Charlie Chute and Mark Puma.

Girls' Team Loses

The Sachemettes dropped to sixth place in the Middlesex softball league last week, losing to Melrose 8-7 Wednesday and Watertown 2-0 Friday.

Friday's loss came in spite of a fine performance by pitcher Heidi MacDonald, who allowed only six hits on the afternoon.

Unfortunately, Winchester could manage only five hits, none of which brought any Sachemettes across home plate.

The Red Raiderettes scored single runs in the fourth and sixth innings. Heather Stuckey singled in the fourth, followed by a Sarah Kelly blast to center field to score Watertown's first run.

In the sixth inning, Karen McNeil singled, stole second and third bases, then came home on a single by Stuckey.

Debbie Perritano led the Sachemettes offensively with two hits.

Town Day Road Race Registration Opens

The 15th annual road race will kick off Town Day, Saturday, May 31. This year the race will feature a 5-mile competitive race and a 2.8-mile "Fun Run." Organizers hope the more comfortable 5-mile run will encourage local runners of all ages to enter.

Registration for the 5-mile race is open at the Winchester recreation department daily from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. through noon May 30. Pre-registration fee is $5. Post registration on the day of the race is $6. Fun Run registration is $5 and will be taken the day of the race only.

T-shirts will be issued to all registered runners. Trophies and medals will be awarded to the first three winners in the men's and women's divisions in each age category.

Another change this year is the course of the 5-mile run as follows: Begin at McCall Jr. High School down Main st. (toward Medford), Symmes Corner, Bacon st., Fletcher st., Wildwood st., Woodside rd., Pond st., Brantwood rd., through Lynch School, Horn Pond Brook rd., Middlesex st., Linden st., Lake st., Skillings rd., Washington st., Main st., Mystic ave., Mystic Valley Parkway, Main st., end at McCall.

Tennis Court Passes Will Be Needed June 1

The Winchester Recreation Department reminds residents that single use passes or season passes for use of the 15 clay tennis courts at the William S. Packer Facility will be required as of June 1.

Passes are made available to Winchester residents only (proof of residency is required) and may be purchased in advance at the town clerk's office at Town Hall. Season passes ($10 adult, $5 youth) and/or single use passes ($5 for book of 5) must be in the players possession and presented each "use" time to the court supervisor before a court will be assigned.

An added change in the Packer Court system for 1986 will be the sale of single use passes at the courts. Single use passes will be available through the supervisor. Proof of residency will be required.

Winchester also operates tennis courts at the high school, McDonald Field and Leonard Field. Use of these courts is free. Contact the recreation department at 721-725 for further information.

STAR SPORTS

Boys Edged By Lexington

The Minutemen of Lexington dislodged Winchester's grip as co-leaders in the Middlesex league last Wednesday, beating the Sachems 3-2. It was the best and most closely fought tennis match in the county this spring.

By the time Lexington's second doubles team of Ted Snodgrass and Steve Glick defeated Chris Aronson and Eliot Foley 9-7 in a third-set tiebreaker, evening had settled upon the Packer courts.

Winchester and Lexington had been tied before the climactic finish to the match.

At first singles, Lexington's Radek Koczek defeated Shawn Herlihy 6-1, 6-1. Lexington also won readily at the No. 2 singles spot as Joe Palumbo fell to Lubos Koczek 6-4, 6-2.

Winchester answered in third singles, with Sachem Gavin Barton dispatching Andy Miller 6-2, 6-2. At first doubles, Hank Lynch and Chris Terpkio fought from behind to win their match 3-6, 6-4, 7-6.

This time Winchester won the tiebreaker 7-4.

With the team score tied at two matches apiece, everything rode on the outcome at second doubles.

Winchester led the tiebreaker 5-4 until Snodgrass held serve, pushing Lexington ahead 6-5. Winchester battled back, trailing the Minutemen 8-7, but Winchester sent a volley deep to give Lexington the match.

Aronson and Foley redeemed themselves somewhat the following afternoon against helpless Belmont.

There was nothing personal in their 6-0, 6-0 shellacking of Mark Major and Peter Bekerian. The Marauders just happened to be on court two that afternoon.

Palumbo, at first singles, beat Doug Ackley 6-4, 6-2. Barton, at second singles, defeated Andy Haugh 6-2, 6-3, and Scott Herlihy, up from the JV's, won 6-2, 7-5, over Caleb Perkins at No. 3 singles.

At first doubles, Lynch and Terpkio disposed of Jay Givwala and Mike Platt 6-2, 7-5, while second doubles won easily as well.

WHS '9' Takes 2nd Place

The Winchester varsity baseball team moved into second place in the Middlesex league behind 10-1 Stoneham last week with victories over Melrose and Watertown.

Winchester demonstrated a winning balance of offense and defense enroute to beating Melrose 7-2 and Watertown 13-3 Friday.

Sachem pitching ace Tim Budrevicz allowed the Red Raiders just one hit Wednesday and fanned 12 batters. In the third, fifth, and seventh innings it was three up, three down.

In the meantime, designated hitter Al Nasson kept the Melrose fielders busy as he drove in four runs off two hits.

Martha Doherty Is Named Tufts' Top Woman Athlete

Martha Doherty, the "Secretary of Defense" in two sports, has been elected the 1986 recipient of the Hester L. Sargent Award as the outstanding female athlete at Tufts University, Rocco J. Carzo, director of athletics, announced.

Doherty, a Winchester resident, is a senior at Tufts.

A four-year regular at center back in field hockey, Doherty was elected the team's Most Valuable Player in 1984 and 1985 when the Jumbos won a total of 20 games, 15 by shutout. Her five goals and seven assists made her the second leading scorer on the 1986 team which equalled the school record for the most wins in a season (12) and was ranked fifth in New England.

In Doherty's four years with the field hockey team, Tufts compiled an overall record of 43-9-4 and was selected for postseason tournaments four times.

A three-year regular at cover point in lacrosse, Doherty was elected All-New England and team co-MVP after leading the 1986 team to an 11-1 record and an ECAC Tournament title. She had team-high marks in interceptions (33), ground ball control (42) and blocked shots (26) this season.

In Doherty's three years with the lacrosse team, Tufts compiled a 29-6 record and was selected for postseason tournaments three times. The 1986 team was ranked third among the nation's NCAA Division III schools.

"Martha Doherty is the best defensive player I've ever coached," said Carol Rappoli, Tufts field hockey lacrosse coach. "Her skill, size and tenacity made her an overwhelming player in both sports. In addition, her enthusiasm made her an outstanding leader in both sports."

A former field hockey, basketball and tennis captain at Winchester High, Martha is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Doherty, of 49 Oxford St.

Selection of the Sargent Award was made by a committee consisting of the sports information director, the faculty-athletic representative, the sports editor of the school newspaper and two members of the athletic department staff.

The Sachems Upset Concord

By DAVID MOORE

The Winchester High School lacrosse team had two exciting contests last week, with unexpected results in each game.

Tuesday the Sachems avenged an earlier season loss to Concord-Carlisle, upsetting the Patriots 8-6, but lost 5-4 in two overtimes to Billerica. Winchester had defeated the Indians earlier in the season.

Winchester's victory Tuesday was owed in part to a strategic move by coach Gene Bouley. Two weeks ago, Bouley, hoping to instill needed punch into the Sachem offense, switched junior Mike Murray from middle to attack.

The play worked. By the end of the afternoon, Murray had four goals and two assists. Fellow attacker James Campo added one goal and three assists of his own to help Winchester break a 6-6 tie early in the fourth period.

Once again, goalie Brian Gannon kept the opponent from mounting any serious counterattack during the Sachems' fourth-quarter surge.

It was only the Patriots' third loss of the season.

The Sachems were simply unable to put the stubborn Indians away Friday as a Billerica attackman threatened the Sachem defense for the game winner in double overtime.

Campo scored first for Winchester on a feed from George Nowell in the first period. After Billerica went up 2-1, Peter Mulvaney tied the score, assisted by Campo.

Goals by Campo and Nowell put Winchester on top 4-3, but with under three minutes remaining, the Indians sent the game into overtime.

Winchester was 7-7 after Friday's game.

Soccer Team Looks Like State Contender

The spring soccer season is in full bloom again and Winchester's under-16 boys' soccer team is looking like a state contender.

Having built a 5-0 record through the first half of the season, the "Kicks" found themselves playing in the semifinals of a state tournament last weekend at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

Winners from the state tournament go on to regional and national soccer-cup competition.

In the semifinals, Winchester faced Benifica Ludlow, an all-star team from the Springfield area generally considered Massachusetts' top youth team.

The Kicks, however, were not intimidated. Instead, they came out playing solid soccer, pushing Ludlow into a defensive posture for much of the first period.

Paul Erbafina played a strong midfield position, as Rob Kean, Jack O'Callaghan, Mike Fieleke and many others contributed to the attack.

A Vandy French goal off a Kenny Fowler feed put Winchester up 1-0 at the half.

Winchester scored again off a long run by Fowler, who fed Jason MacConkey for the goal. Minutes later, Winchester almost made it 3-0, but Curt Boulanger's shot veered wide.

As the half progressed, Ludlow found holes in the Kick defense, tied the score 2-2, and sent the game into overtime.

Ludlow scored the overtime's only goal.

Kicks coach Theo deVrieze is optimistic about his team.

"Right now," says deVrieze, "we look forward to a strong showing in the Needham tournament this weekend and to getting back to the second half of our regular season."

Caroline Twomey Is UConn Letter Winner

Caroline Twomey of Winchester, a dean's list history major with a minor in sociology, has been a two sport four-year letterwinner in field hockey and lacrosse. She is the only athlete in U. Conn. history to be named Most Valuable Player in two sports, in the same year.

As a standout on the hockey field, she became the first woman at Connecticut to be named a CFHCA (Collegiate Field Hockey Coaches Association) Division III All-American.

As captain of the 1985 squad, she was third in scoring (7-1-8) from the midfield position. She is the only Camel field hockey player to represent the Northeast four consecutive years at the USFHA National Tournament.

The senior holds the college field hockey records for most points in a career with 31 and most goals in a career with 26. She has also been a Northeast college all-star for four years, and was named a Regional All-American in 1985.

As captain of the 1986 lacrosse team, Twomey traveled to three post-season tournaments in her four-year tenure. As a defender, she has been named an All-New England player by (Please See LETTER - Page 16)

Winchester's Maria Montuori Two-Sport College Athlete

By DAVID MOORE

When we're sophomores in high school, the future and our role in it are usually hazy, if not downright baffling. "What kind of person am I?" each asks. "And what ought I to do with myself?"

And yet how easily can just the right encouragement from just the right person help us discover and nurture some talent to shape our lives for many years to come.

For Maria Montuori, the right person was Winchester High girls soccer coach Chris Scanlon, and the right encouragement was his assurance to his young athlete that "You can play soccer."

"I remember one practice when Chris took me aside and said in so many words that he thought I really had a future in soccer," says Montuori, who just finished her junior year at Boston College.

"That's when when I began to get a sense of my potential."

She got an even greater sense of it after she found out she had been named to the Boston Globe's All-Scholastic team that year. She would earn All-Scholastic honors in both her junior and senior years.

"I knew then that I could play at intense levels," Montuori confirms.

And play she has. Recruited by such women's soccer powers as North Carolina, George Mason, UConn, and Boston College, Montuori settled upon B.C.

As a sweepback and center halfback for the Eagles, she earned All-New England honors her sophomore and junior years.

Next fall Montuori, who has been just about All-Everything during her high school and college athletic careers, joins friends David Suvak and Steve Masiello in an All-Winchester lineup of B.C. soccer captains.

That's right. Next fall all B.C. varsity soccer captains will hail from Winchester.

"Winchester has an amazing

Maria Montuori

feeder system." Montuori explains of the Youth Soccer and BAYS leagues. "The parents also encourage the kids in high school."

Montuori, a political science major from what she describes as a "law-oriented family," is a two-sport college athlete. She has established herself as one of the brightest stars at a college fairly bursting with talented athletes.

At B.C.'s annual All-Sports Dinner April 28 at the Charles River Country Club, Montuori was awarded the prestigious Lyons Scholarship.

She describes big-time college sports as both a "big commitment and responsibility," but her involvements in sports extend beyond B.C.

She plays softball and soccer in various regional summer leagues and, during the cold winter months, helps old hoop mentor Joe DiSarcina with the Girls Youth Program.

Next summer she will work for the Winchester Recreation Department's Adventure Connection, organizing, among other activities, a sweltering hike up Mt. Washington.

Recently, Montuori's attention were riveted in Lawrenceville, N.J. Here, the region's best women soccer players competed for positions on a team to represent the Northeast at the Sports Festival next July in Houston.

From the competing regional teams a national team will be selected to tour various European countries. It is her greatest challenge.

"I have no idea what's going to happen," shrugged Montuori before her trip to New Jersey. "You just have to hope you go crazy on the field. It should be interesting."

College Marketing Aids Lakotas

College Marketing Group, Inc., of Winchester recently became aware of the plight of the Rosebud Sioux Tribe in South Dakota. Upon learning of their urgent need for clothing, employees responded with ten large boxes of used clothing and footwear, which according to the Sinte Gleska College Clothing Program, was immediately distributed to the tribal communities of Black Pipe and Butte Creek.

The Sinte Gleska College started its clothing program as a temporary effort to help Lakota people obtain proper winter clothing for the 1983 winter season.

FINE QUALITY DIAMONDS. A CUT ABOVE THE REST.

Diamonds of fine quality have a sparkle all their own. The more perfectly and precisely the facets are cut on a diamond, the greater the amount of light that passes through it. And the more brilliant the results. But cut is just one of the things to look for when selecting a diamond.

The quality of a diamond also depends on its Color, Clarity and Carat weight. Together, they're known as the 4Cs, the important characteristics that give a diamond its value and rare beauty. And to understand each of the 4Cs is to understand the difference between diamonds.

Color refers to the different gradations from exceptional white to yellowish. Clarity is the degree to which a diamond is free of interior and exterior flaws. Finally, there is Carat weight, the size of the diamond.

Fine quality diamonds simply look better. Let us show you our wide selection of fine quality diamond jewelry in settings designed to enhance the diamond. You'll discover the difference quality makes.

"We do all the basics that other drycleaners do, we just do them better."

In a world where quality workmanship and door to door service seem like relics of the past, Faulkner's Cleansing, located at 437 Franklin St., Melrose, offers both of these to area residents.

For more than 38 years Faulkner's Cleansing has served the cleaning needs of Winchester residents and has built up a reputation for quality workmanship that has made them a trusted name in drycleaning and has made many Winchester residents lifelong customers.

Faulkner's not only drycleans all the usual items including pants suits, dresses, and coats, and cleans and presses shirts, but they also go one step further — Faulkner's inspects every article of clothing and replaces buttons or sews seams at no charge.

"We do all the basics that other drycleaners do, we just do them better," explains owner/proprietor Francis Hardy.

As far as service is concerned Faulkner's Cleansing offers something we tend to associate with past decades — door to door service. At no extra charge Faulkner's will pick up and deliver your drycleaning to your house.

Every Tuesday and Thursday their truck goes through Winchester for convenient door to door service. There is no extra charge for this convenience and customers can arrange for free pick-up and delivery by calling Faulkner's Cleansing at 665-6300.

In addition to cleaning all the usual items, Faulkner's also cleans various household items including slipcovers, draperies, and bedspreads. They are also experts at cleaning both suede and leather garments.

And, if you don't have the space around your home or apartment to store seasonal garb, Faulkner's offers storage for anything from furs to wools. Box storage is available in which you receive a large box to store your clothes which are cleaned and pressed just prior to pickup, and ready to wear when you retrieve them by calling Faulkner's Cleansing several days in advance.

For quality workmanship and the customer satisfaction which has been the trademark of Faulkner's for more than 38 years, or for convenient door to door service at no extra charge, come into Faulkner's at 437 Franklin St. Melrose, or just pick up the phone and call them at 665-6300.

Faulkner's Cleansing is open Monday through Friday, 7-5, Saturdays, 8-5.

CLUB NOTES

Historical Society Hosts Fourth Historic House Tour

Saturday, May 10, was a glorious spring day, perfect for discovering some of Winchester's finest and most historically significant homes. Hosted by the Winchester Historical Society, this was the fourth Tour since the Bicentennial of 1975.

Not unlike house tours in other cities and towns, it was an event to educate residents, inform them and inspire them. As visitors left one house, the comment was overheard: "Now I have to go home and try the same paint ideas in my dining room."

The Society's committee was headed by Trudy Kirkendall, a Winchester Realtor, who has enjoyed discovering the beauty of Winchester's architecture and interior designs through her profession, and has also been a board member of the Historical Society for several years.

Other members of the committee were Judy Hoffman, Jean Twitchell, Mary Vitka, June Cannon, Anne Gustin, Meredith Wagner, Jane Graham, Patti Silverman, Marcia Wood and Eleanor Baldwin.

The job called for a committee and much coordination to provide a successful venture.

Houses were chosen from several time and style periods which traced Winchester's development since colonial times when it was part of Waterfield, and subsequently Woburn.

The earliest house was the Gardner-Swan House, built around 1770. Other houses included were the Deacon John Symmes House, (c. 1807), the Grafton House, (c. 1850), the George Pratt House, (c. 1886), the Oren Sanborn House (c. 1898), and the Winchester Boat Club, built in 1901.

Every house was decorated with several arrangements provided by the Winchester Home and Garden Club and the Winchester Garden Club. Many hostesses volunteered their time to welcome participants at the end of the tour. Boat Club hosts included Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Donahoe, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Price and Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Smith. Refreshments were provided by the culinary arts department of the Northeast Metropolitan Regional Vocational High School in Wakefield.

More than 100 people contributed time and effort to make the program successful. "It was truly a cooperative venture and a celebration of Winchester's continuing commitment to preserve its rich history of architecture and events," committee members said.

Town Meeting Approves First Site For Seven Units

rambled. Will the state allow construction on the Woburn Loop? Nobody knew for sure.

Do we have to approve seven units? At first, the housing authority said yes but later housing authority director Jerry Keefe said he would take a smaller number to state of officials "on bended knees."

Why are there no choices and why are "these presenting the solution presenting something less than the (seven-unit) solution?" as Town Meeting member David Mortensen phrased it.

Will the state really approve single-family units or only structures of two or more units? Different speakers had contradictory answers.

Three hours and thousands of words later, the meeting adjourned and Sullivan gathered town officials together for a "talking to."

Directions Clearer

By Monday, directions were much more clear although several decisions had to be postponed again, probably until at least the fifth week of Town Meeting.

In addition to firm recommendations for four sites to provide seven units, it was equally clear that another proposed site, on Hemingway st., would be dropped if the other four sites could work their way through various bureaucracies.

A New Beginning

By 7:30 p.m. Monday, all Town Meeting members had a copy of a threatening letter from the state Executive Office of Communities and Development (EOCD), setting a deadline for Winchester's approval of seven Section 705 housing units.

The deadline is either "the end of this Town Meeting" or "May 30, 1986," depending on whether one believes the fifth or seventh paragraph. The letter is signed by Joseph Flatley, assistant secretary of the EOCD.

To further set the scene, Town Manager Chad Maurer listed some of the state's discretionary funds that would be cut off if seven sites are not approved during the present Town Meeting.

The sum is close to $7 million, not including future grants for more elderly housing or for open space and conservation grants.

Maurer said Rep. Sherman Saltmarsh had agreed to try to get two state agencies, one which demands housing on town-owned land and another which prohibits housing on railroad rights of way, together to approve the Woburn Loop plan.

Maurer said the combined proposal for seven units "has the general agreement of three boards, although there is some dissent from members of the planning board."

He said the plan would "accomplish the objectives agreed by the selectmen, the housing authority and the planning board and comply with Executive Order 215," which mandates Section 705 family housing in every Massachusetts town.

Armed with a sense of starting over, Town Meeting members began to tackle the issues.

It was made clear that the Palmer st. site would now contain three housing units, an increase of one from previous plans, but Town Meeting would not need to vote on that site. Three of seven sites were settled, the meeting concluded.

But many questions remained. "Has the school committee okayed the Ambrose site?" was first.

Michael Ronayne, acting chairman of the school board, pointed out that a 5-1 in April turned down a request from the housing authority to declare 10,000 square feet of the Ambrose School lot "excess."

Ronayne also pointed out it was not a decision of the school committee to put the question on the Town Meeting warrant. He said the committee had not been sure in April if the state would even fund one-family units.

"As citizens of the town, school committee members won't rule out a response to the town's predicament, which is not of the school committee's making," Ronayne said.

Answering questions about differing lot sizes, Maurer said the goal of the housing authority had been to stay within the lot sizes required by zoning bylaws in each neighborhood.

School committee member Ed O'Connell argued against quick action, saying all school committee actions are taken in public after due notice of meetings is given. The Ambrose question should be brought back to a public meeting, he said.

"The way Town Meeting is moving, there is an opportunity for us to do that, even if the school committee has to have a special meeting," O'Connell added.

Precinct 8 Responds

Several speakers from Precinct 8, which includes both the Hemingway site and the Woburn Loop, took the floor next.

Though unanimously pleased that Hemingway st. was not on the new list of sites prepared by the three boards, they wondered what would happen if some of them — especially the Ambrose School site — could not be approved.

Margaret Schleicher asked if four units, including two at Hemingway st., could still be possible if another site is rejected.

She and other Town Meeting members learned that the plan was not to actually defeat the Hemingway site but to postpone it until it's determined if seven units can be built elsewhere.

Robert Frank made the case for postponing action on Article 17, dealing with the Hemingway site, not simply dismissing the article.

"This preserves our option. When the other sites are approved, then we can vote down Article 17," he said. Ann Matarese, chairman of the Citizens Advisory Committee to the housing authority, said the Hemingway site would "never have been proposed" if the committee had known the town promised not to build on a buffer zone around the former Noonan School.

Asked why he thought the state would approve single-family structures, Maurer pointed to a state document outlining state assistance programs. Under Section 705, the very housing program under discussion, the document states, "Local housing authorities use these funds to construct, buy, and/or rehabilitate single homes or small multi-unit (up to 24 units) structures."

Others were nervous about what the housing authority might do. "If the school committee approves Ambrose School, do we have assurance the housing authority will build these seven?" someone asked.

Keefe said it would. Amendments to later articles also assured the housing authority would actually take title to the land if its housing plan were approved and only if it planned to build a specific number of units on each site.

O'Connell returned to further explain the school committee's position. "The committee voted to take an inventory of all school-owned land to see if we had another site that could be helpful to the town's housing program," O'Connell said.

Ambrose Site

He was not encouraging about the Ambrose site, however. "It's part of one of the school department's most valuable properties," O'Connell said.

A motion to postpone consideration of the Hemingway st. site until after the Ambrose question is settled passed 92-61, putting subtle pressure on the school committee to change its mind.

Several speakers had an alternate plan: if Ambrose School is not a suitable site, perhaps four units could be built at Palmer st. Much later in the meeting, one speaker observed that the "scattered site" concept was in jeopardy if new projects are proposed for as many as four units.

"But is it possible to put four units there?" Ralph Johnson asked.

Nobody would say it was impossible but both Keefe, of the housing authority, and Town Engineer Jake Garcia said it would be very difficult.

Several speakers said Concord and Lexington had, at one time or another, fulfilled their state obligations to provide rental housing by renting apartments in Winchester, especially at Parkview Apartments.

Keefe admitted Lexington had done so in the past "but not in the last 12 months."

Clarence Borggaard and a few other speakers suggested town-owned land should not be used for housing.

"Get private land and let the state pay for it," he urged.

"Sure, we'll have to pay for it. But posterity will pay if we take park land," he declared.

The meeting recessed for coffee at 9:05 p.m., three units apparently in hand at Palmer st., action on one unit at Ambrose School returned to the school committee for reconsideration, and the Hemingway st. site "on hold" as a last resort.

After adjournment, speakers hastily denounced plans for a house on part of the Mullen Park land but Town Meeting approved the site anyway. Please see a related story in this issue.

EnKa Fair Draws Giant Town Crowds

The Jenks Senior Center, the Winchester Auxiliary Fire Department, the Winchester Scholarship Foundation and the Interfaith Education Committee.

The organization additionally provides "camperships," which gives selected youngsters a summer at camp. Last year, 20 food baskets were prepared for the needy at Thanksgiving and Christmas.

Funds are also generated by the EnKa Exchange, a thrift shop on Route 38 which sells gently used clothing for children and adults.

"We've already started work on next year's fair," reports Johansen. Joyce Cummings will chair the 52nd spectacle and has begun committee assignments.

"I wish the EnKa Fair came every week," sobbed an excited nine-year old in a wrinkled, ketchup-covered Brownie suit.

"It's even better than my birthday and Christmas together!"

What To Visit

Peter Rabbit: Lives On Burgess

Peter Rabbit lives! In fact he is a native New Englander with a Cape Cod heritage rooted in the fields and woods of old Sandwich.

The mythical rabbit of storybook lore is one of the creations of author and naturalist, Thornton W. Burgess.

An imaginative naturalist of international reputation, Burgess produced more than 170 books and 15,000 stories in a writing career that spanned five decades. In print and on the radio, his mother West Wind and Peter Rabbit stories have provided not only beloved storytime companions, but animal teachers as well.

The Thornton W. Burgess Museum occupies an historic 1756 house in the historic center of Sandwich. The two-story clapboard building overlooks picturesque Shawme Pond.

The yard of the quaint museum is often filled with flocks of birds and waterfowl. Green-headed mallards, Canada geese, merganser and Peking duck wander from the shores of the pond to welcome visitors.

The sign outside, a cutout and hand-carved Peter Rabbit, smiling on one side, bobbing his tail on the other, is charming and modest. But it is effective enough to draw more than 60,000 visitors to the Museum each year.

"Many adults remember the stories from their childhood," said Robert T. McMaster. "They come to visit with their children and grandchildren."

Burgess wrote from 1911 to his death in 1965, said McMaster. His works became widely known in the 1940s and 1950s.

On exhibition is a changing array of items from the largest known collection of Burgess writings, first edition books, original Harrison Cady illustrations from Burgess books, and mementoes and photos from Burgess' life and career.

A current exhibit highlights the "animal teachers" of Burgess stories.

Grandfather Frog, Buster Bear, Peter Rabbit and others are depicted in puzzles, toys, cutouts, dolls and games from the Museum's extensive collection of antique toys and memorabilia.

Frequent open houses and special events, all tuned to natural history education, replay the Burgess theme of education through entertainment. Upcoming events include nature walks on Saturdays.

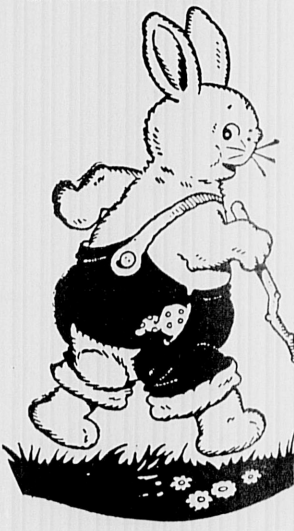

Two miles from the Museum, along Route 6-A east from Sandwich, Burgess' old briar patch has become a 57-acre town conservation center dedicated to his memory. The area is secluded yet accessible from the highway.

The 150-year old Green Briar house, headquarters of the Green Briar Nature Center, offers indoor exhibits that include salt and fresh water aquariums, displays on native American artifacts and a natural history exhibit on owls.

Outside, visitors can view wildflower gardens, three herb gardens and try several nature trails. Self-guided maps are provided.

The Thornton W. Burgess Society also owns and operates the Green Briar Jam Kitchen adjacent to the Center.

For over 80 years the kitchen has used 19th-century methods and a solar cooking process to make jams, jellies and relishes. Classes are conducted in basketweaving.

Scheduled are an animal storytime program at 1:30 p.m. and a small animal rodent race at 2 p.m.

sun-drying of fruits, herb drying and jam making. The public is invited to tour the kitchen starting in mid-May.

Peter Rabbit lives here, too. He resides on the Nature Center grounds in a custom-built rabbit hutch with several rabbit relatives.

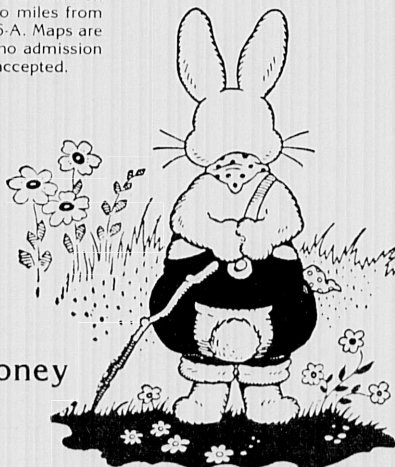

The Thornton W. Burgess Museum and Green Briar Nature Center and Jam Kitchen are open daily 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Sundays 1 to 4 p.m. now through December.

The Museum is located in Sandwich Center on Water st. (Route 130).

The Nature Center is found on Discovery Hill rd. two miles from the museum on rte. 6-A. Maps are available. There are no admission fees. Donations are accepted.

Summer Hit Comes To Gloucester

Park Your Car In Harvard Yard Warm, Wonderful

Review

Israel Horowitz's Park Your Car In Harvard Yard, in its world premiere at the Gloucester Stage Company prior to Broadway, is a gentle, loving, moving and absorbing drama.

It focuses on Gloucester's toughest high school teacher in his twilight years and a former student — one he flunked in English and in Music Appreciation — whom he hires for a live-in housekeeper. How they learn to cope with each other, to appreciate and understand one another, and to face the truths of their own limitations, forms the spine of this warm and tender tale.

Directed with stunning insight by Grey Cattel Johnson and performed brilliantly by William Sharp as Jacob Brackish and Dossy Peabody as Kathleen Hogan, the two-character play, part of Horowitz's Gloucester Trilogy along with last season's Henry Lumper and the forthcoming North Shore Fish in August, further substantiates why the author was selected by theatre critics last week for the fourth annual Elliot Norton Award.

Park Your Car In Harvard Yard was workshopped in 1982 for four SRO performances at GSC and again in 1984 at the Manhattan Theatre Club in New York City, starring Burgess Meredith and Ellen Burstyn, who will recreate their roles on Broadway late this spring.

Action takes place at octogenarian Brackish's home in East Gloucester over the course of a year, from one winter to the next.

Brackish is a self-centered, inflexible, feisty old man with six months to a year to live, content in the century-old family homestead his father bought at age 22. He is an enigma in Gloucester, a Yankee Jewish bachelor. Old age has resulted in partial deafness and reliance on a hearing aid.

Kathleen is a 40 year-old Irish Catholic widow, childless, plain and insecure, with limited skills. As she goes about her household chores, Brackish constantly complains about Kathleen's improper use of antecedents and is occasionally unthinking and cruel in his treatment.

During his 45 years of teaching, which he loved dearly ("Why did I need children? ... I had thousands of them!"), Brackish never wavered from his lofty and irreversible principles and standards. Since he also failed Kathleen's husband, her mother and father, a bitter Kathleen places all the ills that befell her family at his doorstep: keeping her from a scholarship; limiting her husband and her father's job opportunities to the strenuous work of a lumper, causing a fatal heart attack for her husband and saddling her father with work he hated so much that he made the life of Kathleen's mother unbearable.

Brackish loves classical music and Kathleen, to irritate him, keeps switching the radio dial to rock music.

Indeed, most of the humor comes from the pitchman on the classical program who is forever begging for cash donations. The radio station has no heat, the metal seat he is sitting on is freezing, and he eventually ends up with what sounds like pneumonia.

During a most effective scene, Brackish reads of an old classmate's death, Nobby, who beat him out as class valedictorian, and continued his education at both Harvard and Yale, pushing the obsessed Brackish on to a Ph.D. at Harvard.

Ruefully, and with a touch of bitterness, Brackish reflects, "Now I'm the oldest living man in Gloucester, Mass. ... I won't."

When Kathleen discovers that Brackish's deafness is a ruse, she insists upon a repeat exam in Music Appreciation. She also forces him to reveal the circumstances of his love affair with her mother.

Now 84 years old, "half dead, half blind, male neutered," and far more mellow since Kathleen's arrival, Brackish reflects that he could never leave Gloucester. "... Gloucester born, Gloucester bred, Gloucester dead." He counsels Kathleen, "Don't let your memories be anything but happy. ... otherwise they cripple you! It's terrible when you outlive the ones you love."

At the play's end, Kathleen confesses reverently, "Thanks Mr. Brackish. ... Jacob, I'll always be grateful."

And so are we, to Mr. Horowitz. After tightening the first act, the show should be letter-perfect.

Park Your Car In Harvard Yard continues through June 8 at The Blackburn Tavern, 2 Main st., Gloucester. Call 281-4099 for ticket information.

American Repertory Theatre is receiving rave reviews for Olympian Games, based on stories from Ovid's classical Greek poetry, Metamorphoses. It runs in repertory with Jean Genet's The Balcony at Loeb Drama Center in Cambridge.

Theater Workshop

Boston College will offer a Summer Theater Workshop (ED32901) for three credits (graduate or advanced undergraduate) from June 24 to July 31, Tuesdays and Thursdays from 6:15 to 9:15 p.m.

Designed for the non-professional, this workshop combines theoretical information and "hands-on" experience in the various arts and crafts of the theater: acting, directing, design, costuming and make-up, and theater technology. The program affords opportunities to utilize the state-of-the-art facilities and equipment in the Boston College Robsham Theater Arts Center.

The acting exercises concentrate on the development of observation, sense memory and characterization. Discussions also include selecting and casting the school/community play, designing and building sets and costumes on a limited budget, backstage organization, and basic directing techniques.

For further information contact Dr. J. Paul Marcoux, Boston College Robsham Theater Arts Center, Chestnut Hill, 02167 or call 552-4614.

New Dance Works Staged

Two contemporary views of life highlight the MJT Dance Company's tenth annual Concert Showcase, with performances at 8 p.m. May 30 through 31, and at 3 p.m. June 1, at the Tower Auditorium, Mass. College of Art, 621 Huntington ave.

The premieres include Earth To Pamela, a new work by guest choreographer Pamela Day, and Vignettes, a joint collaboration between artistic director Margie J. Topf and musician/composer Billy Novick.

General admission is $10 for adults and $5 for children, students and senior citizens.

A champagne reception and buffet follows the Sunday performance at the Copley Society, 158 Newbury st., from 5 to 8 p.m. Tickets for the reception and concert are $20, or $12 for the reception alone. Reservations are necessary. Call the box office at 482-0351 for information and reservations or write MJT Dance Company, P.O. Box 108, Watertown, 02272.

Monadnock Music Comes To Boston

Virtuoso pianist Russell Sherman and the Monadnock Music Orchestra perform all five Beethoven piano concerti at Jordan Hall as an encore to last summer's concerti in Peterborough, New Hampshire. Concerti one, two and three will be performed May 22 at 8 p.m., with concerti four and five being performed May 29 along with Beethoven's The Consecration of the House overture.

Sherman, a native of New York, gave his first recital at the age of fifteen in New York City's Town Hall, followed by appearances at Carnegie Hall and with the New York Philharmonic under Leonard Bernstein. His early successes were followed by a brilliant teaching career before his return to the concert stage in 1975. He has since appeared with most of the major American orchestras and toured the country in a variety of recital and solo appearances.

Tickets are on sale at the Jordan Hall box office.

To charge tickets call 876-7777. Prices for single concerts are $10, $14 and $16.50. The combined ticket price for both concerts is $30, $27 and $18.

Humor Is Celli's Farewell To Fans

Tom Celli, artistic director of Theatre by the Sea, will be giving a farewell performance to the Seacoast area May 31 at 8 p.m. at the Portsmouth Music Hall with the show, We Have With Us Tonight.

The production, directed by Paul Mroczka, is a one-man show based on the writings of Canada's foremost humorist and lecturer, Stephen Leacock.

Most popular between 1910 and 1940, Stephen Leacock was one of the finest storytellers and most sought-after humorous lecturers in the United States, Canada and

What About Art? By Meredith Fife Day

Black, curved trees and their myriad branches are the big foreground events in Cathleen Daley's pastel, Winterlight. They anchor the vibrating vertical lines of new growth, shapes of warm wheat colors, and the turquoise sky beyond, particularizing nature to a sense of time and place.

Nature's Spirit Evoked

Cathleen Daley's works on exhibit at Belmont's Habitat gallery are characterized by vigorous, lovely handling of line, quiet color surprises and, most notably, "the spirit of nature."

Formerly staff artist of the New England Wild Flower Society, Daley continues to look at the natural environment with a trained and caring eye.

"The spirit of nature is a constant theme in my art work whether the image is realistic or abstract — landscape or still life," she explains.

Two still life pastels of the artist's pencils, brushes and tools carry associations of a horizon intersected by vertical tree trunks and branches.

In one of the still lifes, a postcard of a Millet landscape is tacked to the wall. The homage also echoes the works' vertical-horizontal construction and, most likely, tells of a source of inspiration for Daley.

Although the real power of Millet's gentle works lies in the dignity and integrity of his depiction of simple, working people, there is a beauty and substance in them related to nature observed with a kind of spiritual identification and involvement.

Daley, too, identifies and involves herself with nature.

"Nature is the vehicle for my thoughts, memories and imagination; thus each picture functions as a personal narrative," she states.

At her best, Daley, like Millet, gives line an emotional and descriptive weight that both services the subject and contributes to the works' content.

Occasionally, the repeated vertical lines that give such fresh, brisk texture to ground areas or brush between foreground tree trunks, are used in the sky, becoming too flat and decorative within the context of the work.

Even when the intention appears more toward abstraction, as in Marshwood, the sky's linear texture does not make the visual sense of Daley's otherwise imaginative, versatile use of line.

Most frequently her line follows the activity and lyricism of the natural forms it describes. Branches that might appear unwieldy and chaotic are given visual order by Daley's linear emphasis and shape distillation.

The pastels she uses seem especially compatible with the artist's sensitivity to line. By leaving the mark intact instead of "blending" areas of chalk, she is able to get crisp color.

That color, on the grey or middle-valued paper, is absorbed enough to keep the strong pigment from looking artificial, while the crisp lines keep it from looking "mushy."

Daley has the kind of color control that makes moving across the big peachy-white land mass in Marsh At Six to the chartreuse bands beyond, to the black trees profiled on the horizon, a natural and lively, if surprising, progression.

The unifying elements seem here and in all Daley's works to be a genuine interest in nature's forms and an identification with and response to the world about her.

The purpose of her art, Daley states, "is as much an expression of a sense of place as it is a sense of being."

The exhibit of Winchester resident and School of the Museum of Fine Arts graduate Cathleen Daley's work will remain in Habitat's gallery through May.

What To Do

The Big Apple Circus clowns will be a big attraction when the Big Top is pitched May 29 on Northern Avenue. The European-style circus, presented by the Children's Museum, will run through June 15.

The Big Apple: A World-Class Circus Comes To Town

By Gary Pfitzer

A new circus is coming to town! Starting next week, families can experience the excitement and artistry of jugglers, tumblers, trapeze experts, and horseback riders — in seats no more than 35 feet from the ring.

It's the Big Apple Circus, sponsored by the Boston Children's Museum, and it runs from May 29 through June 15 under a big top to be raised near Anthony's Pier 4.

Witness the antics of clowns Gordon, Grandma, and Mr. Stubs. Watch Gordon as he unravels a roll of toilet paper and keeps it all aloft with the aid of a blow dryer.

Count the number of bricks a woman throws to her husband to stack up under him while he is balancing on his hands.

Grip the edge of the seat and gaze up at a ballerina on the high wire, going up on her toes, doing splits, and dancing with a partner.

Be close enough to all the action — smell the sawdust and see the sweat on the faces of the performers!

An emphasis on intimacy makes the Big Apple Circus unique. "There is no nosebleed section like in the Garden," says Laura Peet, Public Relations, at the Children's Museum. "You don't have to squint to see the performers. You can really concentrate on what's going on."

It's hard not to get totally involved in the circus — with The Flying Gaonas trapeze artists soaring over the heads of the audience or with Anna May the Elephant almost close enough to be touched.

The fact that Big Apple is a one-ring circus rather than the standard three-ring adds to the intimacy and audience involvement.

"You don't have to worry about getting whiplash looking from ring to ring," says Peet.

The one-ring circus is a European concept, Peet says. "The Big Apple Circus is dedicated to the circus the way it started in Europe, even the Roman Empire. It doesn't rely on glitz and glamor."

This spring, however, the Circus has an American twist, as the Big Apple pays tribute to the first circus performers in America, with an emphasis on equestrians, high-wire artists, and acrobats.

Equestrienne Katja Schumann, for example, uses six Arabian horses to perform The Courier, one of the oldest and most dangerous of equestrian acts and one which no more than two dozen equestrians have presented a complete version of since 1827.

This marks the first year that the Big Apple Circus has come to Boston. The bright blue big top will be raised on Northern Avenue, across from Anthony's Pier 4 Restaurant.

The Children's Museum has chosen the Circus as its annual fundraiser, replacing the Haunted House.

Like the Museum, the Big Apple Circus is a non-profit organization. More specifically, it is the performing arm of The New York School for Circus Arts, the first professional school in America to offer a comprehensive training program in circus arts.

While many acts join the Circus from Europe, graduates of the School for Circus Arts can be found among the clowns, jugglers, and acrobats, says Peet.

Those who have trouble equating the circus with theatre may be surprised to learn that the Big Apple Circus is a winner of an Obie Award for outstanding achievement in theatre.

The Circus, like a play, is finely crafted.

"From start to finish, it's very much a complete performance. Even when they're changing equipment, there's something going on. It's all very carefully orchestrated," says Peet.

The clowns involve the audience like the characters in a play.

Says Peet of Grandma the Clown, "Grandma is the composite character of a Grandma. She's very recognizable. That's why she's so appealing to children."

Ticket prices range from $5.50 to $12.50 for weekday morning performances and from $7.50 to $14.50 for weekend and weekday evening performances.

Groups of 20 or more receive a ten percent discount on all weekday performances, with a special rate for school groups on weekday mornings and matinees.

Tickets for the Opening Night Benefit, Thursday, May 29, are $25 for center grandstand seats and $15 for side grandstand.

Tickets may be purchased at the Bostix Booth at Faneuil Hall and at all Ticketron outlets.

Call Teletron at 720-3434 or the Circus Box Office at 350-7757 for more information.

Peet says that response to the Circus has been enthusiastic so far, but that good seats are still available.

Don't let the show go on without a look inside the big top tent!

England. Unsurpassed in wit and wisdom, We Have With Us Tonight is an ideal choice by which Tom can reflect his appreciation for, and can properly say goodbye to, the faithful theatregoers who have enjoyed him on area stages for the past nineteen years.

We Have With Us Tonight, The Conjuror's Revenge, Buggam Grange, A Good Old Ghost Story, and 'How To Live To Be 200, are a few of the selections of the evening. SPECIFY WHAT STAYS OR GOES WITH A HOUSE

The Purchase & Sale contract may be the most important document in the sale of a home. In order to save a lot of aggravation, post-sale bickering, and possible law suits, the gray area of which items will stay with the house and which the Seller will take away should be spelled out specifically in the contract.

Know the difference between chattels which can be picked up and moved without leaving nail holes, and fixtures which have been attached with the intention of their becoming part of the real estate. The Buyer expects fixtures to remain with the property.

Two commonly troublesome items are the TV antenna and fancy lighting fixtures; people form strong emotional attachments to chandeliers.
Rather than get bogged down over such matters, simply make sure your offer stipulates that all fixtures remain except specific ones you're willing to up to the Seller.

Audi Remanufactured Parts. Built Like New. Priced For Less.

Remanufactured parts are better than "rebuilt" or "reconditioned" parts. They may even be better than original parts since technical advances are often incorporated into the remanufacturing process.

Each unit - alternator, water pump or one of over 300 other parts - is disassembled, cleaned and tested to exacting standards. During reassembly, parts that do not meet these standards are replaced. Then the assembly is tested again to make sure it works as well as the original in every way.

Our remanufactured parts carry the same 6-month/6,000-mile limited warranty as new Audi Parts. The only thing that isn't like new is the price.

Selectman Shows Films Of Illicit Activity At Fells, Says It Threatens Water Supply

By GEORGE DERRINGER

Plans for increased recreational use of the Middlesex Fells Reservation, which surrounds Winchester's major water supply, met strong opposition from selectman Frank Sopper Tuesday night.

Vigorously attacking the plan, announced in The Star in April, Sopper brought a videotape he had made of trespassers in the reservoir area on Mother's Day and last Sunday. From the photos, it was hard to imagine how recreation could be increased in the area, short of making the Fells precisely what Sopper fears most—a state park.

"It's time for this board to make a firm commitment to protecting the reservoirs that supply more than 50 percent of this town's water," Sopper said as he prepared his videotape for showing.

"The reservoirs are violated from all sides — casual violators and

"Worst would be the new interpretive services division of the MDC, the Metropolitan District Commission. It's very difficult to find out just what they're doing, but for the past four or five years they've been making grandiose plans for a state park," Sopper said.

"The fact is that a state park and reservoirs are not compatible. The water is the reservoirs is what you get in your house, except for the addition of chlorine and a little fluoride."

"There is no screening, no filtering, no purifying," he said. Pointing to a national outbreak of water-borne diseases, Sopper insisted the public could not be allowed access to the area "until we do something about filtration and protecting the people of the town."

Sopper said a lot of dogs swim in the reservoir and his videotapes proved the point. "I don't like that," he said.

Complicating matters, he admitted, is the fact that small portions of the reservoir may actually stick into land owned by the MDC, not the Town of Winchester.

His speech complete, Sopper turned on the video machine. It showed evidence of what Sopper called "a cult that holds ceremonies between the South and Middle Reservoirs."

The evidence included several blankets and dozens of beer cans. Sopper said seven fences at judicious spots would eliminate many trespassers but noted one fence repaired between his two visits this spring. Dirt bikers had broken the new fence, Sopper said.

Apparently trying to avoid trouble, Sopper ran the tape in "fast forward" when Winchester residents, including some walking their dogs, were shown. (Please see SOPPER, page 20)

School Committee Gives Up Probable Site For Housing

By MAUREEN QUINLAN

School committee members voted unanimously Tuesday night to release the Ambrose School land as excess to the Winchester Housing Authority after an unexpectedly subdued debate.

The next session of town meeting June 5 will face a full-fledged debate on whether to consider the land as another site for state-mandated low-to moderate-income housing.

In the first round of voting, member Michael Ronayne abstained, Edward F. O'Connell voted against releasing the land and William Jervy, Alice McCarter and Donna Brandt Landry voted in favor of releasing the land.

In a reconsideration, O'Connell called for a second vote saying, "I don't want my colleagues to go before town meeting divided," said O'Connell. The vote was unanimous.

Committee members voiced their anger and frustrations to about 50 or 60 residents Tuesday night, but audience participation was minimal. A prepared speech by Jervy set the pattern for the evening's discussion.

Jervy seemed to temper the audience and set the pace for a relatively short-lived and peaceful debate. He opened the discussion with a prepared speech accusing the Winchester Housing Authority of acting irresponsibly and unprofessionally.

"This kind of town management is not acceptable... their behavior has been inexcusable," said Jervy. "It infuriates me," he said, that a member of the housing authority told him, "I never wanted housing in Winchester."

Jervy faulted the authority for failing to come before the school committee earlier to discuss possible sites and deemed its process "shoddy."

"They have violated and abused their public trust," he said. Members of the housing authority were present but did not respond to Jervy's accusations.

"My feeling is the town has placed ed us in a precarious situation," said Ronayne. He explained with two sites left to vote on at town meeting, Hemingway st. and Ambrose School land, the pressure and responsibility was placed on the wrong board.

During the town meeting, a vote for Hemingway st. land was postponed pending the school committee's vote on Ambrose, said Ronayne.

One solution, said Ronayne, might have been "more choices (for housing sites) on the warrant."

"If we didn't do it, release the land, we would have faced a lot of problems. I don't think town meeting would have passed the Hemingway site."

"I think the state means business. These are the last two sites for consideration by town meeting," Ronayne said. The state's to withdraw discretionary funds concerned him greatly.

About five weeks ago, when the housing authority first raised the issue at a school committee meeting, members voted against releasing part of the Ambrose School land. One reason cited was the concern of the committee that it would lose jurisdiction over the land for good.

According to Ronayne, if the committee releases the land and it is not used, the board of selectmen regain power. In order to get ownership back, the school committee would have to bring the issue before town meeting.

A couple of voices from the audience argued the land not be released. One man called it an "outright abortion" to Cambridge st. while another woman said the land was simply unbuildable.

Mark S. Lombardi pleaded with members, "Don't back into it. It's not the school committee's problem."

In other action, board members heard a program review by Harriet Nelson, coordinator of home economics in Winchester schools. The review included an extensive slide (Please see SCHOOL, page 20)

Minimum Teacher Pay Rejected

By GEORGE DERRINGER

Town meeting members resoundingly defeated setting a minimum teacher wage of $18,000 per year during their meeting May 22.

Michael Ronayne, acting chairman of the school committee, argued that Winchester should accept the provisions of a state law setting the minimum wage but was the only member of the committee to speak. Town meeting members strenuously opposed the article after they learned that endorsing the state law would mean Winchester would have to abide by any future increases in the minimum, even if the legislature did not vote to fund the increases with state money.

Ronayne said only one teacher is paid less than $18,000 but the town should accept the state minimum "to make a positive statement" and should "join the list of communities in the commonwealth" making that statement about the value of education.

Finance committee chairman Eric Bradley, however, said the committee recommended unfavorable action because adoption "may jeopardize the future financial independence of the town."

"The law is likely to be amended sometime in the future and the state will be mandating our budget," Bradley said.

Wade Welch, chairman of the selectmen, agreed and compared the measure to a bill giving policemen funds for "self-improvement programs."

Welch said many towns had trouble putting a cap on "self-improvement" expenses.

Ronayne said school committee members failed to see the risk in accepting the state measure but several speakers declared their support of home rule while praising the Winchester school system.

Town counsel Doug Randall pointed out that the bill has two aspects.

One provides state funding for increased costs caused by the minimum. (Please see TEACHER, page 20)

A Time To Mourn

Antoinette Wippermann, mother of 16-year-old Michael Wippermann, who was killed in a car crash Jan. 19 on Main St., grieves during a tree planting ceremony May 21 at the town common. A memorial fund for Wippermann and Paul Augello, 16, who was also killed in the crash, had been set up at Shawmut Bank. Donations may be sent to account number 60-446-087-1. (Paul Drake Photo)

Town Approves Baptist Condominium Proposal

By GEORGE DERRINGER

Winchester took the highly unusual step of rezoning part of an existing building, the First Baptist Church, during its town meeting last Thursday.

Despite some opposition from some neighbors worried about greater shortage of parking, most speakers called a plan to convert part of the building to 11 condominium units "creative" and "innovative."

Ralph Swanson, moderator and chairman of the church's board of deacons, traded jobs with town meeting moderator John Sullivan while explaining the church's arrangement with developer Rene LeMarr.

Swanson said the congregation, which has been shrinking in recent years, had made the painful decision to sell part of the building. In return, the developer will remodel, renovate and modernize the church building.

"The Baptists have been in Winchester 135 years and we believe the church has served the town well," Swanson said.

He said the congregation does not wish to abandon its building but is unable to maintain all of it. For five or six years, the congregation has explored solutions.

Unanimously, the congregation finally voted to cut the church in half and sell the portion closest to Washington Street to a developer for condominiums.

Swanson said the town will benefit as well from new landscaping, no changes in the building's appearance, an increased tax base and 11 more housing units which will be marketed primarily to the elderly.

The church, in return, will get a renovated structure that is energy-efficient and easy to maintain without having to move. "Please help us stay. We believe this plan will be enjoyed by the church, the town and you, our neighbors," Swanson said.

When renovations are complete, the church will have about 12,100 square feet and the condo units 17,900. The plan must still go before the zoning board of appeals, primarily to get variances from the setback requirements.

"There's obviously no setback at all when the property line goes through the middle of a building," it was pointed out.

A light moment came as Swanson read a statement from attorney Paul Amico while an architect's conception of the projected was displayed on the screen.

"Notice the flowering trees in front," Swanson intoned. Moderator John Sullivan pointed at parked cars.

Predictably, when Swanson noted spaces for 20 parked cars, Sullivan pointed at trees.

Amico's statement noted that "very little money" would be exchanged. One-bedroom condo units will sell for about $150,000 and two-bedroom units for about $250,000, he said.

Clarence Borggaard quickly endorsed the proposal but planning board member Dan Chane surprised the meeting when he said the board thought approval "would condone an illegal use."

Later, Chane granted that town meeting approval of rezoning would make the "illegal use" perfectly legal, provided the board of appeals granted variances.

Wade Welch, chairman of the selectmen, said a majority of selectmen recommended the plan, although they were unable to find any precedent for rezoning part of a building.

"One concern of the selectmen is that the proposal might go through and in later years, if the Baptists move, we might have a serious problem with re-use of the church's portion," Welch said. But the selectmen still supported the plan, he said.

"The church has kept faith with the town," Welch said. "And the developer has offered a 707 rental-assistance unit to the town on a three-year lease basis. That's the developer's second innovative proposal."

The Rev. Paul Johnson, a Winchester resident who leads a Woburn congregation, said it would not be right to divide a church building which Christians had sacrificed to build. "We are saying to God: This is Later, Chane granted that town

Town Meeting In The Home Stretch

Winchester's annual town meeting is in recess until Thursday, June 5, when the ninth evening session is scheduled at the high school auditorium.

One major housing issue remains to be settled. Although six of the seven units required for Section 765 low- and moderate-income housing have been approved, one more unit must be found, according to the state's ultimatum.

Two sites on the town meeting warrant are still to be considered: one a portion of the Ambrose School lot and another on Hemingway Street.

Also still to be considered is an article that would give selectmen authority to apply for state funds to build "an off-street parking facility" between Shore Road and Winchester Place. A related article would authorize the town to take the property by eminent domain.

Collective bargaining agreements with town and school department employees are still to be completed and acted upon as part of Article 3.

Finally, articles to establish new committees and to be sure the town has stayed within the limits of the Proposition 2 1/2 tax limitation law.

Police To Monitor Prom Drinking

In keeping with its long-standing policy regarding teenage alcohol abuse, the Winchester Police Department is taking a firm stand on alcohol and parties this prom season, according to Sgt. James R. Pierce.

The department will seek court action against anyone, parent or otherwise, who supplies, serves or allows alcohol to be served to anyone under the age of 21.

Police warn charges that can be brought against them are:

1.) Contributing to the delinquency of a minor. The charge carries a sentence up to $500 fine and up to one year in the House of Correction.

2.) Supplying/procurng alcohol for someone under the age of 21 years. This charge carries a sentence of up to $1,000 and up to six months in the House of Correction.

Parents should also be aware that there is a tremendous danger of liability for them if someone is injured or killed and the person responsible was found to have served alcohol at a party given by them.

Parks Faces OUI Charge

Harry C. Parks, 43, of 7 South Gateway was arraigned Tuesday morning in the Fourth District Court in Woburn on charges of operating under the influence of alcohol.

Monday night at about 6:30 p.m., Winchester police inspector Barry J. Donaghy observed a 1972 red Oldsmobile convertible traveling west of Forest st. and crossing the solid yellow double line. He stopped the car on Forest st. by Churchill rd.

Donaghy administered sobriety tests to Parks and arrested him for operating under the influence. He was later bailed on personal recognizance at 7:45 p.m.

The case was continued to June 10 for the appearance of his lawyer.

Man Faces Drug Charges

Mark J. Augello, 23, of 19 Fairmount st. was arrested for possession of class B and D substances believed to be cocaine and marijuana.

At about 1 a.m. May 24 police on foot patrol observed someone throw a beer can out of a car window. A black Chevrolet Caprice stopped at the corner of Main st. and Skillings rd. near Purity Supreme at a traffic light.

Police pulled the car over and found a yellow plastic cooler with beer and a compartment pipe with a brownish black sticky substance. They also found a silver-colored metal cigarette type case in the front seat on the passenger side with a metal straw "caked with a white residue" believed to be cocaine, according to police.

Police arrested Augello and took him to Winchester station. He was later bailed.

The passenger, a 23-year-old Harvard st. resident was summonsed to appear in court on litter charges.

Augello was scheduled to appear in the Fourth District Court in Woburn today.

REAL ESTATE TODAY

Ann Blackham C.R.B.

TENANCY IN COMMON

You intend to purchase investment property with other investors, however, you would like your share to be inherited by your family at your death. What is the best form of ownership? The answer is tenancy in common.

A tenancy in common is the co-ownership of a single piece of real estate in which two or more owners hold separate title to the same property, each separate estate being inheritable. Unlike joint ownership, upon the death of a tenant (owner), his interest passes to his heirs and not to the surviving tenant or tenants.

The interests in a tenancy in common need not be acquired at the same time or by the same deed or conveyance, and need not be equal in size. The result is that each tenant in common holds an individual part of the whole and that no tenant in common holds the whole as in the joint tenancy.

Each tenant in common may dispose of his interest by deed or will and upon death, his interest passes by law to his heirs.

Town Approves Woburn Selectmen Tackle Old Issues Loop For Duplex Site

By GEORGE DERRINGER

Six down, one to go. Winchester town meeting members provided a place for two more low- and moderate-income housing units during the eighth session of the spring town meeting Thursday night, bringing the total to six units.

State officials from the Executive Office of Communities and Development say they will cut off state "discretionary" funds for many Winchester projects if the town does not provide places for seven units by the end of the current town meeting.

Thursday, town meeting members almost unanimously agreed to put a duplex on the Woburn Loop, just south of Cross St. on the abandoned railroad right-of-way.

Added to three units proposed on land owned by the Winchester Housing Authority on Palmer St. and one unit on the northeastern corner of the Mullen Park property on Lockeland Rd., the new units leave the town just one short of the goal.

One final unit, a single-family house, is recommended at the corner of Cambridge St. and High St. on land owned by the school department. The school committee was to consider that site again Tuesday night.

Moderator John Sullivan opened Thursday's session with a prayer that seemed directed toward the first order of business. "Lord, if we err, may we err in the direction of the less fortunate," he prayed.

Moments later, the town began consideration of the Woburn Loop site, which must still get approval from the state because the department of transportation opposes permanent structures on an abandoned railroad right-of-way.

Jerry Keefe, executive director of the housing authority, said the structure could be built toward the Main St. side of the property and still leave the right-of-way for future use. The entire lot measures about 85 feet on the Cross St. side by 135 feet south on the Woburn Loop.

"We feel confident that, with town meeting support, we can prevail upon Transportation Secretary Anthony Salvecci to allow us to build a duplex at the site," Keefe said.

"When it's obvious the entire town, including the selectmen, planning board, housing authority and town meeting, supports the site, I think this vote will get the job done," Keefe said.

State Rep. Sherman "Whip" Saltmarsh will take the town's request to the secretary of transportation, Keefe added.

The entire town gave overwhelming support, voting 118-3 to re-zone the Woburn Loop lot for the duplex structure. But Clarence Borggaard first voiced his objections.

Borggaard has frequently proposed using the Loop as a northbound road to Woburn and changing Main St. to a southbound-only road. "I'm opposed to any proposal that shuts off the 80-foot Loop corridor," he said.

"Imagine what the center would be like without the Skillings Rd. bypass," he said.

Admitting the obvious, Borggaard declared, "I expect to lose but I'm used to that." Borggaard also objected to construction of new low- and moderate income subsidized housing units. "Most of us don't live in houses that good," he said.

Borggaard's position was answered by Mike Connolly, who said all of Precinct 8 supports the Woburn Loop site.

A second article, giving the town permission to convey title to the property to the housing authority, passed with any town meeting's most unusual counted vote. There were 138 in favor and zero against.

Next in the town's struggle to fulfill its contract with the state to provide seven units of housing would be the seventh unit, on the Ambrose School property, if the school committee allows it.

Two articles that would allow housing on a lot between Canal and Hemingway streets, next to the former Noon School property, are not recommended by town boards and are vigorously opposed by speakers from Precinct 8.

Although still to be considered, those articles will be routinely dismissed if the Ambrose School site is available.

Town meeting will resume at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, June 5, at the high school auditorium as it enters its third calendar month of sessions.

Winchester selectmen spent most of their meeting Tuesday catching up on old, unfinished and unsettled business from the past.

A January agreement between the town and Gail T. Matthews, owner of The Mill at 50 Cross St., fell apart. During renovations to both the private property and the Leonard Beach parking lot next to it, the town accidentally strayed and made improvements to the private lot as well.

In January, the owner and selectmen, by a 4-1 vote, agreed to let the owner use the beach parking lot for part of the year.

But when town counsel Doug Randall was asked to draw up a formal agreement, he learned that the town lot is not zoned for commercial parking but is in a conservation zone.

Matthews and her lawyer could not attend Tuesday's meeting but selectman Mark Lombardi said it made little difference. "Could we vote to violate the bylaw if she were here?" he demanded.

Randall said zoning "is not frozen in concrete" and either the town or the private party can petition to have it changed.

Lombardi said that suggestion as unhelpful. "I'll own a house with five apartments and it's only zoned for two, the town isn't going to tell me to go ahead and rent five apartments until the next town meeting, when I can get the zoning changed," Lombardi said.

"It's not only beautiful people who have rights. Ugly people have rights too — and kids and old men," Lombardi said.

Wade Welch, chairman of the selectmen, held out for postponement of the issue until Matthews could be present. He scheduled a vote June 2.

Lombardi and selectman Frank Sopper promised to show videotapes of the site at that meeting. "I know not all the selectmen have the time or ambition to go down and take a look for themselves," Lombardi said.

Selectmen also postponed discussion of a parking lot on Horn Pond

Brook rd., adjacent to town land and apparently behind the Continental Cable facility. Lombardi charged that somebody put hot top within 100 feet of the river and further than private parties are parking cars and even a boat on town-owned land.

Welch said the issue would return when it was determined if permission for paving within 100 feet of the waterway had been obtained from the town's conservation commission.

One bit of good, if somewhat dated, news appeared when State Rep. Sherman "Whip" Saltmarsh gave the town checks for $9,945 and $59,960 for federal and state reimbursement of costs to the town caused by hurricane Gloria last September. The meeting was interrupted while Saltmarsh's photographer recorded the check presentation.

A decision about the beautification design review committee's plan for plantings at the post office island was also postponed pending review of the town engineer and public works director.

In other action: A decision to rent the Town Hall auditorium to the Winton Club for next winter's Winton Club Cabaret was postponed two weeks to be sure the auditorium will be not be renovated then.

Robert O. Fiore was reappointed to the Wildwood Cemetery Advisory Committee.

Selectmen Judie Muggia and Bob Deering were appointed to join Maurer in a meeting with the managers of Ristorante Lucia to be sure the "valet parking" pilot program is working to the satisfaction of all.

Marianne K. O'Brien and Donna Tripp Ravn were appointed to the Winchester Historical Commission. Carolyn Ward, the town clerk, said plans are complete for Precincts 1 and 2 to begin voting at Muraco School, instead of the town hall, starting with the Sept. 16 primary and continuing at least until town hall renovations are complete. Muraco School is accessible to handicapped persons while the present town hall is not.

Selectmen accepted a contribution from the Winchester Rotary Club for partial subsidy of the drama workshop program sponsored by the town recreation department.

A permit for the Town Day road race, shortened from 6.2 to 5.0 miles this year, was granted.

A $10,000 check was accepted from The Green Co., developer of the Sachem Woods development. The company has agreed to make several payments to the town during completion and sales of the development.

The building permit fee for the Jenks Senior Center addition, totaling $5,425, was waived. The fee was also waived for the original building.

A decision about amending the town's sewer connection regulations to require cast iron entrance pipes was postponed.

Ex-Cello-O Moves To Thwart Takeover Bids

Ex-Cell-O Corporation's board of directors have approved a measure to protect Ex-Cell-O shareholders against abusive takeover practices. Ex-Cell-O said it was not aware of any acquisition effort at this time.

The board declared a dividend of one preferred stock purchase right on each outstanding share of Ex-Cell-O common stock. Each right will entitle shareholders to buy one one-hundredth of a share of a newly created series of preferred stock at an exercise price of $150.

Each one one-hundredth of a share of the newly created series of preferred stock will have dividend and voting rights approximately equal to those of one share of Ex-Cell-O common stock.

The rights will be exercisable only if, without the prior agreement of Ex-Cell-O's board of directors, a person or group acquires securities having 20 percent or more of the voting power of Ex-Cell-O securities or announces a tender offer which would result in such 20 percent ownership.

Ex-Cell-O will be entitled to redeem the rights at five cents each at any time before at 20 percent position has been acquired, and under certain circumstances afterward, including in connection with certain transactions not involving a 20 percent shareholder.

Ex-Cell-O Corporation is a diversified manufacturer of precision products for aerospace/defense, automotive and industrial applications. Its McCord-Winn Division is located in Winchester.

HAVE YOU HEARD?... by PAUL J. CONNOLLY Hearing Aid Specialist

PREVENTING HEARING LOSS
Q. Can wearing a hearing aid prevent further hearing loss?
A. Unfortunately, an aid cannot prevent hearing loss progression. The sensorineural kind of impairment, in particular, continues to advance at different paces for different people. Sometimes, though, hearing remains stable for years, degenerating little or not at all.

Wearing an aid will not slow down loss, but it DOES make a gradual diminution less traumatic by keeping the wearer in touch with the world around him/her. Dramatic improvements in today's hearing aids offer help for now, and great hope for the future. Your hearing aid expert can demonstrate these newer, smaller, more sophisticated devices.

Hospital To Discuss DRG Plan

In order to cap high medical expenditures, hospitals must now follow a Federally-mandated payment system, called Diagnosis Related Groups (DRGs), to be reimbursed for the treatment of Medicare patients.

"Because of DRGs, the elderly and their families need to prepare for hospitalization by learning about discharge planning and home care options," according to Susan Powers, R.N., community health educator for Winchester Hospital.

To help you or a family member of Medicare understand the DRG system and to learn how hospital stays can be planned to avoid any problems with early discharge, attend the Winchester Hospital program "DRGs and What They Mean" from 7 to 9 p.m. Wednesday, June 4, in the Kingsbury Seminar Room of the hospital.

The program, which is open to the public, will focus on how DRGs evolved, social service programs, home health care services and the legal issues related to discharge planning.

Interested persons should also bring their own questions about how the DRG system may affect their hospital stay.

Physical Therapists Open Clinic On Main st.

By MAUREEN QUINLAN

What was once a fleeting thought for Vincent Buscemi and William Antonelli back in college — has become a full-fledged reality.

Physical therapists Buscemi and Antonelli recently opened their own clinic on Main st.

Buscemi says, "We always talked about going into business together. We were lab partners in college and we were inseparable," he recalls with a wide-eyed grin.

Now, just a few years later, they are in business together.

Buscemi and Antonelli met at the University of Lowell where they studied physical therapy.

They say the clinic taps a real community need.

There is a crying need (for physical therapists) as people become more educated and health conscious," says Antonelli.

Until recently Winchester parents were driving their injured athletes in to Boston for necessary therapy. Accessibility and convenience plays a large role in a small community like this, says Buscemi.

Their patients range in age from five to 75. But, he says, because Winchester is so sports-oriented, a majority of patients are athletes. With the spring sports season well under way, clinic doors revolve with young injured athletes who want to get back on the playing field.

Antonelli defines physical therapy as the "restoration of normal body movement." He says a doctor might prescribe bed rest for a soccer player with a sprained ankle. A therapist's approach differs. By working on the muscles, healing time can be cut practically in half, Antonelli says.

Situations can become emotional, says Antonelli. Athletes want to get back out on the playing field as soon as possible. But a therapist's professional judgment and emotions can not mix, he says.

Opening a clinic in a small town was always their goal. After spending several years working in Lowell for different physical therapists, Buscemi and Antonelli were anxious to work together and to move into Winchester.

They were both raised in small towns like Winchester and like the atmosphere a small community has to offer. "We want to be a part of that," says Antonelli.

"Winchester is a very sports-oriented town. Adults are interested in kids," says Antonelli, who grew up in Westford. Buscemi grew up in Reading.

Antonelli says he is constantly greeted with warm hellos from residents. He says they say, "Wow, it's about time," a physical therapist clinic came to town.

HEALTH BEAT

Choate-Symmes Honors Its Nurses

Choate-Symmes Health Services recently honored 112 nurses in conjunction with National Nurse Recognition Week.

Nurses from Choate-Symmes' three divisions, Choate Hospital in Woburn, Symmes Hospital in Arlington and the Regional Health Center in Wilmington (RHCW) were cited for contributions to nursing development, research, growth and skills. They were also recognized for their accomplishments through professional growth.

In ceremonies honoring the nurses, Kathryn Melendy, vice president for patient and support services, praised them for "the can-do attitude you demonstrate," and for being patient advocates. "You have fought for the patient at a time when fighting for health care has not been fashionable," she said.

She continued, "When I look at you, I see commitment, dedication, and a willingness to take on challenges. I see strength and depth, and nurses who care."

Representing the Choate-Symmes administration, Frank A. Niro, executive vice president, thanked nurses for their hard work and professionalism. "We will continue to respond to your concerns, to recognize your accomplishments and to nurture you in your profession."

S. Patrick Gulati, MD, who represented the Choate-Symmes medical staff, expressed the physicians' "sincere appreciation for all you have done for patients and all the help you have given the doctors in order to deliver quality medical care."

He encouraged the nurses to "never give up your role as patient advocates."

Speaking for the board of trustees, Donald H. Reenstierna said, "We all recognize that nurses are at the front line. They are the first touch patients receive."

"We know that your major concern is always the giving of quality care, and we appreciate your efforts."

To mark Nurse Week, Choate-Symmes also conducted Nursing Expositions at all three divisions. Exhibitors included the operating room, Emergency Care, patient education, and critical care.

Local nurses honored were: Choate Hospital Division: Dot Currier, RN; Beverly Kennedy, RN; and Susan Merenda, graduate nurse.

Symmes Hospital Division: Karen Webb, RN, clinical leader.

RHCW Division: Kathy Barnes, RN, assistant director of nursing.

Part-Time Conservation Administrator Approved

By GEORGE DERRINGER

Winchester will soon have a part-time conservation administrator, despite the objections of selectmen and finance committee members.

Town meeting members voted 65-55 Thursday to hire an administrator after hearing strong arguments from both sides.

Conservation commissioner John Shawcross presented his case first. He said an administrator is needed primarily to aid the commission in enforcement of the state Wetlands Protection Act.

Regulations have become so complicated, Shawcross said, "it takes commissioners 18 months to two years to fully understand the act, if then."

Seven current projects are supposed to be checked regularly by the commission, which has set conditions to be met by developers, Shawcross said.

"But we can't," he said. "We are only closely following one of them."

Shawcross criticized existing wetlands laws, saying they allow development "within one or two feet of a lake." He said Winchester should its own wetlands law.

He also said every town surrounding Winchester has at least a part-time conservation administrator.

Eric Bradlee, chairman of the finance committee, said his group recommended unfavorable action on the $12,000 request. The decision was mostly based on the town's request not to create new positions.

Another consideration, Bradlee said, was that the part-time position would, in time, become full-time.

Town manager Chad Maurer said "there is already talent and opportunity within municipal government to handle most of the commission's work."

The engineering department already aids the commission's technical work, Maurer said. "And we have the most sophisticated engineering department of all the towns around us."

Walter Farrell, a former chairman of the commission, said the group is "doing a great job" but noted several issues sometime slip by.

"Once they were going to spray above a gas pipeline with defoliant. I can't remember which one, but you know defoliants from Vietnam," he said.

"I had to tell them that the run-off in that area went directly to the Woburn water supply," Farrell added.

He also said the conservation commission faces a big task with the proposed condominium development on the former Hudson Industries site. "And we don't know what's up there yet," he said.

Maurer responded, saying the town board of health had adequately handled a recent oil spill into the duck pond. "Pesticides are also handled by the board of health," he said.

"We have the process in place to address problems. We don't need to create another position," Maurer said. "And much of the work for the conservation commission's master plan was done by the engineering department."

Maurer said the engineering department does not set aside specific time to work on conservation commission projects.

"It's just normal for a good public servant doing his job," Maurer said in reference to town engineer Jake Garcia.

Shawcross, however, said the engineering department and the commission do not always see eye to eye.

"There's a certain opposition" between the departments because the engineering department is mainly interested in construction, not conservation, Shawcross said.

The appropriation passed.

An Evening For Jake And His Family...

By MAUREEN QUINLAN

Town engineer Jake Ciarcia was "roasted" by colleagues and friends last Wednesday night at a dinner held in his honor.

Ciarcia, named Outstanding Citizen Of The Year by the Winchester Chamber of Commerce last month, was honored at a dinner at the Knights of Columbus Hall.

Town Moderator John J. Sullivan, dressed in a tuxedo, paced the evening with his perpetual light-hearted one-liners and dry remarks. And the eight speakers had no trouble following his lead.

Speakers struggled to keep straight faces while they jokingly dished Jake's talents and contributions to Winchester and jested about his competence in his job.

Sullivan invited Jake to the podium to eat his dinner.

"It's customary for the guest to be served first but since there is no head table Mr. Ciarcia if you would please join me at the table... and will the caterers now serve Mr. Ciarcia," said Sullivan with a glint in his eye.

A Domino's Pizza delivery man appeared on the scene with a pizza especially for Jake as the audience cheered.

After dinner Sullivan lauded Jake's performance in town for the past 33 years. Ciarcia worked as an engineer for the town from 1953 until 1970. In 1970 he was named town engineer and planning board engineer.

"This year they (the chamber) have selected an individual who has contributed to the business community and to the quality of life in Winchester," he said.

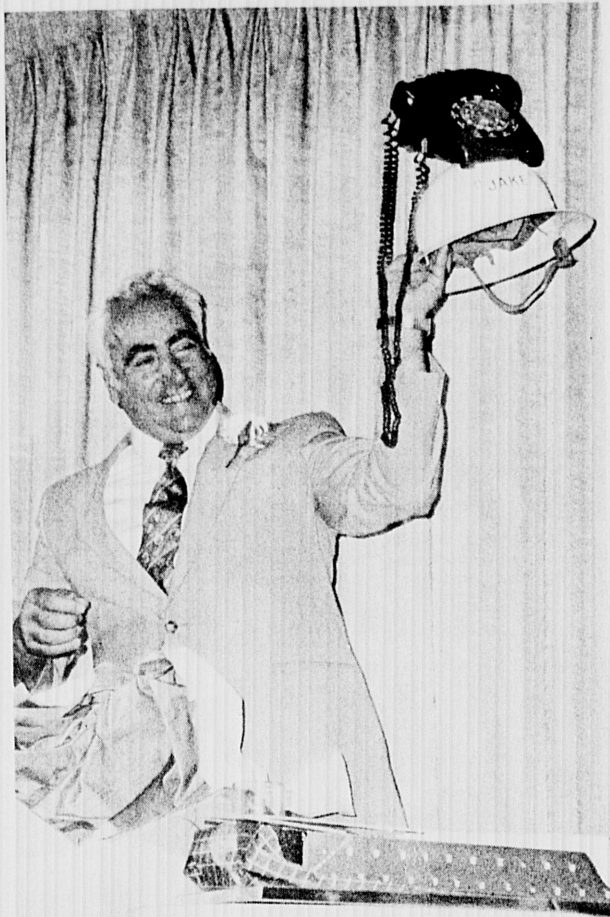

Chairman of the Board of Selectmen Wade Welch spoke on behalf of the board. "When the announcement was made we were surprised. Because we were so surprised we thought we better seek advice from the citizens advisory committee," as to an appropriate present.

Welch proceeded to mock Jake and rouse the audience on more than one occasion suggesting gifts like a direct phone line to George Whitten's home in Bermuda and a free pass to the tow road on the Woburn loop.

On a more serious note, Welch said, "What makes this town go is the people. You represent everything that is good in town government."

As Welch returned to his seat, Sullivan recognized Clarence Borggaard, known for adjourning all Town Meetings for as long as anyone can remember.

"Mr. Moderator I move we ad-

Jake Ciarcia

ourn," he said. A wave of laughter crossed over the room.

Sullivan, with a predictable quick comeback, retorted, "Somebody move that table away from the bar!"

Next in line was Steve Anderson, former chairman of the planning board. Anderson playfully dug at Jake and questioned his professional habits.

He said he was curious about Ciarcia's past so he decided to do some checking into his background. "We learned he doesn't have a degree. We're not sure if Jake attended school anywhere."

"The only reason we can say these lies is because he is the outstanding public servant that he is. Jake is indispensable to this town. We salute you and thank you," Anderson said.

Sullivan took to the podium once again to address Jake's family. "One of the areas of his life that brings him deep honor is his role as a father and a husband," he said.

At this point, Jake's daughter, Jean, who will be married this summer, narrated a slide show of growing up with a father like Jake.

There never seemed to be a dull moment in the Ciarcia household, Jean said. "He is a colorful and lively person to live with." She described her father as a "man of many hats," as he is a wine-maker, a gardener, a camper, a traveler and a wonderful father.

But she said, "No matter where he is he's always an engineer. There isn't a member in my family who doesn't understand the rudiments of a sewage treatment facility."

Jean turned to her father and said, "We cherish greatly and love all he is to us."

Steve D'Onofrio, Jake's nephew and an employee of Winchester Recreation Department reveled in the opportunity to make a few wisecracks about his Uncle Jake.

"My uncle has a good humored outlook on everything," he said commending him for his award.

Jack Heimie, a member of the Sons of Italy, spoke about his friend in a hideoous imitation of an Italian accent.

Developer John Connery, who worked closely with Jake on the downtown revitalization project, shared a few jokes and stories.

Sullivan called John Groux, Winchester town manager for ten years, to the podium. He said, "Here's a guy who made a bucket of dough and then quit."

Groux made light of Jake's performance record. "Jake walked on water..."

Groux playfully questioned why Jake submitted a voucher for $875 for a trip to New York City a few years ago. He said Jake told him it was to study the design of the Brooklyn Bridge in order to construct and design Swanton st. overpass. Groux concluded "this guy's a nut."

On a more serious scale, he said, "Jake is the best I've ever served with."

Sullivan then asked the audience to listen closely to a speech on tape from the house majority leader Charles Flaherty of Cambridge.

"I honestly can't come before you tonight." The voice said the fact the town ever hired Jake was the biggest fraud.

State Rep. Sherman Saltmarsh subsequently confessed to writing the speech. He said, "There isn't a fine town employee than Jake. We are greatly indebted to him." At that point Saltmarsh handed Jake a citation for his accomplishments.

led a group onto the stage for the grand finale, "a blueprint salute to the town engineer."

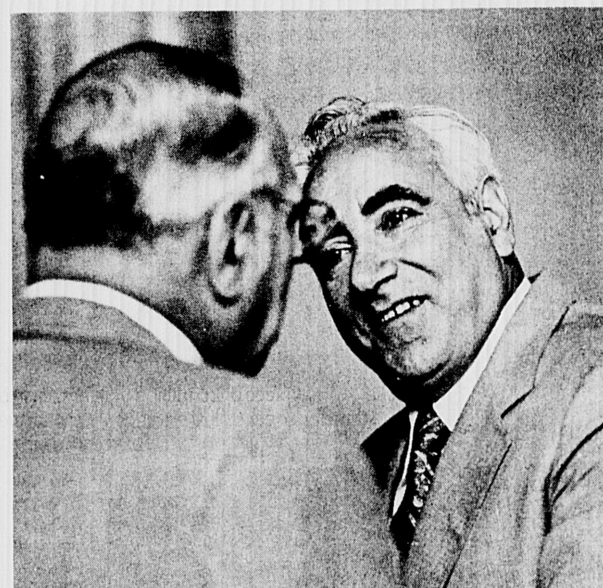

The group recited verses of a poem written by former school committee member Mary Jean Weyman.

The group included building inspector Tony Zagaoug, Joan Murphy from the town manager's office, recreation director Ken Cerghino, DPW director Dom Serratore, comptroller Joe Bonner, police chief John McHugh and town clerk Carolyn Ward.

Jake finally came before the audience at the end of the evening.

He complimented the Chamber of Commerce on their work and wished his 86-year-old mother a Happy Birthday.

Jake analogized town government to the human body. The body, like a town, depends on so many vital parts. "No one person does it all," said Jake.

Foley To Be Ordained As Priest

Thomas S. Foley

Thomas S. Foley of 84 Pond st., Winchester, will be ordained to the priesthood Saturday, June 7, by His Eminence, Bernard Cardinal Law, at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross in Boston.

At 2 a.m., Sunday, June 8, Foley will celebrate his first Mass at Immaculate Conception Church, Sheridan Circle, Winchester. The public is invited.

A reception will follow in the parish hall, where friends will have the opportunity to greet Foley and receive his blessing.

Foley attended Winchester public schools and graduated from Winchester High School in 1978. He studied at St. John's Seminary College of Liberal Arts and School of Theology in Brighton, receiving a bachelor of arts degree in 1982 and a master of divinity degree in 1986.

While at St. John's Seminary, Foley was involved in field work at St. Joseph's Church in Wakefield, Immaculate Conception Church in Everett, St. Catherine's Church in Charlestown, and St. Margaret's Hospital for Women in Dorchester.

For the past year, Foley has been serving as an intern at St. Mark's Church in Dorchester.

After ordination to the priesthood, Foley will be assigned by Cardinal Law to serve a parish in the Archdiocese of Boston.

Water Mains To Be Flushed

The Winchester water and sewer division of the Department of Public Works will begin flushing the middle low distribution system Sunday, June 1.

Hydrant flushing will be accomplished during the night, between 11 p.m. and 5 a.m., according to the following schedule of streets:

June 1 — Bacon, Main and Washington sts.

June 2 — Swanton, Cross, Church, Cambridge, Fletcher and Palmer sts.

June 3 — Grove st. and all connecting roads.

June 4 — All roads southwest of Bacon st. to Cambridge st.

June 5 — All roads northeast of Bacon st. between Church and Main sts.

June 6 — All roads northwest of Church st. between Wildwood and Cambridge sts.

June 7 — All roads between Middlesex and Main sts. to Canal st.

June 8 — All roads southwest of Main st. to Canal st.

June 9 — All roads west of Washington st. between Irving and Dunham.

June 12 — All roads west of Washington between Irving and D st.

June 15 — All roads east of Main st. to Loring ave.

June 16 — All roads north of Cross st.

Each street and adjacent streets may experience a temporary discoloration of the water and/or low water pressure, said James J. Courchaine, assistant director of the Dept. of Public Works.

"If water is introduced into your system, do not open any other inlets such as faucets or flush any toilets; this will bring discolored water throughout the system," Courchaine said.

"Let some time pass and then open only the faucet that showed discoloration until the water becomes clear. If the problem persists, please call the water and sewer division at 721-7100," Courchaine advised.

"We apologize for any inconvenience you may experience and we acknowledge your continued support in our efforts to improve water quality and the distribution system," he said.

COMMENT

Farewell

This is our last issue.

Next week your newspaper will be published by Harte-Hanks Corp., a national newspaper chain which we feel will do a good job with The Winchester Star.

While national in scope, with over 100 newspapers, Harte-Hanks has a reputation for maintaining local editorial control and for providing high public service to the communities it covers.

We have published The Winchester Star for the past 15 years and have had the headquarters of our newspaper company in the Star Building at 3 Church St. We have employed many local people over the years and have a great many social friends in Winchester.

In the past two years, more than 30 newspapers west of Boston have been acquired by Harte-Hanks or a competing newspaper group.

Two companies approached us earlier this year with expressions of interest in acquiring our six newspapers in Winchester, Arlington, Belmont, Watertown and Newton. It was difficult to even decide to sell the company, never mind to which firm. Both run good companies.

We believe Harte-Hanks has the background, management strength and commitment to serve Winchester well by carrying on the local traditions of The Star.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Overpass Is Disgusting!

TO THE EDITOR:

Several months ago I wrote to the town manager, deploring the disgusting situation which exists under the railroad overpass by the post office, created by pigeons roosting overhead. To date nothing has been done so far as I can see.

How the town fathers can take pride in the "beautification" (?) of Winchester (brick sidewalks, new lights) when this nasty condition is allowed to continue, beats me.

Does the board of health sanction our tracking this mess on the soles of our shoes and on the feet of our dogs into our cars and homes? Soon our young people will be walking barefoot through this filth.

Is it true that pigeons sometimes spread disease?

Perhaps if the right people were "shot" from overhead and had their expensive sports jackets ruined we might get some action.

Is there any reason why the overhead area could not be covered with finely-meshed plastic-covered wire, which would not rust and which would prevent roosting?

From the expressions on the faces of people I meet negotiating this sticky but sometimes slippery and always dangerous area, I would guess there are many of us who feel revulsion.

If your readers agree that something should be done immediately, I trust they will call either the town manager (721-7133) or the board of health (721-7121) to register their complaints.

Thanks For EnKa Coverage

TO THE EDITOR:

The EnKa Society is most grateful to The Winchester Star for the excellent coverage of the 1986 Annual Street Fair.

You gave us fine placement in the paper both with pictures and articles, and I am sure this contributed to the good attendance at the Fair.

EnKa will be able to continue to serve the community thanks to the cooperation of people like yourselves. We certainly appreciate all you have done.

She's A Great Student Too

TO THE EDITOR:

As Martha Doherty's academic advisor and one of her professors at Tufts, I was especially delighted to see the article on Martha's athletic accomplishments and distinction on page 15 of the Winchester Star Thursday, May 22.

I do regret that there was no comment on the academic half of Martha's life at Tufts. She was a classics major and was graduated cum laude. At Tufts she took courses not only in Latin and Greek Classics but also in French and Spanish languages, English literature, fine arts history, drama, philosophy, calculus computer science and psychology.

Further, she spent the spring semester of her junior year in London studying literature, drama, mass media, art and archaeology.

To write only of her athletic prowess is to do Martha Doherty a disservice. When one considers her academic achievements, her athletic abilities are all the more admirable.

Cordially
John W. Zarker
Professor of Classics
Tufts University

P.S. Perhaps the devoted teachers of Winchester High School should also be complemented for preparing Martha so admirably to cope with the rigors of college academics.

(Editor's note: The story in question was submitted by Tufts University.)

Thanks To All

TO THE EDITOR:

The families of Paul Augello and Michael Wiperman express their sincerest gratitude to Rep. Saltmarsh, Father Butera, Louise MacDonald, town and school officials and especially to their ever-loving and loyal classmates for their tribute in a tree-planting ceremony in their honor, held on Winchester Common on May 21.

I CLEANED MY ROOM AND EVEN MADE MY BED.

Zillions Of Cells Crying In Protest Of Food Costs

By TERRY MAROTTA

Every time I go to the store and spend $20 for a week's food, all ten zillion cells in my body cry out in protest.

Every time I take my kids to a movie and come out $20 poorer after ninety minutes in the dark, I feel the same way.

It's strange to be living in a world where a pack of gum costs more than a meal used to. Where arming a kid with the ridged and substantial plop of a quarter won't get him any closer to a candy bar than he would be empty-handed. Candy bars cost about three bucks these days; they're kept in glass cases, like the more expensive kinds of jewelry in the department stores.

As kids ourselves, I remember, we used to make fun of the grown-ups for having what we called a Depression mentality.

My aunt used to boil sponges when they turned sour and nasty, in the hopes that it would revivify them — this in an age when sponges went for a penny apiece.

My mom used to send us off in the high school years to pick out the family Christmas tree come December. "Don't spend more than a dollar," she'd yell as we banged out the door into the chill bite of the early darkness.

We laughed at her then.

We're not laughing now.

No one who's just spent $180 for a lounge chair in any one of the dozen DISCOUNT department stores across America is laughing today.

But, I'm pleased to report, the picture isn't altogether bleak. It must be conceded that hiding here and there among the staggering price tags, there still do exist one or two bargains. Good buys, I mean, items for which you fork over a modest amount of cash and in exchange get something of value.

The word "value" is the key one here. It's still possible, of course, to buy things which don't cost much, but which have no value either. Party favors spring most immediately to mind, like the kewpie-doll sort of creature with the pink hair and the merry blue eyes you can get for 98 cents which, the minute you hand it to a kid, drops its limbs off and loses its head, leaving you with a torso, a crying child, and a dollar less than you had to begin with.

No, I speak of the really good value here: the item of substantial cost and substantial worth. Like those white open-grid lawn and patio chairs you see in every supermarket and hardware store just now.

These chairs are wonderful. They cost $4.99 each. You can stack 'em up and store ten or twelve of 'em in three-square feet of space. They're sturdy, serviceable, and they look nice.

It's true that they make waffle-marks in your fanny if you stay in them for long periods, but this is easily cured by purchasing for just another trifling amount some nice matched-urethane cushions covered in fabrics of bright lollipop hue.

In any case, they're a vast improvement over the webbed affairs we all lived with for years, which mutate over time into tottering rhombuses that slowly capsize earthward when anyone weighing more than 160 sits down in them.

A waffle chair would never do that.

A heavy lady came to our house once and sat in one of our waffle chairs. She weighs close to 300 and she started to laugh about something. Her whole body shook. And that dandy little chair drilled itself six inches into the soft summer earth under the jackhammer blows of her mirth. But it didn't break.

Now what more can you ask of a thing than that — that it should look good, come cheap and refuse to embarrass a person in front of her friends?

BEACON HILL ROLL CALL

The House. "Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local representatives' votes on 7 roll calls from the week of May 19 - 23.

Flag(H 955)- House 126-21, gave initial approval to a bill providing $10,000 and directing every city and town to fly the Prisoners of War (POW) and Missing In Action (MIA) flag on at least one existing flag pole.

Supporters said this will give support to families who have relatives missing or held in Vietnam.

Some opponents said communities should not be forced to fly the flag. Others said the bill could hinder efforts of families to get the remains of their relatives in Vietnam.

Representative Sherman Saltmarsh voted yes.

MDC(H 2791)- House 97-44, rejected a bill providing $100,000 for a study of the operation of the Metropolitan District Commission (MDC) with a view toward eventual abolition of the agency.

Supporters said the MDC is an antiquated, scandal-ridden patronage haven and claimed its functions could be assumed by other agencies.

Opponents said the MDC is doing a fine job and noted improvements are being made.

Saltmarsh voted no.

MDC Police(H 4759)- House 110-35, rejected a bill abolishing the MDC police department and transferring its duties to local police departments in the district.

Supporters said the scandal-ridden force is expensive and duplicative.

Opponents acknowledged problems but said abolition is not the answer.

Saltmarsh voted no.

Surtax(H 3103)- House 74-55, rejected a bill providing for immediate repeal of the 7.5 percent surtax.

Supporters said immediate repeal will provide major tax relief and can easily be funded by the state surplus.

Opponents, noting last year a two year phaseout was signed into law, said immediate repeal is fiscally irresponsible and claimed the state cannot afford it.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

Aliens(H 5448)- House 86-58, rejected resolutions urging the President and Congress to amend the Immigration and Nationality Act so that the only grounds for exclusion and deportation of an alien is the existence of clear evidence that his or her activities pose a grave and direct threat to public order or welfare.

Supporters said current provisions allow exclusion and deportation of individuals based on unfair criteria and has been used to deny entry to worthwhile individuals.

Opponents said current provisions are fair and are designed to protect this country and keep out dangerous people.

Saltmarsh voted no.

Gambling(H 5431)- House 87-52, rejected a bill allowing gamblers to deduct their gambling losses, up to the amount of their winnings, from their state income taxes.

Supporters said the bill would put the state tax code in line with the federal one and would apply only to persons who are in the business of legal gambling at racetracks and other places.

Opponents said the bill encourages gambling, may apply to bookies and will cost the state revenue.

A Yea vote is for the bill.

Saltmarsh voted no.

Guilty But Insane(H 3403)- House 94-52, rejected a bill dealing with the retention of persons found "guilty but insane" in certain criminal proceedings.

Supporters, noting the punishment for people now found "not guilty by reason of insanity" is currently a short stay in a mental hospital, said the bill places these people in a "guilty but insane" category and sets up a system to treat and deal with these dangerous individuals.

Opponents said the bill raises serious constitutional problems and argued the bill is not the answer to any problem.

A Yea vote is for the bill. A Nay vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

The Senate. "Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local senators' votes on 7 roll calls from the week of May 19 - 23.

Drugs(S 501)- Senate 20-15, gave initial approval to a bill allowing physician assistants to order certain diagnostic tests and prescribe drugs.

Supporters said the bill will improve access to medical care and includes safeguards to insure the quality of care is not sacrificed.

Opponents said it weakens the quality of care and is dangerous.

Senator Richard Kraus voted yes.

Beaches(S 1819)- Senate 31-8, rejected an amendment requesting the Supreme Judicial Court to give an advisory opinion on the constitutionality of a bill authorizing public right of passage along the coastline of Massachusetts.

Supporters of the bill said it simply guarantees that during daylight hours people have a right to walk on that portion of a beach that lies between the high and low tide water marks.

Opponents said there are few cases where people are denied this right and claimed the state would have to pay owners millions of dollars.

Amendment supporters said the opinion is necessary because in 1975 the court ruled that landowners would have to be compensated.

Opponents said the 1975 action by the court was an opinion, not a ruling, and said seeking an opinion is not necessary.

Kraus voted no.

Tax Cap(S 1915)- Senate 24-13, gave near final approval and sent to the House the Senate Ways and Means Committee version of a tax cap. Provisions include placing $200 million into a Balanced Budget Reserve Fund and setting aside $100 million to cover lost federal funds.

Supporters said the package was responsible and contained a reasonable tax cap provision capping future tax collection and returning money to taxpayers.

Some opponents said the package was weak and ineffective and would place no real limit on state spending and return nothing to taxpayers.

Others said they opposed any caps and said surpluses should be used to fund new and existing programs to help people.

Kraus voted yes.

Taxes(S 1915)- Senate 29-9, rejected a tax cap amendment providing that if state tax revenues exceed allowable revenues as established in the bill, the revenues go into the State Tax Abatement Reserve Fund rather than into the Balanced Budget

Reserve Fund as provided for in the bill. The Senate also 28-10, rejected an amendment reducing from 5 percent to 2.5 percent the amount by which money in the Balanced Budget Reserve Fund must exceed state revenues before the excess is transferred to the State Tax Abatement Reserve Fund.

Amendment supporters said the amendments will insure real and direct tax relief.

Opponents said the amendments hurt the Balanced Budget Reserve Fund which is designed to protect the state if the economy goes sour.

Kraus voted no in both roll calls.

CLT Cap(S 1915)- Senate 26-10, rejected an amendment replacing the Ways and Means cap with the language of the cap sponsored by Citizens for Limited Taxation (CLT).

Supporters said the CLT version is the strongest cap which would truly limit state spending and return money to taxpayers.

Opponents said the CLT version is too restrictive and does not take into account federal cutbacks or a decline in the state's economy.

A Yea vote is for the CLT version.

Kraus voted no.

Two-Thirds Vote(S 1915)- Senate 28-8, rejected an amendment requiring a two-thirds vote, instead of a majority vote, in the House and Senate to allow the use of money to balance the budget from the Balanced Budget Reserve Fund.

Amendment supporters said this will insure the use of the money is really necessary.

Opponents said the requirement is too restrictive.

A Yea vote is for the amendment.

Kraus voted no.

GUEST COLUMN

Memorial Day Has A Special Meaning For Former Officer Who Recalls Saraco

By KEVIN HANNAFORD

As Memorial Day 1986 approaches, most Americans will stop to reflect on the meaning of the holiday. Some will dwell on memories longer than others.

The families and friends of our country's veterans of the last four wars will remember the sacrifices of their husbands, brothers and sons. Parades and ceremonies will inspire the young and sadden the old.

Memorial Day has always emphasized the military but every parade either starts or ends with a ceremony at a cemetery. There will always be a few solitary family members placing flowers at a grave of someone unconnected with the military — just a loved one who has passed away.

This Memorial Day I will reflect on memories of my experiences in Vietnam — of all the friends and brother Marines who did not make it.

I will always think of the men I met and lost contact with. I can only hope they all made it home safely.

This Memorial Day and every other Memorial Day for the past 13 years, I think of one man — a Winchester police officer who died a tragic death at a young age.

He was a dedicated police officer, husband and father who, with two other officers, was in a car which struck a tree on Cross St. on Memorial Day 1973.

For the rest of my personal "Memorial Days" I will never forget Andrew Joseph Saraco.

Andy was a passenger in a car driven by Fred Marasca. Freddie was also killed in the crash. A third passenger, officer William Gannon, was severely injured and almost died.

At the time, I was a gun-ho ex-Marine who had just joined the police force as a "special." I had just met Andy. I soon met his entire family, Mr. and Mrs. Michael D. Saraco of Winchester, his mother and father, and his wife Joanne and his two-year-old daughter Tammy — little "Tam-Tam."

I will always remember coming off a four-to-midnight shift with Andy and going to his house for a beer. I can still see Andy placing his bat and gunbelt in the closet before going in to check on Tam-Tam.

Joanne would always be up to welcome him home and never seemed to mind when Andy brought me home with him. Some nights turned to mornings with breakfast as the three of us stayed up all night, talking about our futures and our careers.

Andy Saraco loved being a cop. It was second only to his family and Andy was a damn good cop. There was nobody with a cooler head when one was needed and nobody better to have with you when an arrest was made.

Andy loved people and wanted to do everything he could for you. But if he told you to cease and desist from some behavior, you had better do so. Andy would have gone far in the Winchester police department but fate had other plans.

Andy's death hit me harder than anything in my life. I learned of the accident through a late afternoon phone call filled with tears.

I had put the thought of losing someone that close to me out of my mind. I thought I left all that behind in Vietnam but it took me longer to accept Andy's death than any other.

I remember the wake at the Lane Funeral Home so well. I remember Joanne standing over Andy there when she was nine months pregnant with their second child, Kim, born less than a week's after her father's death.

I remember the next few months and the feelings of hopelessness Joanne and I both had, the questions no mortal could answer.

It's been 13 years and I could talk forever about Andy, an extraordinary human being. Joanne has since married and I have lost touch with her, but I hope someday to see Tammy and Kim again. I'd like to tell them about their father and my best friend.

On Jan. 10, 1984, my second child and first son was born and named Andrew Joseph Hannaford. When the time is right, I'll tell my son about the man for whom he is named and my hopes he'll be as good and strong as Andrew Joseph Saraco.

I hope Winchester will join me to honor Andy's memory and the memory of all our servicemen who fell with honor. They are all dearly missed.

(Editor's note: Kevin Hannaford, now a Somerville resident, is a former Winchester policeman.)

GUIDE TO TOWN DAY '86

'Kiddie' Attractions...

Pre-schoolers on up to sixth graders will come equipped with their own worms and rods in hopes of catching the biggest fish at the 28th annual Winchester Kiwanis Club Fishing Derby at Wedge Pond.

Youngsters will cluster at Town Hall at 9:15 a.m. to march over to Wedge Pond, rain or shine.

This is the first year the derby will be held in conjunction with Town Day.

All entrants will present their "catch" to the judges table and at noon prizes will be awarded. The grand prize drawing will include a boy's bicycle and a girl's bicycle. The winners' names will be posted in the center of town on a bulletin board.

At 10 a.m., children can participate in a spelling bee at the Jenks Senior Center.

Later in the morning, youngsters will line up at Town Hall, some on tricycles, others on bicycles and even some toddlers in "baby buggies." All will ride their cycles hoping the judges, who will be positioned along the parade route, will notice them.

Participants are encouraged to "be zany" and go all out and decorate their "autos" and themselves.

Judges for the event will be school superintendent Charles L. Mitsakos, Winchester police safety officer Kevin P. Mawn and children's librarian Heidi M. Zeibig.

As they "parade" down Mt. Vernon St., contestants will pedal to music while judges take note of the most outrageous looking contestants and their "autos."

The parade route will move down Mt. Vernon St. to the police box on Main St. and back up to Mt. Vernon St. to the stage area in back of the library.

After all contestants cross the finish line, judges will award certificates of merit and choose finalists for the grand prize drawing.

A pound puppie doll will be given to the winner of the baby buggie contest, a 16-inch cycle will be awarded to the tricycle winner and a 20-inch bicycle will be given to the bicycle winner.

For Winchester's youngsters who love to compete, all kinds of races will be featured on Wadleigh Field beginning at 1 p.m. Kids can find a friend to "tie up" with for the three-legged races, or find someone willing to carry their legs in the wheel barrel race.

The events also feature a tug-o-war, potato races and sack races.

Prizes will be awarded to everyone. The age groups are: ages 3 and 4; 5 and 6; 7 and 8; 9 and 10; 11 and 12; and 13 and older.

At the close of the events, youngsters will jump out of their sacks, untie ropes and head for Town Hall for the famous pie eating contest.

Kids will line up at tables and await the OK to start stuffing pies into their mouths.

Undoubtedly, both contestants and tables will need a good hosing down afterward.

T-shirts will be awarded to the first-place winner in each age group.

From 1:30 to 2 p.m. and from 3 to 3:30 p.m., on Converse Place Green, Don Kirk will mesmerize youngsters with a hand puppet show. His "Big Bird attitude" draws young children to him instantly. Kirk's act invites kids to interact with him. He will also walk around town during the day with his puppets.

"Balloon Lady" Margie Silva will be on foot from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the center. She will create animals and odd shapes out of balloons for children.

From 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.,

(Please see KIDS, p. 10)

Fish eaters are in for a real treat. Residents will feast their eyes and palates on delectable lobsters, New England clam chowder, steamers and corn. Dinner tickets are $16.

An alternative dinner of hamburgers, hot dogs, chips and Coke will also be available. Tickets are $3. For those who have waited until the last minute, there are still tickets available through Friday at the Chamber of Commerce, Henderson Stationers, Winchester Ltd. Jewelers or Bonnell Ford.

For parents with young children, "Alexander, King of the Jesters" will be on hand to provide entertainment from 6:15 to 7 p.m. on the Duck Pond stage. A one-man act, Alexander will juggle, ride a unicycle, play musical instruments and delight his young audience with all kinds of surprises.

The McCall Junior High Jazz Band, directed by David Kontoff, and the Winchester High School Jazz band, directed by Priscilla Miller, will provide entertainment from 7 p.m. to dusk. And as darkness sets in, residents will line their chairs down Mystic Valley pkwy to await the grand finale, a fireworks extravaganza.

Library Celebrates Creation Of Trust Fund

The Winchester Public Library is celebrating the creation of the John C. Willis Trust Fund, the 29th in the history of the library.

Mr. Willis was a trustee of the library in the 1950's, and was the first to propose to the town the construction of the addition to the library which was built in the 1960's.

Mr. Willis passed away last December, and his family established the fund in his memory. Currently the fund is valued at $5,470. The money will be invested and the interest used to buy materials for the library's collection.

Town meeting unanimously approved accepting the money at its May 22 session. Alice Mirak, chairman of the trustees, spoke, thanking Mr. Willis' family and other donors for their generosity and support for the library.

Recently several librarians from the library attended the annual conference of the Massachusetts Library Association in Falmouth. Children's librarians Heidi Zeigbig and Robin Elbot attended a program on award-winning children's books.

Chris Rust, attended a session on "The Mass, the Media, and the Public Library," which focused on ways of publicizing the library.

All three spent time in the "PR Swap-n-Shop," which featured innovative publications and programming ideas submitted by libraries from all over the state, including several pamphlets created at the Winchester Public Library.

The second day of the conference was attended by head of technical services Phil McNulty and head of information services Dee Hanley.

REAL ESTATE AND YOU

HOUSE HUNTING COMPROMISES

Every home purchase involves a certain amount of compromise. When you and your Realtor are looking at property, it's important that you give the agent a pretty clear idea of which criteria are flexible and what you really must have in your new home.

If, for example, you prefer a specific location, discuss why you want that neighborhood. Your agent might be able to suggest alternatives that you hadn't considered that offer the same amenities or convenience to your office. How important is size? Do you really need four bedrooms, or would three bedrooms work if there was an extra den for your home office? Some people want to do some customizing work after they move in, and others can't face even the prospect of painting a single room. How much are you willing to correct with redecorating or remodeling? Are you willing to expand your price range by using an adjustable rate mortgage to increase your buying power?

When we ask prospective buyers a lot of questions, we're trying to use your house hunting time most efficiently, and to show you houses that really do have possibilities for you and your family.

If there's a move in your future, call the professionals at Bixby & Porter Co. Realtors. Our number is 729-7000, or just stop by our office at 33 Thompson St., Winchester. We are happy to serve all of your real estate needs.

Winchester '9' Wins Qualifies For Tourney

By DAVID MOORE

The Winchester boys baseball team beat Middlesex League leader Stoneham Friday 3-2 to qualify for the MIAA tournament tomorrow.

Winchester also defeated Lexington Monday 6-1.

The Sachems' victories came off a dismal 12-0 dismantling by Reading, who took sole possession of second place last Wednesday and proved that the difference between second and third place is a whopping 12 runs.

The Rockets owned every square foot of Birch Meadow Wednesday.

Rocket John Macaluso pitched a full seven innings. He struck out seven Sachems and walked four as he gained his third shutout of the season.

Macaluso, who played an excellent all-around game with two singles, two runs scored, and three RBI's, limited Winchester to three hits on the afternoon.

Friday, with catcher Mike White and Gareth Kenton out with injuries, Winchester avenged an earlier 13-3 loss to the Spartans and skewed the tournament picture with its 3-2 victory.

In the fifth inning, T.J. DellaSala reached first on an infield hit, moved to second when Nasson walked, and scored off a Tim Budrewicz pop-up that eluded all Spartan mitts.

After bases had been loaded, Danny Costello drove one low down the center to bring in Al Nasson and make it 3-1.

The Sachems were to finish their regular season Wednesday against Woburn.

Hannah Speaker At Local Schools

By DAVID MOORE

"I want to talk to you this morning about something that I talk to my seven-year-old son Seth about," said New England Patriot John Hannah to a rapt audience of elementary school children and teachers last Thursday morning at the Ambrose School.

What Hannah talked about was, on the one hand, the importance of "consideration" for other people, and on the other hand, the need "to develop self-discipline, to be able to slow down and control yourself."

Consideration? Control? Most of these children had heard these words urged upon them before, but here there was a twist.

These words were being urged upon them by perhaps the biggest man any of them had ever seen. They were being urged upon them gently by one of the fiercest and consistently outstanding offensive linemen of all time. And, finally, they were being linked together as the two key ingredients for teamwork.

"Teamwork arises then," concluded Hannah, "out of people, like yourselves, controlling their actions in consideration of those around them."

Short and simple. Hannah had taken out an hour off from his off-season job as a stockbroker with L.F. Rothschild, Unterberg and Co. to speak with the kindergarten through sixth graders.

Hannah is a director of the Ronald McDonald House program in Brookline. The program provides housing near hospitals for families with terminally ill children.

The talk was organized by Judy King and Terry Stevens, co-enrichment chairwomen at the Ambrose School. As part of the agreement with Hannah for Thursday's talk, the Ambrose school made a donation to the McDonald House program.

After his brief speech, Hannah opened the floor to questions and a flurry of hands. Questions ranged from who his heroes were: "Oh... Dick Butkus, Jim Taylor, Johnny Unitas. Ever hear of those guys? I didn't think so." to what it felt like to lose the Super Bowl this year.

"I felt as though I had blown something, or lost something that I had dreamt about having for as long as I can remember."

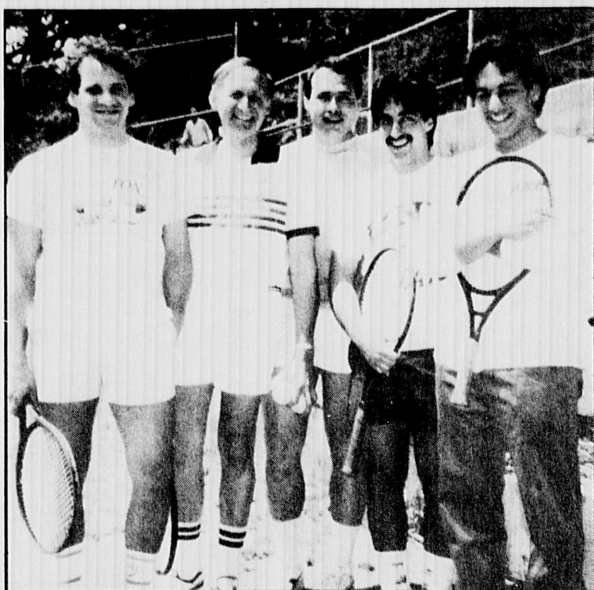

In response to one boy's question about drug abuse in professional sports, Hannah concluded, "so please, please, don't ever do drugs. Not only do they destroy your bodies so that you cannot function, but they ruin your mind, turn them into something God did not intend them to be."

And finally, on whether he would return for one more season: "There're a lot of people who'd like to know that," Hannah said, flashing that rare but disarming public smile.

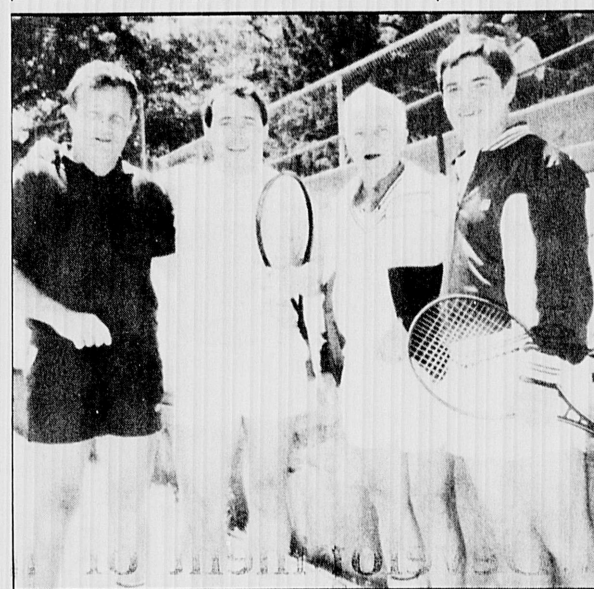

Guarnotta Picks North Carolina

Julie Guarnotta, Winchester High's all-state soccer player, will attend the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill next fall.

The college is a national women's soccer power.

Meeting at the conclusion of the Winchester Tennis Association's draw tournament are family doubles finalists James and Robert Willing, umpire Lou Desmarteaux, and winners David and Joseph Palumbo.

Men's doubles champions Richard Doherty and Lou Desmarteaux, left, defeated James Beck and Neil Hurley in the championship.

Mixed doubles champions were Neil Hurley and Gloria Desmarteaux, left, who defeated Stella Gallant and John Ripley in the finals.

Women's doubles finalists Mary Golden and Meta Fisher, left, meet with umpire Sue Cowen, center, and champions Chris Wolfe and Bonnie Totman.

Spring Draw Tourney Gets 160 Participants

Special To The Star

More than 160 individuals competed in four separate events at the Winchester Tennis Association's Annual Spring Draw Tournament.

The tournament, held Memorial Day weekend, traditionally signals the beginning of the tennis season and a return to outdoor play.

Tournament chairpersons were Janet Burke and Judy Harrington. They were assisted by a committee composed of Dave and Joan Miller, Bob and Stella Gallant, Lou Desmarteaux, Laurie Minit, Kathy Hurley, Judy Nicholson, Joey Palumbo, Joan Byrne, Tom and Catherine Dunn, and Sue Cowen.

The draw tournament consists of four events—men's doubles, women's doubles, mixed doubles, and family doubles. With the exception of the family doubles, the partners are drawn at random by ability. Theoretically, each team has an equal chance to win the tournament.

"It never rains on the draw" shall be the new motto of the Winchester Tennis Association. Despite previous forecasts of impossible weather, play began at 8 a.m. Saturday and continued until late afternoon, when a heavy downpour forced the few remaining players to flee for cover.

Ann Ferry and her partner Dick Doherty, locked in a closely contested match against Joan Byrne and Judd Holt, paused to dry their racket handles, and obtain new balls and then pressed on to complete a second set tie breaker. The match went to Ferry and Doherty, who apparently have had more experience in such adverse conditions. Byrne and Holt, usually know enough to come in out of the rain, and thus were at a disadvantage.

Although it poured Saturday night, skies cleared Sunday in time for play at 9 a.m. The mixed doubles, although not a family event, saw the team of Helen Campabasso and Leo Lauretano competing against Rick Campabasso and Janet Burke in the quarter finals.

The first set was closely contested. However Helen's steady net play coupled with Leo's cannon ball serves and smashing overheads carried them on to victory, and the opportunity to compete in the semi finals.

Results

Family Doubles

Family doubles is the only event in which partners are not drawn at random. Any two family members may compete, regardless of age. Gordon Nicholson and his 13-year-old son Kenneth played an exciting match against the Lynchs. Watch out next year after Kenneth has had a chance to perfect his top spin backhand.

The Championship in the family doubles was won by David and Joseph Palumbo, who also won this even in 1984. James and Robert Willing played well, providing spectators with some very exciting moments.

Women's Doubles

The women's doubles was the only event in which neither of the top seeded teams were to win. Bonnie Totman and Chris Wolfe defeated No. 1 seed Mary Golden and Meta Fisher. Golden and Fisher played well, and for a short time it looked as if the match might go into three sets.

However, Wolfe remained steady, returning everything that came her way, thus providing Totman the opportunity to put the ball away with her crisp volleys and powerful overheads.

Men's Doubles

The Dwight "Deb" Bellows Trophy for the men's doubles was won by the team of Lou Desmarteaux and Richard Doherty. Neil Hurley and James Beck were not able to take the match to three sets, although they had a surge in the second set and appeared to be gaining control of the match.

Mixed Doubles

The president's box was full for the final match of the day when Stella Gallant and John Ripley played against Neil Hurley and Gloria Desmarteaux.

As the match began, it looked as if it could go either way. Ripley showed superb net play. Gallant displayed beautiful ground strokes, excellent placement, and her famous passing shot. But Hurley and Desmarteaux, who were the No. 1 seed played a tough match and won in two sets.

Sachems Boys Even Record

The Winchester High boys lacrosse team defeated Division 2 host Peabody last Thursday 10-4.

The Sachems were 8-8 after Thursday's win with one game remaining against Lexington Wednesday.

Senior attacker James Campo led all scorers Thursday with three first-period goals that put Winchester up 3-0.

By halftime the Sachems were up

7-1. Scoring for Winchester were George Nowell with two goals, and Peter Mulvaney, John Ward, Rob Arcari, Anthony Cuccinatti and John Mathson, each with one goal.

The Tourneys Beckon Tennis Teams

Boys' Team

The Winchester High boys tennis regained its share of the Middlesex League lead with a remarkable 3-2 decision over the Minutemen of Lexington last Wednesday in Lexington.

The Sachems won despite the absence of second singles player Joe Palumbo, who was out with a 24-hour virus. Faced with this key loss in their lineup, the Sachems reached deep into their reserves and came out with a winner in JV substitute Scott Herlihy.

Shawn Herlihy's younger brother was a key factor in Winchester's victory, defeating opponent Andy Miller in straight sets, 6-1, 6-4. In the meantime, Lexington's Radek Koczek beat brother Shawn 6-2, 6-1.

Gavin Barton, playing at Palumbo's number-two position, gave Minuteman Lubos Koczek a better fight than Palumbo by beating Koczek 7-6 in the first set. Koczek came back, however, to win the final two sets 6-0, 6-3.

The first doubles duo of Hank Lynch and Chris Terpko defeated Neil Splaine and Andy Gower 6-2 in the first set, then held on once again to snatch the second-set tiebreaker 7-6 (7-2).

In second doubles, revenge came for Sachems Eliot Foley and Chris Aronson against Lexington's Ted Snodgrass and Steve Glick.

Foley and Aronson dropped the first set 4-6 before coming back to clinch successive, steely-nerved tiebreakers 7-6 (7-3), 7-6 (7-1).

Wednesday's match allowed Aronson to vindicate himself for his game losing shot in his last Lexington match. This time, Aronson made the winning shot past Glick.

Winchester's only loss of the season came in a 3-2 decision against Lexington in the first meeting of the teams this spring.

Girls' Team

The Sachemettes finished up another sterling girls tennis season, sweeping Reading High 5-0 and finishing the regular season at 13-0.

Karen McGill brought Winchester its first victory with a 6-0, 6-2 drubbing of Sarah Roberts at first singles. At second singles, sister Linda McCall won 6-0, 6-1 over Rockette Gail Grassella, while third singles (Please See TENNIS - Page 16)

Softball Team Bows To Reading

The girls softball team lost 14-6 to a tough Reading High last Wednesday in Reading.

Sophomore pitcher Katie Quinn held the Sachemettes to just four hits, while the Reading bats rang true through the afternoon rain.

Rockettes Kim O'Riordan (two hits, four RBIs) and Cathy Tucker (two hits, two RBIs) each homered for Reading.

Sachemette Sarah Porell answered as best as she could with two hits and four RBIs of her own, but Winchester's bats were kept quiet for most of the evening.

Winchester is now 4-10 and in seventh place in the Middlesex League.

Baseball/Softball Camp Planned By DiSarcina

Joe DiSarcina, Somerville High's successful baseball coach, will hold a baseball/softball camp this summer in Winchester. The Middlesex Baseball/Softball Camp will run in two sessions, July 28 to Aug. 1, and Aug. 4 to Aug. 8.

Baseball players age 15 and under and softball players age 16 and under may attend either one or both sessions.

The camp will provide individual attention, position play and daily drills to develop the fundamental skills of hitting, throwing, catching and running. Specialized pitching instruction will also be offered.

Campers will enjoy the expertise of a top flight staff, DiSarcina said. Camp director DiSarcina was captain of Somerville's state championship team in 1965, a year in which he was also an All-Scholastic shortstop and player of the year.

At the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, he was captain and MVP of a talented 1969 team. UMass participated in the College World Series in Nebraska that year.

DiSarcina played in the San Diego Padres minor league chain before coming home to coach at Somerville High, where his teams have qualified for the state tournament four times.

In 1979, DiSarcina was named by the Boston Globe as the division I high school baseball coach of the year.

Joining DiSarcina is former major league player John Doherty. Doherty, an All-American at Reading High School and infielder with the California Angels, is a guest hitting instructor.

Other staff includes Winchester High School baseball coach Bill Chase, softball coach Jim Maconochie, and other area mentors.

For more information, contact Middlesex Camp director Joe DiSarcina at 721-2361, or write Middlesex Baseball/Softball Camp, c/o Joe DiSarcina, 3 Wagon Wheel rd., Winchester 01890.

Colonial Travel Can Customize A Vacation To Fit Your Wants And Needs.

Whether your vacation takes you across the state, across the country, or around the world, whether your needs are more toward the economy vacation, or money is no object, or whether you prefer the excitement of the fast lane or serenity of seclusion, Colonial Travel, located at 564 Main St., Winchester, can customize a vacation to fit your wants and needs.

With more than 27 years of experience as travel agents between them, Colonial's co-owners Elaine Mahoney and Tony Sampson have tailored vacations for thousands of satisfied clients to all corners of the globe.

"What many people don't realize is travel agents don't charge a service charge," explains Elaine. "Our fee does not affect the price our client pays."

Instead, booking through a travel agent is not only easier, but it can also be cheaper. With access to plane fares, hotel rates, and car rental fees at their fingertips on computer, Tony and Elaine can assure you the best rates and can book a reservation simultaneously.

In addition to helping you get the best rates, Colonial can make your vacation more pleasant by meeting your needs with corresponding accommodations ranging from standard to deluxe or superior.

"Some people prefer to travel alone, while others want the security of a group," explains Elaine. "Some travelers want a more free schedule while others prefer a guided tour. In any case we will make the arrangements to fit their needs."

Some other benefits of booking through travel agents include their knowledge of special discounts, their awareness of the atmosphere, weather conditions and economic state of the place you are traveling to, and their ability to assist you in planning and getting ready for your vacation.

Tony and Elaine can assist you with passport needs, rate of exchange, and will make you aware of any other necessary information to make your trip easier and more enjoyable.

Has Colonial Travel seen any effects on European bookings as a result of the situation abroad?

"Bookings to Europe are down," explains Elaine, "but that has led to a noticeable increase in bookings to places like Hawaii, the Caribbean, Bermuda, cruises, and U.S. destinations."

In any event people are vacationing and the smart ones are letting Colonial Travel find them the vacation they desire at the price they want to pay.

To have Colonial Travel arrange and fit your vacation to your needs, call Tony or Elaine at 729-4700 or visit their office at 564 Main St., Winchester. ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

'Two By Fours' Opens Cloister Garden Series

Opening its 17th season Thursday, June 12, the Cloister Garden Concert Series will present "The Two By Fours" in a program of male choral music ranging from Bach to Bacharach, at the Parish of the Epiphany, 70 Church st.

The popular group of 12 men, founded by Thomas Worthen of 57 Oxford st., is well known for its rich blend of voices in sophisticated harmony and rhythm.

The concert series will, as usual, bring to Winchester four Thursday evenings of musical pleasure. Dates for the concerts are June 12, June 26, July 10 and July 24, all at 8:30 p.m. In addition to "The Two by Fours," the series includes "Filagree Deep," who perform "contemporary folk music with a twist," "The Opera Express," and the "Back Bay Brass Quintet."

All concerts are given out of doors in the cloister garden, but in case of inclement weather they are held in Epiphany's Hadley Hall.

Tickets for the public concerts are $4 for adults and $3 for students under 21. Four tickets may be purchased for $15 by adults and $10 by students.

Sponsors are invited to purchase eight tickets for $38 to be used at any of the four concerts. Proceeds are used to augment the parish's musical program.

"The Two By Fours," whose membership includes business and professional men from eastern Massachusetts and southern New Hampshire, sing a capella. Their repertoire includes nostalgic hits of the '40s and '50s as well as modern melodies.

Jack Gilbert, their rehearsal accompanist, formerly played with Tommy Dorsey and will be featured during the June 12 program.

The group has given concerts all across the country, including Washington's Kennedy Center.

Rosenberger Recital Set

Seth Rosenberger of 49 Cabot St. will present a piano recital at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, June 3, in Steinert Hall, 162 Boylston St., Boston. The public is invited.

The program will include works by Bach, Beethoven, Chopin and Da-Oz. Rosenberger formerly studied piano with Carol Fieleke of Winchester, theory and composition with

Winchester Players Plan Annual Meeting, Reading

Winchester theater-goers, particularly those interested in working both onstage and backstage with the Winchester Players, are invited to meet the Players at the open annual meeting at 7:30 p.m., Thursday, June 5, in Metcalf Hall at the Unitarian Church, 478 Main st.

The meeting will feature a staged reading of "Don Juan in Hell," the play-within-a-play act of George Bernard Shaw's masterpiece "Man and Superman."

Four Players' actors will be reading. David Goldstein, director of "The Doctor in Spite of Himself" and "Arms and the Man," as well as a fine actor, will read the devil.

Lee Barton, last seen on the Winchester stage as Dr. Rank in "A Doll's House," and also the dashing Captain Bluntschli of "Arms and the Man," is the cynical Don Juan.

Karen Barton, director of "A Doll's House" and Jacqueline in "The Doctor in Spite of Himself," is Dona Ana, and Robert Hallisey, well-known to Winchester audiences for his roles in "The Doctor in Spite of Himself," "What the Butler Saw," and as El Gallo in "The Fantasticks," is the commander.

The meeting will also have a short business meeting, with election of officers and a treasurer's report. Refreshments will be served.

The Players hope to see many new and old friends at the annual meeting.

Elementary Students Show Their Advanced Projects

Lauren Blanchard delivers a report on animal trapping at Lynch School. She was one of six elementary school students who gave final presentations.

Six elementary school students gave final presentations of their advanced projects recently at the Winchester Public Schools (W.P.S.) Professional Development Center. They were Lauren Blanchard, Kirk Minihane, Jonathan Simeone, Alecia Barry, Rose McCaul and Amy Morse.

sessional Development Center. They were Lauren Blanchard, Kirk Minihane, Jonathan Simeone, Alecia Barry, Rose McCaul and Amy Morse.

The Advanced Projects Program, supervised by Dr. David Ackerman, is designed to support students who want to do in-depth work in areas in which they have a strong interest or talent.

The student-initiated projects fall outside the scope of the normal school curriculum. Students in the program need to have a high level of self-motivation and be willing to work, for the most part, independently.

The participants received the support and encouragement of their school librarians: Gerry Driscoll of Vinson-Owen and Peggy Hallisey of Lynch. Mary Vitka was in charge of mentor recruitment.

Amy Morse, a fifth grade student at Lynch School, studied ballet and discussed two posters she made as a result of her studies. Her mentor was Nancy Uppel of W.P.S. Computer Services Dept. Their future plans include a trip to a rehearsal of the Boston Ballet.

Animal trapping was the subject of a project by Lauren Blanchard, a sixth grade student at Vinson-Owen. Suzanne McGee, principal of Vinson-Owen, recruited a Maine trapper for Lauren to interview by telephone. He plans to come to this area to hunt turtles when the weather becomes warmer.

Lauren hopes he will speak to her fellow students then about his occupation. Lauren displayed an animal trap she found in the woods near her home.

Kirk Minihane and Jonathan Simeone, fifth grade students at Vinson-Owen, did a joint project on Law. Mr. Simeone, Jonathan's father, served as their mentor. The boys visited Boston Municipal Court. As part of their presentation, they put on a skit of an actual case they had seen that day.

Children's authors was the subject of Rose McCaul's a fifth grader at Lynch, advanced project. She visited Muraco School to hear Lois Lowry speak and traveled to Arlington to visit with Jean Fritz. She conducted an in-depth interview with Jane Sutton, a children's author living in Lexington.

Alecia Barry, a fifth grade student at Lynch, interviewed Steven Lewis of the Federal Park Services about the Statue of Liberty. She traveled to New York to take on-location photos and combined these with historical pictures she found in books to produce her slide show on the Statue of Liberty.

All five projects were interesting and well-researched. At the conclusion of their presentations, the students answered questions from the audience. The students were presented with certificates noting their achievement. Following this, refreshments were served by Ambrose librarian, Mary Brown.

School Land Released To Town Meeting

Rose Ann Galloway, new president of the Community Schools Association (CSA), introduced new members of the board: Liz Nollson, vice president; Loretta Verrecchia, secretary; Joanne Brady, treasurer; coordinator of CSA sponsored enrichment, Susan Haskell, co-coordinator; Chris Murphy, publicity; Carol Beals, legislative consultant; Susan McConaghe, library; Ellen Browning, social; Consuelia O'Connell Donahue, special needs; Judy Manzo, and high school liaison, student Ann Moore.

The board did not attempt to elect a chairman, due to the absence of member Steven Powers.

Superintendent Charles Mitsakos reported 16 requests for open enrollment in five elementary schools. Mitsakos said they will have the placements by the end of the week.

Mitsakos said the lottery for the full-day kindergarten took place last week. Forty-five requests were received for the 21 possible openings.

The board appointed community representatives to the School Improvement Councils for 1986-87. Joan Richardson will represent the high school and former school committee member Catherine Alexander will represent McCall Junior High School. Mitsakos commended and congratulated.

Linda Cicciariello and Victoria Loeb, Latin teachers at Winchester High School, for administering the national Latin exam. Winchester students received 53 awards.

Helen Ryan for her work as a part-time "English as a second language" specialist.

Cynthia Papoulas for her work as the director of Winchester Intervention Program.

Maureen Cook and Sally Dempsey for their work with Winchester High School sailing club. The club captured second place in a national high school championship regatta.

Kay Currier, Jane Sughrue, John Kelly and Mary Mirka, all math teachers in Winchester schools, for successes with students in competitions.

Condos Survive Hurdle your house but as men we're going to divide it," Johnian said.

Charles Tseckares responded, calling the Baptists' proposal "terribly creative" and saying he admired the congregation.

Mary Pronski opposed the plan, saying parking shortages would affect the neighborhood. The church's lot is now used by telephone company employees, with the church's permission at no charge, but they would have to park elsewhere if the lot is used for condominiums.

Pronski also said construction projects are planned in the near future at the Jenks Senior Center, the town hall and the church, putting construction crews on three of five corners at once.

Others noted, however, that the Wadleigh School lot on the southeast corner is still vacant and others suggested the church should not be penalized for having permitted phone company employees to use its parking lot at no charge.

The town approved re-zoning a portion of the church building by a 120-13 margin.

Sopper Says Recreation Threatens Water Supply

Even more gingerly, Sopper suggested other "recreational" uses of the Fells might pose a threat to Winchester water.

"I'm only going to say this once. There's all kinds of sexual activity going on up there, all kinds, and they may go swimming in our reservoirs afterward," he said.

Wade Welch, chairman of the selectmen, said selectmen "ought to identify it as a problem. He suggested the police, public works and water departments get together to consider alternatives but that any other action be delayed until after June 11.

A meeting among Sopper, town manager Chad Maurer and MDC commissioner William Geary has been scheduled at 2:15 p.m. Wednesday, June 11, at the MDC office in Boston.

Earlier in Tuesday's meeting, State Rep. Sherman "Whip" Saltmarsh said he was not sure whether the MDC budget for the upcoming fiscal year contained funds specifically for new interpretive services at Middlesex Fells.

Saltmarsh offered to "bring out someone from the MDC" to a selectmen's meeting, however, and said he will check to see if the Fells are specifically mentioned in the MDC budget, now being considered by the State Senate.

"Many dollars are approved without specifically saying how they will be used," Saltmarsh said.

Sopper asked what could be done if the money is indeed for more public access to the Fells.

"We can meet with those who are going to expend those monies," Saltmarsh said.

Town Rejects Teacher Minimum

salary while one sets the minimum. "If the legislature changes the figures in one section, the town would be bound to pay that salary, whether or not state funds are provided," Randall said.

Clarence Borggaard opposed the minimum. "If it ain't broke, don't fix it," he said.

Mary Pronski endorsed the proposal, however. "We in Winchester have teachers and other town employees who can't even afford to live here," she said.

The measure lost by a wide margin on a voice vote.

In other action during Thursday's eighth session of the town meeting: Voters approved $5,500 to fund the historical commission for the next five years. Most of the money will be used to hire a consultant.

A request for $4,500 for the Central Middlesex Association for Retarded Citizens was approved unanimously.

The amount represents $500 for each of nine retarded Winchester citizens who use the training program. Many participants eventually find jobs in private industry, said State Rep. Sherman "Whip" Saltmarsh.

Accepted $5,470 for the John C. Willis Trust Fund, to be used for public library purchases. Alice Mirak, chairman of the board of trustees, said Willis was a trustee in 1851-1859 and the original proponent of the junior library addition.

Acting on a positive recommendation from the finance committee, the town meeting approved acceptance of $227,656 in state funding for teachers' professional development grants.

Put Ice Festival On Your "Must See" List

REVIEW

Should Dorothy Hamill's Festival On Ice grace the Hub with a return visit to the Wang Center for the Performing Arts next season, put it on your "must see" list.

This lavish ice-skating spectacular, a blend of Broadway extravaganzas and ice show, features not only the talented Miss Hamill but also two-time World Pair champion skaters, Tai Babilonia and Randy Gardner, sensational medalist Charlie Tickner, and a stellar company of twenty. Add the breath-taking choreography by Sarah Kawahara, the flashing blades of unique special effects, and a great sound track that spans the musical scope of the last half-century—from Rhapsody In Blue to Boogie Woogie Bugle Boy, from On Broadway to Girls Just Wanna Have Fun—and you have something for everyone.

The show opens with skaters representing sailboats in the mist and a city skyline as a backdrop. Hamill opens to the music of Somewhere, followed by the ensemble in Moodindigo, and Babilonia and Gardner in Fanfare and joined by the chorus for a reprise of Somewhere. Gardner is outstanding in this segment.

After Hamill greets the audience, the company moves into "Broadway," which starts as a backstage rehearsal. Tunes featured are On Broadway, 42nd Street, Me and My Shadow, and One.

Puppeteer Brad Cummings presents Comedy for a change of pace, featuring Andy and friends, before Hamill and the female chorus break into the novelty rock number, Girls Just Wanna Have Fun, then segue into Jump, featuring a jump rope routine and exciting black lighting.

The ensemble renders Boogie Woogie Bugle Boy to open the second act, followed by the infectious Going to the Chapel by Babilonia and Gardner, a simply mesmerizing routine by Tickner in Mister Sandman (his devil-may-care approach is unbelievably exciting). In the Mood with Hamill soloing, and Sing, Sing, Sing by the ensemble. The segment closes with A Tribute To Ballet, a crowd-pleasing comedy routine by Hamill and the girls.

At The Movies features Tichner and the girls in Just a Gigolo (another breath-taking show-stopper... his high leaps defy imagination). Hamill comes front and center once more to chat with the enraptured audience before the finale, Ain't No Mountain High Enough, by the entire company.

Kudos to the entire artistic and technical personnel. The production is solidly re-enforced by the effective use of the scrim, lighting projections, disco lighting and, in general, a kaleidoscope of color, and saute costumes bedecked with glitter, sparkle and bangles.

So smooth is the dance that you forget that the performers are on skates! The entire cast is bedazzling—the spins, twirls, leaps, lifts, and acrobatics are electric! As an art form, Festival On Ice has come a long long way.

Broader Based Summer Fare Announced

With its first decade of theatrical productions behind it, the American Stage Festival (ASF) raises the curtain on a whole new image for its 1986 season. Artistic Director Larry Carpenter noted that the Milford summer theater is planning a theatrical season to appeal to a broader based audience.

"We're doing some bigger, riskier productions than we have previously attempted," claimed Carpenter. "The June 11th opening of The Pirates of Penzance is a good example. It's a real musical extravaganza in the spirit of the smash Broadway production that starred Linda Ronstadt. It's Gilbert and Sullivan, of course, but in a contemporary pop, rock mounting."

Pirates... which will run June 11 through June 28, will be followed by an award-winning Neil Simon comedy currently playing on Broadway, opening July 2 and continuing through July 19.

"A contractual clause prohibits us from disclosing the name of the show just now," Carpenter explains, "but we will be doing one of the first Off-Broadway productions in the Northeast and it will be under the direction of Martin Herzer, production supervisor of the current Broadway mounting."

Carpenter has adapted ASF's third offering, Charles Dickens' A Tale of Two Cities. The show, with a cast of 35, will be mounted in the tradition of Carpenter's annual holiday jewel, A Christmas Carol, at the Merrimack Repertory Theater in Lowell. Described as romantic, sprawling, vivid and heroic, A Tale of Two Cities will world-premiere on July 23 and run through Aug. 9.

In keeping with ASF's commitment to presenting new works by new authors, the season's fourth offering will be Rhymes With Evil, opening Aug. 13 and continuing through Aug. 30. Billed as an American thriller, and written by Charles R. Traeger, Carpenter describes the play as "psycho-esque, a fantasy in which the audience must pull apart the layers of illusion to find what is real and what is fantasy."

The final production is a hometown play that is returning to its roots after success in The Big Apple. It started out as Bandstand in 1978, when it was inspired by the historic bandstand on the Milford Oval before going on to New York to seek its fortune. It changed its name to Tintypes in the process. After receiving world-wide acclaim, it is returning home, a greatly polished and professional production.

Carpenter calls Tintypes, which will play Sept. 3 through Sept. 28, "a celebration of America's music and spirit in the three decades before World War I. It features all of the musical forms of its era — from ragtime to operetta to pop and blues."

This year ASF has expanded its regular season with each of the plays running a full three weeks.

Subscriptions are now available by calling the ASF. Contact David Charles Keeton at (603) 673-4005 or Ginni Spring at (603) 673-7515. For further information, write to the American Stage Festival, P.O. Box 225, Milford, N.H. 03055.

French Flavor At Goodspeed Opera House

Instead of heading for Paris this spring, vacationers are choosing the Goodspeed Opera House in East Haddam, Connecticut, where a season of vintage musicals with a French flavor is underway. Season tickets for Goodspeed's "French vacation" are still available for all three musicals.

Now playing on the Goodspeed stage, Irma La Douce is a thoroughly Parisian comedy of love. Set in the back streets and cafes of Montmartre, Irma La Douce has an accordion-accented score, ranging from the romantic ballads Our Language Of Love and The Bridge Of Caulaincourt to the wry humor of She's Got The Lot and the show-stopping dance celebration Dis-Donc.

After its smash success in the French capital in the late fifties, Irma played to sellout audiences in London before David Merrick brought it to Broadway in 1960. There it was an unqualified smash hit, playing 527 performances before going on tour.

From the haunting atmosphere of Montmartre, Goodspeed theatregoers will be transported to the sunny seaport of Marseilles with Fanny, beginning performances July 2. A tender and bittersweet tale of love and the lure of the sea, Fanny has a lyrical score including Never Too Late For Love, Why Be Afraid To Dance? and Be Kind To Your Parents.

The Goodspeed stage will explode with the energy and magic of circus life with Carnival!, beginning performances October 1. A charming tale of a circus touring the French provinces, Carnival! includes puppets, magicians, jugglers and clowns in a show for all ages. Love Makes The World Go Round, Beautiful Candy and Always, Always You highlight the score of this delightful show, voted Best Musical in 1961 by the New York Critics Circle.

Goodspeed's curtain times are Tuesday through Friday at 8 p.m.; Saturday at 5 and 9 p.m.; Sunday at 5 p.m. and a Wednesday matinee at 2:30 p.m. Ticket prices range from $14.50 to $23.50. For tickets call the Goodspeed Opera House Box Office, (203) 873-8668.

Dance Umbrella Hosts June Attractions

Anne Brown Allen, described by The Boston Globe as "Voluptuous...inspiring...one of the most distinctive performers in Boston," performs a concert of solos at 8 p.m. May 30 and 31, and at 3 p.m. on June 1, at the Joy of Movement Studio Theater, 536 Mass. ave., Cambridge. Tickets are $7.

As a member of the Danny Sloane Dance Company and the Dance Collective, Allen has been a special favorite of Boston dance audiences for years.

By Dann Kosow

Her presence has been compared to Alvin Ailey's superstars Judith Jamison and Donna Wood-Strong, exciting and self-possessed.

Allen will perform works by some of Boston's finest choreographers, Susan Rose, Ruth Benson Levin, Danny Sloan, Judith Chaffee and others.

Sharing the stage will be guest dancer/choreographer Susan Rose and keyboard artist/composer Evan Harlan.

On the wings of their sold-out performances this past winter, Eiko and Koma return to Boston with a world premiere multi-art performance, Eye Below (I Am Below), with previews at 8 p.m. June 11 and 12 (tickets $5) and regular performances at 8 p.m. June 13 and 14, and June 18 through 21 (tickets $7) at the Palace Road Theater, Longwood Ave., Boston.

These rare artists will explore the kinetic province of those who cannot fly through a conceptual fusion of movement, theater, music, light and film. Audience and performers alike are earthbound, and in this intimate installation, one will be able to experience the bonds which limit us all.

The set, designed by Clayton Campbell, places Eiko and Koma literally above the viewers.

The visual exhibit will include a striking film directed by the performers in collaboration with writer Irene Oppenheim, who produced a unique booklet to be distributed to the audience. The text, an accumulation of the thoughts and concerns of the artists, will further enhance the total performance experience.

Raised in Japan but imbued with western aesthetic concepts,

Eiko and Koma build a unique foundation which incorporates an Oriental awareness of physical nuance and time with our Western recognition of the individual creative art. Their work is brave and astonishing, and simply extraordinary.

Described as "Astonishing... a virtuoso performance by The New York Times, Suzushi and Suzusetsu Hanayagi appear (in co-sponsorship with the Japan Society) at 8 p.m., June 23, at N.E. Life Hall, 225 Clarendon St., Boston (tickets $15/$10).

Suzushi and Suzusetsu Hanayagi's concerts evoke a world of issues and emotions with a weighted concentration of virtuosic gesture. These two sisters present an evening of Japanese classical dance, both the esoteric, restrained jutu-mai style thrilling for its nuances and the broader Kabuki theatre.

In full traditional costume and make-up, their work is almost a meditation, a vulnerable opening of the spirit and intimate sharing. These international artists are the finest of Japan's classical dancers. Though firmly grounded in her native tradition, Suzushi has dynamically broadened her artistic sphere in two collaborative projects with the American Repertory Theatre. Boston audiences loved her Knee Plays choreography for Robert Wilson's Civil Wars and her noted contribution to Wilson's Alcestis.

The season concludes with the Boston premiere of Kazuo Ohno at 8 p.m. June 30 and July 1, at N.E. Life Hall (tickets $18/$12). The legendary 79-year-old founder of Japan's Buto dance movement will perform a combination of calculated Japanese mime and eclectic avant-garde theatre. Kazuo Ohno projects a gentle humane flamboyance and his dance is noted for its sublime beauty and transcendent spirit.

Pantomime Opens June 3

The Boston Shakespeare Company presents Derek Walcott's Pantomime, a sharply-humorous play that takes a satirical look at the Robinson Crusoe adventure. It opens June 3, at 8 p.m. at 52 St. Botolph St., Boston.

Scheduled for a four-week run, Pantomime is presented as part of the 1986 spring season by the Boston Shakespeare Company in the new downstairs theatre space.

Pantomime was produced by BBC Radio and London's Kesikdee Theatre in 1979 and first staged in Washington, D.C. in 1981.

Said one critic of Walcott: "He conveys not only the lushness of his native land, but its people and dialects, its poverty and passion, its delights and despair."

Pantomime will play June 3 through June 29, Tuesday through Friday at 8 p.m., Saturday at 3 p.m. and 8 p.m., Sunday at 3 p.m. and 7 p.m. Tickets range from $10.50 to $12.50. For tickets and information, phone 267-5600.

What To Do

Hot Wheels: 'C'n I Caren You Down The River...'

Careening on roller skates through the narrow cobblestoned streets of the North End is no easy task — particularly with private-eye Spenser in hot pursuit.

The Boston-based series Spenser For Hire featured this very scene — complete with one of the area's best skaters.

Boston, along with California and New York, is a hotbed of eight-wheel activity.

It is so "in" that every Woody Allen movie features at least one joke about it.

Baby boomers and others are discovering the sport as the pursuit of physical fitness sweeps the nation.

It is estimated that an hour of skating will burn off 350 calories.

"People have this belief that you can only skate when the sun's out. California is going to have more skaters that go up and down the beach in the sun looking pretty with a Walkman," says suburban skating expert Priscilla Fersch.

"Our bond out here is much stronger. There's a pride in being a New England skater."

Fersch, an Arlington resident, runs programs at Wheels, a skate rental and sales outfit, on Newbury St.

A strong proponent of year-round outdoor skating, she says "One of the problems with Americans is they usually exercise from April to September, and then they hibernate and eat and get fat."

Two options are available — outdoor street skating, and skating indoors in a rink.

Each offers its own benefits and drawbacks.

The wheels for outdoor skates are larger and softer for more "give" over rough terrain. On the downside, there are such hazards as traffic, and potential tumbles leading to bruises and scratches.

Indoor rinks offer a light show, sound system, disc jockey and a smooth floor for faster skating.

Waltham's Wallex is among the suburban rinks available, but the more accomplished eight-wheelers seem to prefer Boston's nightclub-by Spinoff.

"They're wild but I envy them because they're fantastic skaters," says Karen D'Ambrose of Belmont.

"If you fall, some of them will stop to help," adds her friend, Allison Seavey of Cambridge.

Spinoff's well-maintained hardwood floor and sound and light system attract Greater Boston's best skaters, particularly on 18-years-old-and-over nights. The preferred choice of music is disco, although top 40 rock prevails at some sessions.

The rink, located near Fenway Park, also offers a video system — unfortunately not always in use — as well as the standard snack bar and video games area.

"My favorite reason for going there is to listen to all the current dance music and listen to it loud," says Arlington resident Jim Byron.

Aside from the exercise, many skaters enjoy the social aspects of the sport.

As Jim Byron points out, "There's an atmosphere that allows for a lot of flirtation, but it's polite, not aggressive. You can certainly meet people if you want to."

Ron Brenn, who manages a rink in Hudson with his wife Kathy, describes skating as a healthy alternative to the drinking scene.

"People can spend four hours here each week, not get crocked, maybe have one on the way home, and feel fine in the morning," he says.

One occasionally-heard criticism is that the crowd at Spinoff tends toward cliquishness.

"There is not a lot of mingling. People come and go with their own circle of friends. These small circles have become familiar to each other at Spinoff and a number of other places like the Esplanade," says Byron.

Boston's rolling elite fleet prefer to do their outdoor roller boogying at Boston Common or the Hatch Shell.

Another popular site is Memorial Drive in Cambridge which is closed to traffic from late April through October on Sundays.

With portable radios cranking, the pros perform their tricks and polished dance routines in pairs and chorus lines, generally surrounded by a crowd of awed, non-skating spectators.

The leapers — men who clear one or two large MDC trash barrels in a rolling jump — are also crowd pleasers. The MDC is less than enthusiastic about the practice, however.

For the novice or would-be skater, there is no need to feel intimidated by the smooth moves of the experts.

Horribly designed strap-on skates with metal wheels transformed many a child's driveway into a rink.

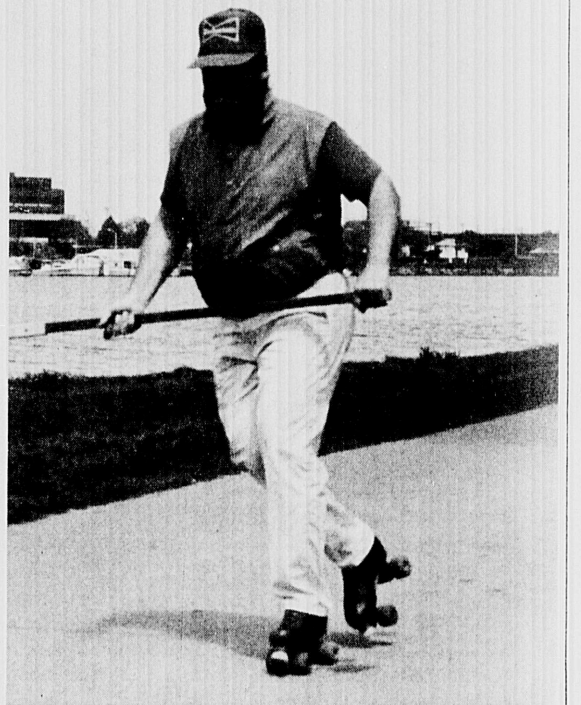

Greater Boston yuppies may recall skating in trios to organ music as 16-year-olds at the Wallex.

Anyone can skate in the privacy of their own driveway or street and not worry about falling and looking foolish.

"It's an effort to have to go down to the Nautilus Club. It's an effort to have to go to the roller skating rink."

"It's not an effort if you have them [skates] right at home and you can throw them on and go outside," says Fersch.

Karen D'Ambrose, for instance, learned to skate in Belmont in her neighborhood using her 14-year-old brother's skates.

Road hazards can snare the unwary street skater, so protection, such as kneepads or elbow pads, is often a good idea, along with lessons from experienced skaters.

Bricks, cobblestones, cracked pavement and sand lurk underfoot. Adeptness at negotiating curbs takes practice, and cars must be avoided.

Then, of course, there are the massive hills that dot the landscape of the northwestern suburbs.

"My philosophy is you only go as fast as your ability to stop," says Fersch. "From stopping, you develop into going backwards and doing all the things that you see people do that you want to do."

Roller skating can be combined with other activities for added fun. Hockey players don't need ice — wheels work just as well.

One recent innovation is skating with the four wheels set up in a straight line rather than two pairs. The result is very similar to ice skating with a single blade or to skiing. Indeed, many skiers practice using these with ski poles.

Skating through parks and areas such as the banks of the Charles also gives people the chance to observe wildlife.

There are practical aspects to skating as well.

"Number one, it's good exercise," says Fersch. "I can eat whatever I want as long as I roller skate."

"Two, it's transportation. It gets me around the city. I'd be crazy to drive. I save so much time. If I come in from a suburb about 12 miles away it would take 20 minutes or 30 minutes by car if I came down Mass. ave. It takes me about the same time on roller skates, and I'm not running any races.

"Roller skating is a fascination," she added. "Most of the problem comes from these young, aggressive drivers."

"Shopowners, people at bus stops — they love it because it changes their lives. They're doing the same thing — opening up their store and blah, blah and very happy in those worlds, somehow a roller skater changes somebody's life and it's fun to be able to be a part of that elite group."

Cherry Coke has returned so, who knows, can roller skating car hops be far behind?

Skaters take to the streets as the weather improves. The booming sport offers lots of benefits, say proponents, especially a pleasant way to become physically fit and meet people.

What About Art?

By Meredith Fife Day

Richard Jacobs' painting, Insomnia Still-Life, is among those on display through June 1 at Newton Arts Center.

'Three Painters' Compels

Aggressive painting, raw color, heavy-handed drawing, and enigmatic subject matter give the paintings currently on exhibit at Newton Arts Center a distinctly contemporary look, and certainly qualify them to be grouped under the ever-broadening Neo-Expressionist label.

The exhibit, Three Painters: Recent Images, continues through June 1.

Tim Harney, Richard Jacobs and Greg Kitterle all have a genuine affinity for paint and appear unafraid to let it vie with their imagery to become the subject matter of the works.

Of the three, only Harney commits himself to his imagery and gives it the upper hand in the contest with paint. Color, more than the physical handling of paint gives his works their painterly and expressionist attitude.

Harney's best works are two over-sized portraits that seem paired not only by their similar composition and color, but by their titles: Green Shirt and Woman With Blue Blouse.

Both are closely cropped heads tightly compressed against a red ground. Both expressions are tepidly detached, as are the large abbreviated eyes, belying the fast and fluid brush marks and the vivid green and yellow flesh.

The tension between the "heat" of the paintings and the "cool" of the expressions gives these works a sense of presence that seems less strived for than in some of Harney's other works.

Johnnie Bone Imagines The Funeral is a case in point.

The large painting containing a number of figures, all approximately the same size, is apparently a grand narrative attempt. But the individual components do not add up to the kind of whole that the artist achieves in his portraits, or in the smaller, delightfully tilted and eccentric The Musical Beneath John's Bed.

The viewer is left with a confrontation of too many fluorescent-lighted faces, too much dappled chaise and orange and hot pink paint.

Harney's color use is right at the edge: it is unnatural, to be sure, and can be expressive and jarring in a kind of feverish, disturbing way, or merely garish and shrill.

The subject and the hue distribution seem to affect the outcome. Harney's work falls on both sides of the edge.

Jacobs' color is very different from Harney's.

White light and pigment pervade his works, all abstract, giving both space around and definition to the bulging, mostly curved shapes that connect, merge, overlap and float across his paintings.

Sunlit salmon in the upper right corner of Groovology gives the small painting its own color and illumination, and a world is created that makes perfect sense yet refers to nothing that can be named or narrated by the viewer.

Fleshy-pink convex shapes and white and sky-blue spaces in Insomnia and Fatalism bring to mind DeKooning.

Here Jacobs' shapes are held in by heavy black lines and escape from them as well.

But the ease with which DeKooning's shapes flow across the surface and melt into one another is missing.

In the big, vertical Grotto, Jacobs' shapes give up their individual identities to a flowing, cascading rhythm of the whole. The physicality of paint and surface — there are collaged pieces of other canvases on the large rectangle — is the subject.

Rolled-on, brushed-on, collaged-on paint all contribute to the slow and lyrical flow downward and into the spatial surface layering.

Jacobs' curves and light are in contrast to the angular, dark paintings of Greg Kitterle.

Though both painters apply paint in a coarse, opaque and heavy manner, Jacobs' surfaces appear almost translucent compared with the dark, caked-on paint of Kitterle's brooding and mysterious works.

There is a muffled quality to these paintings exemplified most readily in the haunting Icon, in which the central figure is at once emerging from and being pulled back into the surface. She is like a shrouded Byzantine madonna; there are no features on her face, no definition to her hands. Golds turn ochre and edges sink deep into the paper.

Even the non-figurative Lazarus has a silent and concealed feeling, despite the warmth of its color and the expansiveness of its shapes.

Composed like a still life that is partially hidden by a large foreground shape or wall to the right, the palpable but nameless objects take on a metaphysical stillness in the strangely warm yellow-green and orange-yellow light that surrounds them.

Kitterle, like Jacobs and Harney, is a painter who takes risks with his subject and his means of expression, and emerges not always unscathed and not always consistent, but able to sustain the thrill and excitement and discovery of painting.

The Newton Arts Center, 61 Washington pk., concludes its 1985-86 Exhibition Series with this show, which may be viewed during gallery hours from 9 to 5 Monday through Friday and 2 to 4 Sunday. Call 964-3424.

Our Children Like Mother, Like Daughter

Q. We have a little girl 9 years old who insists on being the center of attention in almost everything she does. I (and you'll notice I said "I") have tried to steer her away from thinking so much about herself, but there are two problems in our home — this girl and my wife, who is exactly the same (and obviously older!).

I have tried for many years to get my wife to become less self-centered, but she hasn't changed a bit. Her "look at me, the world owes me a living" attitude is just as it was when we were married more than 12 years ago.

Our daughter is just like that when she interrupts adult conversations or wants to share her thoughts and possessions (accompanied by a demanding flow of words on her part).

Do you think her obnoxious behavior is genetic? Can anything be done about it?

Apparently your wife isn't disturbed at all by your daughter's behavior, so you really do have several problems on your hands. I am not a marriage counselor, but it is generally accepted that couples who get married with the idea in mind of changing their partners are in for a lot of frustration. That may represent your situation with your wife.

However, your daughter is young enough for some personality changes to occur. "Rewards" to her when she does not interfere or put on her showmanship act may be helpful. Such recognition could be just a compliment or even a smile of approval, but only if she deserves it.

You, as a model of modesty, may also be effective in this matter without any overt or even implied criticism of your wife. Occasionally a reprimand or depriving your girl of something she enjoys (not a necessity) may be appropriate, but obviously not in front of others or so repetitive that it results in nagging.

It would, of course, be helpful if your wife were supportive of your efforts; it appears that it would be a difficult step for her to take. You might suggest it, but not if you feel it will result in a confrontation between the two of you.

Good luck, and let me hear from you again. I'm concerned too.

What To Visit

Good Old Days Come To Life

This spring, Trailside visitors share in the experiences of the good old days. During a Homespun Crafts weekend, May 31 and June 1, families can discover the colonial history of the Blue Hills. Children and adults may practice spinning wool with a simple drop spindle or collect wild plants and extract colors in natural dyes. Visitors may stitch a Blue Hills' quilt with springtime scenes. Candle-dipping, weaving and other colonial crafts will be featured, together with living history skits, slide shows and other activities.

On May 31, 1 to 3 p.m., Trailside presents an old-time Sheep Shearing. Kevin Ford and Carol Markarian shear Corriedale sheep by hand. Visitors can see the wool taken off the sheep in a single piece. The pungent aroma of wool and lanolin is unforgettable. There will also be a demonstration of hand-spinning with drop spindle and wheel. (Since damp sheep cannot be sheared, rain may cancel the event). On June 1, Anne Forbes, long-time Milton resident, demonstrates her skill at the spinning wheel. Visitors will see unique colors of her naturally dyed yarns and handmade garments.

Fees for Homespun Crafts and Sheep Shearing are only $1 for adults and 50 cents for children. Some crafts may require an additional materials fee.

A final excursion into the past is Basketry for Beginners, a two-part workshop June 1 and 8 from 1 to 3:30 p.m. Experienced basketweavers Sandra Martin and Joyce Morley will help each participant make a heart shaped basket and a round-bottom berry basket. Baskets are made of white ash splints and can be dyed with black walnut. The course requires preregistration, and the fee is $22.00 per session or $40.00 per course.

For more details, call Trailside at 333-0690. Trailside is located off route 93, exit 2B (formerly exit 64N off route 128). There is ample free parking.

Summer Pastimes Enjoy New Display

Codman House, an historic house museum in Lincoln, opens to the public June 1 with a special display of flowers, photographs, and memorabilia entitled Summer Pastimes: Scenes From A Country House.

Photographs of the Codman family at the turn of the century enjoying leisure time activities will be displayed in each room of the house with some of their personal possessions not usually on view.

The scenes in each room will be further enhanced with floral arrangements created by the Lincoln Garden Club. One of the scenes will recreate the nursery with photographs of the five Codman children displayed with their actual games, books, dolls and wardrobes, a doll carriage, blocks, and other turn-of-the-century toys.

In the drawing room, a photograph of Alice Codman and her friends dressed in Elizabethan costume will be displayed with the gown, hat, and accessories Alice wore. Other scenes will include preparations for a motoring trip, a picnic complete with wicker hamper, and an afternoon of lawn tennis.

Codman House, a property of the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities (SPNEA), was built c. 1735. A house of almost continuous family ownership and occupancy for over two hundred years, it has been "preserved and maintained as a specimen of a New England country estate" according to the family's wishes. The house and its collections of furniture, paintings, china, books, and personal possessions remain as the family left them.

Ogden Codman, Jr., well-known decorator/architect, was one of the last family members to live in the house and decorate the rooms as they appear today. Architecturally, the house preserves a careful blend of Georgian, Federal, Victorian, and Classical Revival styles. The parklike grounds include varied and unusual plantings as well as a formal garden.

Codman House is open to the public June 1 thru October 15 (closed July 4th). Wednesday thru Sunday, 12:50 p.m., tours on the hour. Admission is $2.50 for adults, $1.25 for children under 12, free to members. Afternoon Tea is available by reservation for groups of ten or more people. The Codman Carriage House is available for meetings and social functions.

Special events at Codman House this year include an Antique Vehicle Meet on July 20, and the fourth annual "Artisans' Fair of Traditional Crafts" on September 7. It is located on Codman rd. between routes 117 and 126. For further information, call 259-8843.

What's Free Advice And Ideas For Crafters

Macrame how-tos

Have you wondered what happened to all the macrame designers of the '60s and '70s? Do you wish that someone would come up with fast and easy projects for today's knot-tying crafters? Perhaps the Knot House can help you.

These illustrated instructions for two colorful key rings are far from knotty—in fact, they are a snap to follow. Beginners can learn to macrame easily with these great 3-by-5-inch instruction pamphlets. If you already know how to knot, you can finish each design in an hour. Diagrams teach the different knots you'll use, and a large plastic needle comes with the instructions to help you add finishing touches.

You'll receive instructions to make a car with button headlights and a little house with chimney, shutters and flowers. The sheets show you how to knot your creations right onto the key rings. These nifty designs should help you identify your car keys quickly.

Directions: Send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Ask For: Car and house key ring sheets.

Mail To: Knot House Industries, P.O. Box 296, Department FB, Rowlett, TX 75088.

Spring Decor

These three freebie patterns will help you celebrate St. Patrick's Day and Easter in fine style.

Two patterns feature graphs for counted cross-stitch projects designed to fit in 2½-inch circular frames or to use for sachets. One chart pictures a shamrock design with 1986 printed in the corner, and the other commemorates Easter 1986 with a cross and crown.

Teachers and Brownie troop leaders will love the third part of this offer—a pattern for a bunny "seed cozy." Kids can make bunnies out of pretty paper, cotton balls and a little pink felt and then stuff each bunny with a seed packet. They can add their bunnies to Easter baskets or attach them to dowels and place them in potted plants. What a wonderful way to perk up an Easter gift for a shut-in!

Directions: Send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Ask For: Freebie Patterns.

Crochet Patterns

Are you tired of the hat and scarf you've been wearing all winter? Would you like to begin making your Christmas gifts early this year? If so, we have just the freebie for you.

The hat and scarf pattern offer from Crochet Critters will give you clear instructions for crocheting a matching hat and muffler. Be sure to look for the crochet abbreviations on the back side of the pattern sheet.

You'll need four 50-gram balls of 3-ply yarn in one color, two 50-gram balls of 3-ply yarn in second color, and a size H crochet hook. Two colors will give you thin bands of color like stripes.

What Do You Say?

Is June The Best Time Of Year For A Wedding?

By Linda Rauch

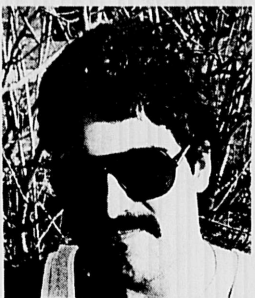

Melinda Solomon, 28
Drug Researcher
Belmont

Anna DiBiase, 23
Photographer and Importer
Winchester

I think people should get married in September because it's a nice time of the year. It makes you look forward to something after the summertime.

It also enhances the spiritual meaning of the Jewish holidays.

Dave Correia, 25
Post Office
Arlington

It's the beginning of the summer, so it could be uncomfortable because of the hot weather, but on the other hand, it would be good because it's the beginning of the summer.

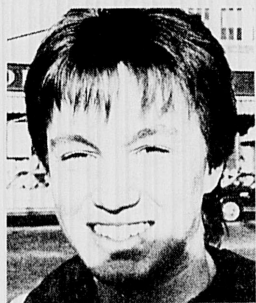

June is an unpredictable month.

September is better. It's cooler. It's winding down from the summer and it's when kids go back to school. It's a new beginning.

Will Trout, 18
Student
Belmont

Yes, I'd definitely say so. It's the first real month of warm weather and the beginning of the summer.

Glen Doherty, 15
Student
Winchester

I think that December is the best time to have a wedding.

The white snow will match with the dress.

White weddings are my favorite types of weddings.

Tossing Darts? Here's How To Pick A School

Throwing darts at a map of the United States won't do it. Going where mom or dad or big sister went may not do it either. Choosing a college is a special moment in the life of a student, a life-changing decision.

Making a wise selection, for now and the future, requires careful evaluation of information — information about the student's abilities and desires, possible schools and family finances.

Surprisingly, what the student wants from a college often is the least-considered issue when a parent or a counselor sets out to advise a student on his future. Instead, they think about the family and its goals, the high school the student attends and where its students have gone, the trendy degrees to pursue.

If a student doesn't take the time to take stock and evaluate his needs and abilities, it's likely no one will. So, a student should look carefully at his interests and areas of academic excellence. He can use this information to determine what goals are realistic and desirable for him. This evaluation will provide impressive ammunition for a potential actor in a debate with an accountant father who sees finance as the only course of study. It also can come in handy for a potential journalist in a discussion with a high school counselor who claims engineers will be the only people with jobs in the future. And the self-evaluation also will help a student review colleges to find ones that specialize, or at least have a good program, in the area of study that interests him.

If a student is having difficulty finding such colleges, people working in the field of interest may be able to recommend a good institution. If the student does not know an individual well enough to ask him, he can write a letter to the professional organization in that field requesting the names of the top five or 10 schools.

Other methods for finding out what schools are available: talking to people who have attended college and looking at college guides. The very best guides for most students are "Comparative Guide to American Colleges" and "Guide to Undergraduate Studies."

College fairs also are good avenues for evaluating institutions.

These events bring together recruiters and information from several colleges, making it easier for the student to compare.

If there are no college fairs in your area, consider video visits to the colleges in which you're interested. Craft College Previews has created a videotape series that focuses on 26 private and state schools with national reputations and selective admissions criteria. Each tape runs between 10 and 15 minutes and gives the viewer what feels like a brief visit to a college campus. Students see campus facilities, surrounding neighborhoods, professors, college officials and students. Information on application deadlines, tuition and fees also is included with each tape. For more information, call 800-443-4854.

Of course, nothing beats a real visit to the school. Some high schools will take a group of students to see a college. If a school doesn't offer such trips, a student can go on his own. Whenever possible, he should go on a weekday rather than a Saturday and take the time to stroll around the campus and sit in on some classes. The admissions office and counseling office will give potential students catalogs that outline potential courses, application deadlines and financial aid opportunities.

Financial aid can be one of the most important considerations in selecting a college if parents have set monetary limits on their child. Although the amount a family can afford to pay may seem to limit the schools a student can attend, a student may be able to attend a school with tuition and fees higher than the family can afford if he seeks — and obtains — federal moneys, loans, scholarships and work-study programs to supplement the family income. Of course, these funds take patience to obtain, but they greatly widen the choice of possible colleges.

Temporary Work Can Be First Career Step

For college graduates seeking that first job, the process of "pounding the pavement" can be disillusioning and anxiety-provoking. Some people simply don't know which career path to choose. Others may know what they want, but lack the basic business skills to get their foot in the door. One solution to both of these problems is temporary work.

"For the recent college graduate, temporary work can be equated with on-the-job-training toward an M.B.A.," according to William Olsten, chairman of the board of Olsten Services, a nationwide temporary help provider. "Where else can a recent college grad have the opportunity to try so many different career paths from the inside in such a relatively brief period of time?"

A college graduate who chooses "temping" as an opportunity to explore a variety of business fields has the chance to work for a wide range of companies: perhaps publishing one week, banking another and advertising or insurance during additional assignments.

"You also have a chance to buy time while you consider, 'Do I want to work for a small or large company?' or, 'Do I want to work for an oil company or a real estate firm?'" said Sam Sacco, executive vice president of the National Association of Temporary Services.

"Temping provides the opportunity to test the market without making a long-term commitment," Sacco said.

Once a graduate sees a business from the inside, he's often better able to decide on a career path.

From coast to coast, temporary services offer a wide range of choices for short- or long-term assignments. Olsten Services, for example, has nine divisions: office services, health-care services, office automation, accounting, light industrial, records management, legal support, marketing and semi-technical.

"Although the variation in pay rates throughout the country makes it impossible to cite specific figures, a general rule of thumb is that temps earn the same salary per hour as full-time employees, minus company benefits," Sacco said. Clients pay the temporary services; the services in turn pay the temporary workers an established hourly rate, he said.

If the idea of temping before leaping into a full-time position sounds appealing, the first step is to register with an established temporary job service.

"Reputable temporary service firms usually have a substantial number of clients. They will take the time to evaluate all of your capabilities and explain what they have to offer," Olsten said.

During the evaluation, a service representative will determine an applicant's skills, availability and areas of interest. Most firms try to send each temp assignments that match his skills and interests, although none can guarantee that every job assignment will be in the fields he wants, since assignments are dependent on client orders. At many firms, office equipment will be available for brushing up on skills. Others offer free word processing training to qualified temps.

According to Sacco, the first impression a temporary service firm makes should be all-important to an applicant. Does the staff seem professional? Does the service offer free training to improve skills? Does it offer a benefit plan — possibly a bonus plan — for people who work for a certain length of time? These factors can make a big difference in a person's satisfaction as a temp.

Olsten makes the following suggestions to recent grads thinking about temporary work:

— Before signing with a temporary service firm, plan to work for the firm for a reasonable length of time. Temporary services are not agencies, and they don't charge a placement fee. Understandably, they're not in business to invest time and money training you and then have you take a permanent job after only a few weeks.

— Keep your eyes open during every temporary job assignment and ask the kind of questions that can help you learn the ropes. Absorb what you can from supervisors and nurture the contacts you make.

— Learn the requirements for entry-level positions in the fields that interest you, and observe the routes that people take to fast-track jobs.

Co-Op Jobs Boost Hiring Chances

Want to increase your chances of being hired as a new college graduate? Wish you could evaluate career choices before investing two to four years of time and money in school?

A cooperative education curriculum provides both these benefits and a chance to earn while you learn. Launched in 1906 by Herman Schneider, co-op today is a popular work and study option offered by more than 1,000 learning institutions to more than 200,000 students. Originally used primarily for technical students, co-op now encompasses every discipline imaginable.

Essentially a format where students alternate work and study periods throughout the year on a 13-, 26- and 52-week rotation at four-year schools or a half-day work, half-day study schedule at community colleges, co-op education appears to have advantages for students, employers and learning institutions alike.

For students, the pluses include career planning and job search technique training early in their college careers. Students must compete for co-op placements and so learn early to write resumes and interviews skillfully.

Students also get to do "real world" testing of their chosen field long before their senior years. Some use co-op placements to sample a variety of careers. Others who find a satisfying niche use several placements to build skills and credentials in their preferred area.

Co-op students also find their chances of being hired far higher at graduation than peers without co-op experience.

"In good economic times, up to 80 percent of graduates are hired by former employers," said Dr. John Drongole, associate director for the National Commission for Cooperative Education. Employers find co-oping a more cost-effective recruiting method than cold recruiting grads from traditional academic programs. They get a chance to observe students working before making job offers.

Drongole said some employers won't recruit new grads unless they participated in a co-op program. Camp, Dresser & McKee, an environmental engineering firm, is one such company. A recent report indicated many senior executives of the firm are former co-op students. Drongole said employers believe co-op students are more mature and job ready upon graduation. They've adapted to the schedule and discipline of the working world.

According to Paul Pratt, co-op director at Northeastern University in Boston, "Our students also learn early they may have to relocate to pursue a certain career. For aerospace, they may have to move to Southern California, for instance. This awareness begins with a co-op placement that may be out of town." Northeastern, home of the largest co-op program in the United States, places its 14,000 students annually in 50 states and more than 10 foreign countries.

Co-op students also have greater access to many top graduate and professional schools that require a year or more of work experience for acceptance.

Of course, the earning benefits of co-op should not be overlooked. At $100 to $500 weekly, depending on one's field and placement, the earnings have paid up to 100 percent of a student's college expenses.

"Some students enjoy working so much or need the earnings such that they continue working part time even when back in school full time," Pratt said.

Homemakers re-entering school and people making mid-career changes also benefit from co-oping. Extensive job-search training and work experience provide current and, therefore, more marketable job skills. Polaroid Corp. even offers "reverse co-op" to employees it identifies as being in dead-end jobs with them. After learning new skills, these people work at Polaroid or an employer of their choice.

Although co-op normally involves year-round work or study involvement for five years to receive a four-year degree, Drongole explained that students can complete four-year degrees in four years if they choose. They simply take less than the normal number of co-op placements.

Although the approach allows less time for the fun and frivolity associated with college years, co-op grads indicate the numerous and generally higher-level job offers received are just compensation for their "sacrifice."

SELL HOME YOURSELF?

I'm sure you've heard it said: "Why should I sell my home through a REALTOR? I can sell it myself and save a lot of money." Right?..... Wrong!

This kind of thinking usually turns out to be financially unwise. The prospects will usually start by mentally deducting the commission and then start negotiating from there. On the average, a homeowner saves little or no money when he sells his/her own home. In fact, the opposite is often true. A lot of time is wasted showing homes to unqualified curiosity seekers and many possible sales are lost because the owner did not possess the experience to financially structure a viable sale in today's fast-changing money market.

As a private seller you're at a great disadvantage in the intricate areas of financing, negotiating and protecting yourself from all sorts of do-it-yourself pitfalls. You've got a strong investment in your home. It makes sense to list it with a REALTOR. He or she will sell without any disappointment and for the best price and in the shortest amount of time.

Louise Ruma-Ivers is the immediate past President of the Greater Boston Women's Council of Realtors, and a past Director of the Marketing Institute for the Greater Boston Real Estate Board. She is a member of the Arlington Historic Districts Committee.

Dot Stein is a Vice President of the Greater Boston Real Estate Board and a Director of its Multiple Listing Service. She was a long-time Arlington Town Meeting member, and a member of the Arlington School Committee.

Blackpowder Shooters

IF YOU think putting holes in paper is about as exciting as watching the traffic lights change, consider team shooting at breakable targets against a stopwatch. The 10th Massachusetts Battery is looking for more people. We are part of the North-South Skirmish Association, a 4,000 member competitive shooting organization where the shortest elapsed time wins. Units take their names in honor of actual Civil War regiments and members shoot original or reproduction weapons of the 1861-65 period. The 10th Battery competes with 58 cal. rifled muskets, caplock breechloading carbines, and an 1,800 lb. full size 3-inch rifled muzzleloading cannon. Yes, there's some paper punching too for those interested, but the real excitement is in the rapid fire team events where you shoot at flower pots, hanging water-filled coffee cups, ceramic tiles and 32 clay pigeons on a 3x8 cardboard backer at 50 yds. We welcome all shooters regardless of experience. Our team members live all over - from Maine to Rhode Island to New York - but more are from eastern Massachusetts. Call Ron Boryson at 1-835-3102 for further information. 11/3/TF

Prayer To The Holy Spirit

HOLY SPIRIT, thou who make me see everything and show me the way to reach my ideal. You who give me the divine gift to forgive and forget the wrong that is done to me and who are in all instances of my life with me. I, in this short dialogue, want to thank you for everything and confirm once more that I never want to be separated from you, no matter how great the material desires may be. I want to be with you and my loved ones in your perpetual glory. Thank you for your love towards me and my loved ones. Amen. A person may pray this for three consecutive days. After the third day your wish will be granted no matter how difficult it may be. Promise to publish this as soon as your favor has been granted. Mine was. C.M. 5/29/6/12/6

Audi Remanufactured Parts. Built Like New. Priced For Less.

Remanufactured parts are better than "rebuilt" or "reconditioned" parts. They may even be better than original parts since technical advances are often incorporated into the remanufacturing process.

Each unit — alternator, water pump or one of over 300 other parts — is disassembled, cleaned and tested to exacting standards. During reassembly, parts that do not meet these standards are replaced. Then the assembly is tested again to make sure it works as well as the original in every way.

Our remanufactured parts carry the same 6-month/6,000-mile limited warranty as new Audi Parts.* The only thing that isn't like new is the price.

*Ask for Autobahn or Audi Limited Warranty at our Parts Department.
